CHRISTMAS AT THE GRAPE FESTIVAL

A booth featuring Christmas decorations of all kinds, from figurines to wreaths, is only one offering at the Marin Grape Festival's giant bazaar. The festival and fair, a county tradition for 73 years, was to run until 5 p.m. today at the Marin Civic Center. The event is ponsored by the Sunny Hills Guilds' governing council. Sunny Hills, which provides treatment for adolescents with emotional and behavioral problems at facilities in San Anselmo and San Francisco, benefits from the annual function.

Red Commando Raid In Cambodia Capital

Attack Repulsed— Seen As Political Ploy

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — A force of 300 Communist commandos smashed into the center of Phnom Penh early today in the most spectacular attack on the city of the 2½-year war in Cambodia. Government forces drove off the attackers and moved from house to house to clean out the snipers who remained.

Military sources sait at least 70 government troops were killed when the Communist commandos blew up a half-mile long concrete bridge and then stormed an adjacent sports stadium and destroyed 5 armored personnel carriers. The high command said, however, that 23 Cambodian soldiers and their dependents were killed in the fighting, and 41 were wounded.

By nightfall, military spokesmen said, at least 59 of the Communists had been slain. Gunfire and mortars could be heard and at least two rockets were fired into the capital from firing sites on its outskirts.

Military authorities extended a curfew in the city by one hour to 9 p.m. Tense young soldiers armed with M16 rifles enforced the restriction to movement throughout the city.

Eight civilians reportedly died when heavy fighting broke out after the Communist charged out of the sports stadium in five captured personnel carriers which were later destroyed by government troops.

As one of the Communist commando units tried to move up Highway 5, another occupied the grounds of the nearby French Embassy but was driven out several hours later by government B40 fire which left the elegant latticed embassy facade heavily pockmarked.

Western political observers said the attack may have resulted from "the increased stridency of broadcasts" from deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk's government-in-exile.

"But the attack was obviously not geared to actually capturing Phnom Penh or they would have committed more men," said one diplomat-politican. "More likely they had a political objective and in that they were probably successful because this whole mess is going to seriously undermine the government's credibility."

The attack began about 2:30 a.m. when the Communists blew up the only bridge across the Tonle Sap River with bundles of explosives thrown from an ambulance.The commandos then swam the river with more explosives strapped to their backs.

They ran into government troops at a traffic circle and the Cambodian forces knocked two of the armored vehicles out of action. Later in the morning two others were reported destroyed while the last one was reported headed north up Highway 5 towards a military fuel dump on the river bank.

Hours after the attack, the thump of mortars and the rattle of gunfire reverberated through the city streets and government troops set up barricades at main city intersections.

Officials said the city's only airport also came under mortar fire. "About 30 or 40 rounds have landed, but the airport has not been closed," one official said, "The shelling seems to

CASE GOES TO PUC

By PAT ANGLE

A group of Stinson Beach residents, claiming the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. has failed to correct long-standing phone difficulties, has taken its case to the state Public Utilities Commission.

Annoyed by what they describe as an antiquated system, the residents will air their grievances before a PUC hearing officer at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Stinson Community Center.

Robert B. Dieter, a Stinson Beach television repair shop owner who is spearheading the phone protest, said he asked for the hearing because more than three years of pleading for better service has brought no major improvements.

The heart of the community's phone system is housed in two mobile trailers on Arenal Avenue. Because equipment in the trailers is not adequately protected from Stinson Beach's damp, salt air, Dieter said, it corrodes faster than it can be repaired.

This, together with the fact that the system is old and has never been modernized, causes many and varied problems with service. Among other things, residents in Stinson Beach complain of:

1. Frequent disruption of service to individual homes and businesses.

2. Jammed circuits making it impossible to call when many others in the area are telephoning.

3. The small number of phones in their toll-free dialing area, which includes only Bolinas, Mill Valley and Corte Madera. (Dieter pointed out that a person in San Francisco, paying a similar amount for service, can call hundreds of thousands of numbers without charge.)

4. The fact the system makes it necessary for an operator to break in on any long distance call to ask the number of the caller. Residents say this makes it easy for individuals to charge their long distance calls to anyone's number.

5. Frequent inability to reach the operator or information.

6. Frequent inability to reach numbers outside the immediate area, including emergency numbers such as the Point Reyes sheriff's substation.

Although one phone official denied it, Dieter claimed company officials have agreed that a new control office is needed in Stinson Beach to bring phone service close to the standard of service provided in more urba areas.

"We don't need a manned office out here, just an air-conditioned building to house the equipment and some more modern equipment," he said.

Jack E. Eddy, Pacific Telephone District manager for Marin, doesn't think a control office is necessary. He said, however, the company is currently rehabilitating switches that serve the area and the job is 50 per cent complete and should be finished by the end of this year.

"Once this is done, regular maintenance will normally keep the equipment up to proper operating levels," he said.

Dieter charged the telephone company has refused to make improvements because officials do not think the expenditure is warranted by the small number of subscribers in southern West Marin.

"Officials high up in the company have told me confidentially that each area office is required to make a profit or at least pay for itself," he said. "So the poor, less populated exchanges are penalized when it comes to money budgeted for these improvements."

"This is just not true," Eddy said in response to Dieter's allegation. "Our company has the responsibility of providing adequate phone service to all our subscribers and we are all dedicated to this end."

Nixon On Radio, Vows No Tax Hike If Reelected

THURMONT, Md. (UPI) — President Nixon said today he will not propose a tax increase during the next four years if he is re-elected, provided Congress does not pass "budget busting" spending programs.

"I am holding spending in a range that will not require a tax increase now or over the next four years," Nixon said in a paid political radio broadcast from his Maryland mountain retreat at Camp David.

"I will not make any promises that will require a tax increase now or in the future," he said.

But Nixon warned there was "a clear and present danger that excessive spending by Congress may cause a Congressional tax increase." He vowed to resist such spending.

He repeated his demand that Congress approve next week a $250 billion ceiling on spending during the fiscal year that began July 1. He said a vote for the ceiling was "a vote against higher taxes."

It was the first time Nixon personally pledged to prevent a tax increase for the entire four years of the new term he is seeking. Some administration spokesmen have made such promises but others have softened the pledge to a single year.

Nixon at a news conference Thursday had said only that he would propose no higher taxes in 1973.

The President said he could keep his promise "only if the Congress cooperates ... in holding down spending."

"I shall fight every attempt by the Congress to bust that (administration) budget," he said. "A big spending spree by the Congress will have just one result, a hangover of higher prices and higher taxes."

"My fellow Americans," Nixon said, "this government doe not need any more of your income. And it should not be allowed to take any more of your salaries and your wages in taxes. America needs not a tax increase but tax relief. The spending ceiling will get us started toward that goal."

The President renewed his pledge to provide property tax relief, starting with the elderly poor. But although he told newsmen Thursday he had found a "formula" which would permit such relief without an increase in other taxes, he did not spell out details of the plan in his broadcast.

165 Killed, 1,000 Hurt As Train Jumps Track

SALTILLO, Mexico (UPI)— At least 165 people were known dead and 1,007 injured today as rescue workers battled the twisted wreckage of a 22-car passenger train which jumped the rails on a slow speed curve while carrying pilgrims home from a religious festival. Authorities charged the engineer of the train had been drinking. (See picture, page 2)

"The scene is indescribable, terrible," said Ignacio Quiroz Martinez, a reporter for the Saltillo Sun. "The cars are piled on top of one another and you can hear the most awful screams for help."

A judicial investigation into the cause of the disaster alleged that two members of the train crew had been drinking and had allowed the train to travel the curve at twice the allowed speed when the accident occured late Thursday night.

"The engineer of the train, Melchor Sanchez, and the fireman, Ignacio Carrizales, who were the ones in charge of the front locomotive, were subjected to a blood test when they were taken to the hospital with slight injuries," Jenaro Gutierrez Davila, director of the Coahuila State Judicial Police, said.

He said the tests showed "it is sure they had been drinking."

The police official said five members of the crew were being detained pending the investigation although no official charges had yet been filed. A sixth apparently fled after the crash and is being sought.

The central Mexican National Railroads office in Mexico City had said earlier that the train was traveling at the time of the accident at a speed of 120 kilometers per hour (75 miles per hour) on a piece of track where the maximum speed is limited to 60 kilometers per hour (37 miles per hour) because there is downhill curve.

Those arrested were held in the state prison in Saltillo, where they made statements to Rene Arroyo de Anda, agent for the federal government, and Antonio Flores Melo, attorney general for the state.

The worst rail accident in Mexico's history was Aug. 9, 1945, when 295 persons died in Casa Casadero in the state of

Teacher, Schoolgirls Escape Kidnapers

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI)—A cool-headed young schoolteacher saved herself and six young schoolgirls after 17 hours of terror today when she broke out of their bread van prison while their kidnapers were away trying to collect $1.2 million ransom.

Mary Gibbs, 20, and her pupils, ranging from 5 to 11 years old, were tired, scared, and hungry — but unharmed — when they finally reached the safety of a country police station. Their kidnapers were still at large.

The ordeal for Miss Gibbs and the girls began about 1:30 p.m. Friday when two young men, one armed with a sawed-off shotgun, burst into Faraday Hamlet School House, 70 miles northwest of Melbourne, and herded them into the bread truck.

It ended at about 8:30 a.m. today after the teacher and girls broke out of the truck and eventually stumbled into a party of rabbit hunters, who delivered them to police safety at Lancefield, 20 miles away from the scene of their abduction.

During their captivity, police and state authorities tried to contact the kidnapers. The authorities were ready to meet demands for the $1.2 million ransom on the threat the teacher and girls would otherwise be killed.

More than 600 policemen fanned out over a 100-mile rad-

California Jobless Rate Up Slightly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — While the nation's unemployment rate dropped slightly, California's jobless ranks edged upward in September from 5.8 to 5.9 per cent.

Director Sigurd I. Hansen of the state Department of Human Resources Development, reporting Friday on the monthly unemployment figures, said he saw "no significance whatsoever" in the slight increase in the statewide rate.

The nationwide rate declined from 5.6 to 5.5 per cent last month.

Hansen reported more persons held jobs in California last month than ever before. The number employed rose by 8,700 in September to total the record 8.32 million.

"Compared with this time last year," Hansen said, "all major nonagricultural industries show good gains in employment." He said agriculture employment was down from the same time last year because "the harvest was earlier this year."

The number of persons unemployed fell by 7,300 last month to a total of 436,000.

Here is an area-by-area breakdown of unemployment rates:

Fire Sweeps Slope Of Tam

BULLETIN

A roaring fire swept through heavily wooded regions on the east slope of Mount Tamalpais today, damaging a house in its path.

Heavy winds whipped the flames on Crown Road in Kentfield, near Phoenix Lake. The Kentfield Fire Department reported the roof of a home in the area was heavily damaged by the fire, but that major damage was prevented.

No one was reported injured.

Firemen from Larkspur, Tiburon, San Anselmo and the Marin County Fire Department joined in the effort shortly after the fire was reported at 11:55 a.m.

Kentfield residents reported a half-hour power failure during the fire.

McGovern Unveils Plan On Environment

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. George S. McGovern today proposed a $3.5 billion-a-year fight to restore and protect the environment —an area where, he said, President Nixon has sold out to special interest groups.

McGovern issued one of his periodic policy statements, this one on the environment, in which he said "we face the bleak prospect of a true American wasteland — of bespoiled wilderness and seashores and of unliveable cities from which millions of lower income citizens cannot escape."

Of the current administration he said:

"Mr. Nixon has promised the American people 'total mobilization' against environmental deterioration. But under pressure from special interests he has steadily retreated from that pledge. His environmental record is fertile with rhetoric but barren in performance."

He said the President had opposed strong legislation, left programs that did get passed understaffed and undermanned and failed to enforce existing legislation "with energy and commitment."

McGovern proposed:

—Strong control, and eventual banning of, strip mining.

—Redistribution of money in the Highway Trust Fund so that less of it would go to road building and more of it to mass transit.

—Taxes on polluters.

—A tenfold increase in the number of health and safety inspectors to enforce legislation designed to make the workplace less dangerous.

—Passage of pending legislation, which MGovern helped sponsor, under which citizens could police polluters and provide courts with judicial review powers over federal agency decisions on the environment.

McGovern said the annual $3.5 billion that would be needed for his program would come from savings effected by reduced military and space spending, and from tax reform. He said technicians in the aerospace and military fields would be used where possible on environmental research and development.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

'No Connection'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Commerce Secretary Mairice Stans says there was no connection between a White House decision to postpone imposing tough flammability standards on the carpet industry and a $94,580 campaign contribution to President Nixon from an industry executive.

Sharply criticizing Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., for suggesting such a link, Stans said in a statement yesterday the contribution had been pledged long before postponement of the new standards.

Hijacker Killed

RONCHI DEI LEGIONARI, Italy (UPI) — Police stormed a hijacked airliner early today after an all-night vigil. They found the young hijacker dead, killed by submachine gun bullets fired hours earlier.

The gun-wielding youth, described by crewmen as "not older than 18," yesterday had ordered the plane back to this town near the Yugoslav border, its starting point on a domestic flight. He demanded $344,000 and asked to be flown to Cairo.

After the six passengers and three crewmen escaped from the plane, shooting erupted.

Amnesty Order

BERLIN (UPI) — The East German government said today it has ordered a sweeping amnesty for all political and criminal prisoners, including those who have been convicted but have not yet begun serving prison terms.

According to the East German news agency, the government proclaimed the amnesty in honor of the 23rd anniversary of the German Democratic Republic.

Yhe East German Communist party organ "Neues Deutschland" said the amnesty applies to persons convicted before Oct. 7, 1972.

U.S. Plane Purchase

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan decided yesterday to buy American fighter planes for its fourth five-year defense plan extending from 1972 to 1976, government sources said today.

The decision to use Northrup F5 fighter planes was made at the insistence of the Ministry of Finance, deeply worried over Japan's huge trade surplus with the U.S., the sources said.

It was a defeat for the Japan Self-Defense Agency, which wanted to use the Japanese developed T2 fighter, equipped with Rolls-Royce engines and produced in Japan.

The debate over choice of plane reached a decision for expenditure of $15 billion for the five-year defense period. The number of American planes that will be purchased was not known.

Task Force Study

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A "task force" of pro-Nixon Democrats issued a study today concluding that Sen. George S. McGovern's proposed $30 billion cut in Pentagon spending was "irresponsible and dangerous."

The 37-page study was prepared by Prof. James D. Theberge of the Center for Strategic and International Studies at Georgetown University.

Theberge identified all participants in the study as Democrats, and said the document was being reviewed by the Democrats for Nixon Committee for adoption.

Reviewing McGovern's proposal to reduce defense spending by $30 billion in three years, the Theberge study said "it is not based on a careful, sober analysis of the nature and scope of the threats or challenges to American and allied interests."

Bratteli Resigns

OSLO (UPI) — Prime Minister Try gve Bratteli, whose campaign for Norwegian membership in the European Common Market was defeated two weeks ago in a national referendum, resigned today as head of a minority Labor government.

Bratteli told a news conference he presented his letter of resignation to the king during an extragrdinary cabinet session at the Royal Plaace.

The King asked Bratteli to continue in a caretaker governmen until a new government was chosen. Bratteli did not indicate what course he would follow.

Pub Siege Broken

BELFAST (UPI) — Militant Protestants besieged a Roman Catholic pub for four hours today and scuffled with Catholics. British troops finally broke the siege.

About 25 men of the Protestant paramilitary Ulster Defense Association tried to storm the pub in Lisburn seven miles south of Belfast shortly after closing time last night.

The UDA men, some in military-style uniforms, tried to seize customers trying to leave and three persons were injured in the scuffles, the pub owner said.

The Catholics locked the doors and windows and the Protestants besieged the pub for four hours until British troops arrived and scattered the besiegers.

Mail-Bomb Probes

KUALA LUMPUR (UPI) — Moslem Malaysia today tightened postal security and began investigating reports that three mail-bombs sent to Jewish groups in Rome, Sydney and Dusseldof, Germany, were sent from Malaysian cities.

A Home Ministry official said previously there was no reason to check outgoing mail for explosives and anyone could have posted the parcel bombs undetected.

"It could have been done by the Black September movements as reported, the Al-Fatah people or even local Moslem fanatics," the official said. "The police special branch detectives have begun investigations and until they turn up something we cannot say anything more".

Stalemate Continues

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Foreign Minister Abba Eban of Israel said today he and U.N. special envoy Gunnar V. Jarring agree that there is no point in renewing joint diplomatic efforts to break the Middle East stalemate.

In an interview from U.N. headquarters in New York, broadcast in Jerusalem, Eban said Jarring sees his mission as continuing, "but in abeyance."

"The truth of the matter is that we were in agreement that the time is not right for activity in the framework of his mission," Eban said.

Influenza Strain May Strike U.S.

ATLANTA (UPI)—A type of influenza which has already hit Southeast Asia and Australia may hit the United States this winter, the Center for Disease Control (CDC) warned Friday.

Because some Americans have gained immunity "from prior exposure to related influenze viruses," the CDC said, "it cannot be determined whether widespread outbreaks are likely to occur."

While the CDC said the strains reported so far are not exactly new, it said they are a "moderately distinctive" version of the Type "A" version which have caused outbreaks of illness in Southeast Asia, Australia and the Far East with a few cases in Hawaii.

"Surveillance will be intensified to determine the extent of the spread of the newer strains," the CDC said. "It is reasonable to expect that they will be the cause of influenza cases in the United States during the 1972-73 season."

The CDC said current laboratory information indicated vaccine now available should offer "some protection" against the newer strains.

"Its use for high risk groups (such as elderly persons or those with respiratory ailments) is strongly recommended."

Corona Had Key— But So Did Others

FAIRFIELD (UPI) — A prosecution witness at the Juan V. Corona mass murder trial admitted Friday that other persons besides the defendant had keys to padlocked buildings in a farm labor camp where a bloodstained revolver and knives were found.

The weapons, including a 9mm pistol and two knives, were discovered in a desk belonging to the 38-year-old Corona in a cookhouse on the Jack Sullivan ranch north of Yuba City.

Ranch foreman Ray Duron said under cross-examination that Corona was one of eight persons with keys to the outbuildings located near the grave- sites of many of the 25 victims.

Duron listed himself, ranch owner Jack Sullivan and "all the tractor operators," among those besides Corona who were provided with the keys.

Corona, who prvided farm laborers for the ranch from 1966 until his arrest in May 1971, is accused of committing the killings and burying the victims in crude orchard graves.

All but two of the hacked bodies were found buried on the Sullivan ranch. The others were dug up by Sutter County sheriff's deputies on surrounding farms.

Duron testified that he thought, but wasn't certain, that Corona had his own lock on the cook shack where the weapons and other evidence were found.

"I believe he had his own lock on that building," Duron said.

"Are you sure of that?" defense attorney Richard Hawk asked.

After a brief pause, Duron responded, "I don't know, I don't know."

The foreman also testified that Corona spent considerable time at the ranch even when he wasn't working.

"He was at the ranch all the time, just riding around," Duron said.

"Whether he was working or not he was always around the ranch and the bunkhouse."

The witness described Corona as a "good worker" and said he did a satisfactory job providing the ranch with workers over the five-year period.

Display Of Indian Bones Protested

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI)—Stating that the remains of famous white men are never put on display, a group of Indians Friday asked Gov. Robert D. Ray to have the bones of five Indians removed from a museum and reburied.

The Indians, most of them American Indian Movement (AIM) members, told the governor and state museum officials that they find the public display of the remains "offensive and degrading" to their religion and their culture.

"How would you like it if the remains of John F. Kennedy or Martin Luther King were put on display?" local AIM Director Carl Decora asked the governor.

Jack Musgrove, veteran curator of the state historical museum here where the bones lie, said he believes AIM is only interested in the display for political reasons.

Pointing out that many skeletons and remains of earlier civilizations are on display for historical and scientific reasons throughout the the world, Musgrove told the Indians the display showed that "your people weren't savages."

Musgrove, who exhumed the bodies several years ago at his own expense, said the remains are particularly important because they date back to the 13th century and Christian crosses were found on the bodies.

John Cabot and his son, Sebastian, reached the North American continent on the east coast of Canada June 24, 1497.

The immediate and urgent removal of the following collections have been demanded from the warehouses, where they are presently being held.

5 Die In Virginia Floods; River Spills Into Richmond

RICHMOND Va. (UPI)—The James River invaded the one-time capital of the Confederacy today for the second time this year, sending rust-brown water into businesses still under repair from the flood waters of tropical storm Agnes.

The river was expected to crest at 25 feet by midafternoon in Richmond — 16 feet above flood level but 11 feet lower than the June flooding which caused $3.4 million in damage.

At least five persons were reported dead in the flooding in central and western Virginia.

The James, which cuts through Virginia from the Blue Ridge Mountains to the ocean, slipped quietly over streets and into buildings in low lying areas Saturday morning even as merchants were still evacuating their shops.

Police and National Guard soldiers cordoned off flooded area.

Businessmen, some of them wearing clothes and boots still muddy from the June floods, had been working since Friday morning when weathermen first predicted the city would be hit by its third major flood since 1969.

Some businessmen moved their merchandise to upper floors. Those with no upper floors rented trucks to cart goods to higher ground while others began advertising "flood sales" on items they couldn't save.

Weather officials dropped the predicted crest of the river by about two feet Saturday when it crested lower than first expected west of the city.

One of the six bridges over the James was closed shortly before noon while city officials prepared to close others if the crest was higher than predicted.

City crews continued to sandbag the water treatment plant which was flooded in June, forcing half the city at that time to go without potable water for several days.

Brick Rider, information officer for the city, said Richmond was experiencing "much less difficulty" in the latest flooding.

"We have not lost our water, we have not lost electrical power and we haven't had to cordon off 200 square blocks like we did before," he said. "We haven't really had most of those problems."

Although Civil Defense officials set up an emergency shelter in Richmond, only 20 persons entered the facility. They were all residents of the city's Fulton area near the river who had been advised to move out.

The Virginia Highway Department, which estimated damage to the state's highways at $1.5 million, said 300 secondary roads and seven primary routes remained closed Saturday by flood waters or washouts.

The flooding was caused by a storm which swept moisture from the ocean inland to the mountains where it condensed. The James and Appomattox River basins, where dozens of streams flow into the two major rivers, averaged about five to eight inches of rain.

Yemen Border War Continues Unabated

BEIRUT (UPI) — The two-week border war between North and Southern Yemen continued unabated today, with troops from the two countries fighting for the control of the border town of Qaataba, the Middle East News Agency said.

In a dispatch from Sanaa, capital of North Yemen, the agency quoted a military spokesman as saying that North Yemeni forces were attempting to recapture Qaataba from its Southern Yemeni invaders. "Fighting in the town is still going on," the spokesman said.

Qaataba is a North Yemeni border town which was captured by Southern Yemeni forces about 10 days ago, Sanaa officials said.

An earlier North Yemeni statement said the Southern Yemeni troops had withdrawn from Qaataba itself, but were remaining in hills which surround it, maintaining control of the town.

The agency said a North Yemeni military vehicle hit a mine along the Sanaa-Taez road. The vehicle wals de stroyed, 3 soldiers were killed and 13 others wounded, the agency said. It did not say when the incident happened, or who planted the mine.

Innocent Plea In Team Burglary

John R. Arbuckle, 22, no known address, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to three counts of burglary stemming from team thefts in San Rafael and San Anselmo. Preliminary hearing was scheduled for Oct. 17.

Arbuckle and Steven John Pappas, 21, of San Francisco, are charged with taking money from three small shops Aug. 22 and 23 by distracting the shopkeeper. Two of the crimes occurred in San Anselmo and one in San Rafael.

Codefendant Andrew Joseph Carrino, 28, of San Rafael, also is scheduled to appear for preliminary hearing Oct. 17. He is charged only with the two burglaries in San Anselmo Aug. 23.

Peevey To Meet With Residents

Michael R. Peevey, county supervisor candidate in the fourth district, has invited South San Rafael voters to meet with him Wednesday to "discuss ways to guarantee that they receive their share" of the $2.25 million open space bond measure passed by the city's voters.

A resident of the area, Peevey said South San Rafael has been "almost totally neglected by both the county and the city. When recreational and open space areas are being allocated, our area is always left out," he said.

The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. at the Depot, 930 Tamalpais Avenue.

Burglar Suspect To Higher Court

A 23-yaer-old man charged with a Strawberry burglary was bound over yesterday to Marin Superior Court to appear Wednesday.

Robert C. Molina, no known address, was arrested Sept. 20 after he allegedly broke into a house belonging to Kent Wisecarver at 5 De Silva Island.

Robbery Suspects Bound Over

Two Marin City residents charged with attempting to rob a Tamalpais Valley store have been bound over to Marin Superior Court to appear Oct. 19.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court ruled there is enough evidence to try Barbara Ann Scott, 21, and Osborne O'Neil Turner, 19.

The two, who were arrested on Drake Avenue in Marin City by sheriff's deputies, allegedly entered Dan's Groceries with a third person shortly before midnight and demanded maoney at gunpoint.

Deputies said the three fled without cash after apparently becoming frightened.

The third person is still sought.

'Never Believed Alioto In Mafia'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Richard Carlson, who coauthored a Look Magazine article that tried to link Mayor Joseph Alioto with the Mafia, says he never believed the mayor was a Mafia member or knowingly furthered criminal purposes.

Carlson testified in Alioto's $12.5 million libel suit against Look Friday that he felt "the average reader would not get the feeling from the article that Alioto was a member of the Mafia nor was involved in illegal activity."

However, under questioning by Look attorney Charles W. Kenady, Carlson said he thought all the statements he wrote linking Alioto and Mafia figures were true.

Another Larkspur Homes Suit

Yet another suit against Larkspur's largest developer over homes in the Greenbrae Marina was filed yesterday in Marin Superior Court.

The suit by homeowners Kenneth A. and Andrea Gale of 358 Riviera Circle claims $185,000 damages. They allege their home has settled and cracked because of improper engineering by developers Niels Schultz Sr. and his son, Niels Jr.

The suit also names subsidiary corporations the Schultz family is said to control.

It is the fourth such suit against the developer. More than a dozen families previously sued on a similar basis.

Penn Central Loan Approved In Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate approved by voice vote Friday and sent to the House a bill authorizing $48 million in loans to Penn Central and other railroads to repair flood damages linked to tropical storm Agnes.

Penn Central estimated losses of $37.6 million during the flood last June.

Brown Won't Appeal Prop. 22 Suit Rejection

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. says he will not appeal a superior court decision rejecting his lawsuit to remove the farm labor relations initiative from the ballot because of alleged widespread fraud.

Judge William A. White dismissed the suit Friday, declaring it was in the "public interest" for the courts to "refrain from unnecessary intervention in the election processes."

White said Brown's charges that more than 63,000 signatures were collected illegally to qualify Prop. 22 for the ballot were "serious."

But he said "some considerable doubt" exists about whether the issues of "fraud and deceit" could be resolved in the 20 court days remaining before the Nov. 7 election.

White did not rule on the validity of Brown's charges. The question before the judge was whether the lawsuit should be brought to trial.

Building Curb Guide Urged

Combined AP and UPI

SAN FRANCISCO —County and city legal officers cried out yesterday for guidelines on conforming with the California Supreme Court decision requiring environmental impact reports by public agencies approving private construction projects.

County counsels, city attorneys and planning officers jammed a State Building hearing room for a rap session on the decision's effects. The meeting was sponsored by the California District Attorneys and County Counsels Association.

Meanwhile, Gov. Ronald Reagan has moved to seek a "complete clarification" of the ruling that stalled construction on private building projects throughout the state.

The governor, who was in Los Angeles yesterday, telephoned an "emergency session" of his cabinet and told members he has asked Attorney General Evelle Younger to request a stay on the court's Sept. 21 ruling.

Nicholas C. Yost, deputy attorney general, told the San Francisco group that Younger planned a conference in Los Angeles Oct. 19 to provide some answers after problems aised by the decision had been explored.

Douglas Maloney, Marin County Counsel and association vice president, called the informal conference after a temporary freeze on building permits had been ordered in at least four counties — San Francisco, San Diego, San Jose and Santa Cruz.

Many cities in Marin are groping with the ramifications of the court decision, and San Rafael Thursday became the first to set interim guidelines enabling certain types of minor construction.

Maloney said he read the state Supreme Court's 6-1 decision as incorporating standards defined in federal court interpretations of the National Environment Policy Act.

Yost said the California court's decision striking down Mono County's approval of a condominium project at Mammoth Lakes generally adopted the attorney general's position on the state's Environmental Quality Act.

The Mono County Planning Commission granted approval without filing an impact report.

Yost said the attorney general was pleased with the decision because its long-range effect would enhance California's environment.

He said the promary transitional problem was the question of retroactive effect of the court's decision.

He said he understood Los Angeles and other counties would file friend of the court briefs urging that the court declare its decision applied only to projects approved after its decision.

The court will have opportunity to weigh this issue in considering Mono County's petition for rehearing.

The court's decision will become binding Oct. 21 unless a rehearing is granted.

Maloney said Marin County would refuse reopening of hearings on any construction applistate act's effectiveness in November 1970 and the court's decision last month.

Mary Hawkins, speaking for the state counsel on inter-governmental relations, reported that all county planning agencies must develop an "environmental element" in their master plans before next June.

"And this can't be a Mickey Mouse thing," she said.

She said the council has prepared a model draft for the counties' guidance.

Burglary Trials To Be Combined

Richard James Giakovmis, 19, of Fairfax, has been bound over to Marin Superior Court without a preliminary hearing so his burglary case can be handled with one already pending.

Giakovmis gave up his right to a hearing on whether there is sufficient evidence to try him. Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court ordered him to appear in the higher court Oct. 16 on the charge of breaking into a Fairfax home June 12.

Giakovmis already is awaiting trial in superior court on a charge of auto burglary. He was arrested June 28 in San Anselmo allegedly trying to take car seats.

TRAIN

Queretaro, 300 miles the south of Saltillo.

The train was packed with an estimated 2,000 Catholic pilgrims when it jumped the rails early Friday, setting some of the 22 passenger cars on fire.

The death toll climbed steadily all Friday and into today's early hours as hundreds of rscue workers pulled the bodies of more and more men, women and children from the twisted, steaming wreckage.

The pilgrims, mostly poor Mexicans from Saltillo, 180 miles southwest from Laredo, Tex., and about 600 miles north of Mexico City, were returning from Real De Catorce, a mining town 60 miles to the south, where they had gone for a religious fiesta Wednesday.

Train tickets were sold to 1,564 adults, said Genaro Gutierrez Davila, director of the judicial police of the Mexican border state of Coahuila, of which Saltillo is the capital. But many small children traveled free, he added.

The train, being pulled by two locomotives, crashed 2.5 miles south of Saltillo. Hundreds of men, women and children were flung out as the train lurched over. Many were killed by the toppling cars.

Their screams for help were heard throughout the day and into the night.

Gutierrez Davila said: "We just don't know how many people will still be trapped or how long it will take us to get them out."

The crash took place on a flat piece of land, near a bridge called Puente Moreno. Wreckage was strewn over an area a third of a mile square.

Peevey Talks Set Next Week

Michael R. Peevey, candidate for supervisor from Marin's fourth district, will speak at two coffees and two club meetings next week.

At noon Wednesday Peevey will address the San Anselmo Rotary Club in Deer Park Villa, Bolinas Road, Fairfax. He will meet with the Bolinas Improvement Club at a pot luck dinner at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at 380 Elm Road.

Coffees are at 8 p.m. Monday at the Larkspur home of Alice Stephens, 30 Palm Avenue, and 8 p.m. Friday at the Petaluma home of Emily E. McDowell, 1570 Tomales Road.

Report On I.Q. Tests Due Monday

Kentfield School District psychologist Jack Williams will give district trustees a report on I.Q. and achievement tests conducted last year when the board meets Monday at 8 p.m. at Wolfe Grade School.

Each school principal will summarize his school's evaluation after the report. Trustees also will be informed that under A.B. 665, I.Q. testing no longer will be required by the state after March.

Judge Eases Gag Order In Bug Case

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A federal judge has eased his order prohibiting out-of-court comment by principals in the Watergate bugging case following attacks by Democratic leaders and the news media against the ruling.

Only attorneys, government prosecutors, law enforcement agents and the defendants themselves remained under orders not to talk about the case under a clarification of the original ban issued by U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica Friday.

Sirica, saying "it is not the intention of this court to affect congressional activity, political debate or news media reporting," specifically removed from the ban witnesses, potential witnesses, complaining witnesses and alleged victims.

Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the House Banking Committee, promptly announced he would again seek committee approval to conduct an investigation of the alleged break-in and bugging of Democratic National headquarters in the Watergate apartment complex here.

A similar effort last week was voted down by a predominantly Republican majority in the committee after the Justice Department said public interviews of witnesses and others connected with the case would jeopardize the rights of the accused and the government's chances of conviction.

Sirica will be presiding judge in the trial of seven men — including two former White House aides —who were indicted in the connection with the break-in.

Thursday, at the request of an attorney for defendant E. Howard Hunt Jr. and reportedly also at the urging of the Justice Department, Sirica issued an order prohibiting anyone connected with the case from making "extrajudicial statements concerning any aspects of this case" which might be prejudicial to a proper trial.

Lawrence F. O'Brien, Sen. George S. McGovern's campaign chairman, denounced the order as a "gag rule" and "dictatorial tacts" that indicated "the administration has something it desperately wants to hide until the elections are over."

He said neither he nor the Democratic presidential nominee would stop discussing the case.

The ruling followed publication by the Los Angeles Times of an interview with a reported informant in the case, Alfred Baldwin III, who was quoted as saying he participated in bugging of the headquarters on a number of occasions. The Times said it thought Sirica's order was an attempt to stop publication of further interviews with him.

In a related development, the Washington Post said Baldwin had told the FBI that memos about conversations allegedly recorded in Democratic headquarters were addressed to William E. Timmons, one of President Nixon's assistants.

The Post said such memos also were addressed to Robert C. Odle Jr., a former White House aide, and to J. Glenn Sedam Jr., general counsel for the committee for the Reelection of the President.

Sta-Power Can Keep Operating

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A firm in the William Penn Patrick empire has been allowed to continue operating for 45 days by a superior court judge.

The ruling by Judge Ira Brown came in a bid by Sta-Power Industries of San Rafael to overturn a Sept. 15 ruling by a state hearing officer ordering the San Rafael-based firm to stop selling gas and oil distributorships until it registers them with the state.

That order was to have become effective Thursday, but Brown granted a stay pending further proceedings.

Man Bound Over On Dope Charge

Judge Peter Allen Smith of Municipal court ordered Don Ellis Lando to appear Thursday.

Lando, also charged with misdemeanor counts of drunken driving and having a pipe for smoking marijuana, was arrested Feb. 16 on Highway 101 in Ignacio by the California Highway Patrol.

Car Burns, But Driver Escapes

A 27-year-old San Anselmo man escaped serious injury yesterday when he leaped from his burning car on the Golden Gate Bridge.

The California Highway Patrol said Robert C. Hansen, 9 Summit Road, suffered minor leg burns and cuts in the accident, which occurred at 6:55 p.m. just north of the toll plaza.

Officers said Hansen's southbound car began smoking near the north end of the bridge, then burst into flames as it neared the toll plaza. Hansen jumped from the moving auto which then careened into a power pole, the patrol reported.

Marriage Of Leitzells Ends

A Marin Superior Court judge has ended the 18-year marriage of Charles R. Leitzell, San Anselmo's city engineer and public works director, and Norene A. Leitzell because of irreconcilable differences.

Judge Henry J. Broderick ordered Leitzell to pay his ex-wife a lump sun of $5,000 for alimony and gave him custody of the couple's son, James, 14. A daughter, Kathleen, 11, will live with her mother.

The Leitzells, who married in 1953 in Seattle and separated last December, lived at 30 Oakwood Avenue, San Anselmo.

In the 1st Century B.C., Pompey assembled a navy of 500 ships and cleared the eastern Mediterranean of fleets of pirates.

OBITUARIES

SIMON CAMGROS

Simon Camgros, founder of Camgros Gravel and Fuel Co., died today in a local convalescent hospital after a long illness. He was 86.

For Camgros, born in France, it was a rages-to-riches life. At 17, he came to the U.S. and began working in Los Angeles as a sheep-herder.

One year later, he moved to Marin County where he started delivering building materials with a horse and wagon. The wagon gave way to a lone dump truck and by 1924, he incorporated the Camgros Gravel and Fuel Co. The company, from which he retired as president three years ago, now employs about 35 persons.

Camgros, who formerly lived at 140 Dear Park Avenue, San Rafael, was a member of the San Rafael Rotary Club and the Lafayette Club of Marin.

He is survived by two daughters, Clemence Cerri of San Anselmo and Georgette Gebelein of Santa Rosa; two sons, Roger and Raymond Camgros, both of San Rafael; a sister, Matilda Paganetti; nine grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Mass of the Resurrection will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday at St. Rapahel's Church, with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Rosary will be recited at Keaton's at 8 p.m. Monday.

have stopped and I can't see much damage."

Refugees, many sobbing and clutching children and a few meager possessions, streamed into the center of the city.

One young girl with four small children clinging to her bloodied sarong said "We ran out of the house when we heard the explosions and saw the boats. We didn't know they were Communists until they ran right through our yard into the stadium.

"My father yelled to us to run. I had my mother's hand but when we got in the firing in front of the French embassy she fell. I tried to help her up but she kept crying, then I got scared and kept running."

KIDNAP

ius in the area today seeking the two kidnapers. A police spokesman said he believed the gunmen managed to elude police roadblocks after Miss Gibbs and the girls escaped.

The young teacher later described her ordeal to newsmen:

"They herded us into the back of a red van and drove us away. We began to get scared then, when we realized that this was the real thing."

"We stopped after a while and nothing happened. It was night and the men told us they were going off to collect the ransom.

"They said they'd be back at dawn. I thought it was now or never. I began kicking the van door and the two eldest children helped me.

"When the door gave way, I got the children out and began walking through the bush.

"We must have gone about a mile and a half when we heard you people (the rabbit hunters who took them to safety).

"I thought it was the kidnapers, so I made the children hide in the bush and came on alone."

Allan Hayward, 24, one of the rabbit hunters, said he got "a hell of a fright" when seven fiures appeared in the murky dawn haze from the heavily wooded bushland in which he, his wife and two friends were hunting.

Hayward said Miss Gibbs then called out "Hello, have you heard about the teacher and six children being kidnaped?"

He said Miss Gibbs had said she and the children hid in the bush from the hunting party until they saw it included women.

"When she realized we were not the kidnapers they all ran out from behind the trees and told us who they were," Hayward said.

Lindsay Thompson, Victorian Minister for Education who directed the search and rescue operations, said authorities got the demanded money together in nine suitcases containing various currency denominations, as directed by the kidnappers in a telephone call.

But, Thompson said, the abductors failed to show up for the rendezvous arranged by phone before Miss Gibbs and the children freed themselves.

Planning Commission Won't Meet Monday

The Marin County Planning Commission will not meet Monday, as reported Tuesday in the Independent-Journal, but will meet on Oct. 16 instead.

Normally, the commission meets on the second and fourth Mondays of each month but changed to the third and fifth Mondays this month due to Columbus Day and Veteran's Day.

MRS. TAINTER

Recitation of the Rosary and blessing for Gertrude D. Tainter of Kentfield will be held at 4 p.m. tomorrow at the Harry M. William Mortuary in San Rafael.

Mrs. Tainter, 75, died Thursday in a local hospital after a long illness.

A native of San Francisco, she had lived in Marin County six years, residing at 8 Cypress Avenue. For 30 years prior to her retirement she was employed as a foreman for William S. Mellerick and Co., a bookbinding firm.

She was a member of the Bookbinders and Binder Workers Union Local 3 of Northern California.

Mrs. Tainter is survived by four daughters, Barbara Vidano of Kentfield, Bette Anderson of South San Francisco, Fern Pfandler of San Bruno and Patricia Gee of Huntington Beach, and a son, Raymond J. Tainter of La Honda. She also is survived by a brother, Jack Love of San Francisco, and 21 grandchildren.

Burial will be at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday in Golden Gate National Cemetery, San Bruno. The family prefers memorial contributions to the Marindae School therapy department, 850 Del Ganado Road, San Rafael.

MRS. BOLAND

Private funeral for Alice M. Boland, long-time member of the Marin Symphony Association, was held today in San Rafael.

Mrs. Boland, 60, died at her San Anselmo home Thursday as she sat down to dinner. According to coroner's deputy Donald L. Cornish, Mrs. Boland suddenly began choking and collapsed.

She was a native of Salt Lake City, Utah, and a resident of Marin County for the past 50 years. She lived most recently at 501 Oak Avenue in San Anselmo.

She was a member of the Marin Symphony Association for many years, along with her husband, the late Barry W. Boland, who was one of the association's founding directors.

Mrs. Boland received her bachelor's and master's degrees in music from San Francisco State College.

She was a music teacher in Marin City schools before and during World War II and played the cello in the Marin Symphony Association's orchestra for many years.

She is survived by a daughter, Nancy Edgarton of Bethesda, Md., and two grandsons.

The family prefers contributions to the Marin Symphony Association Memorial Scholarship Fund.

ERICH F. LEY

Private funeral for Erich F. Ley of Mill Valley was held today in that city. Ley, 90, died Thursday in a local hospital after a long illness.

A native of Poland, he had lived in California 55 years and in Marin County 44 years, residing at 446 Panoramic Highway.

Prior to his retirement Ley was a machinist for American Can Co. for 50 years.

He is survived by his wife, Adele, and two daughters, Julie Ley of Mill Valley and Lore Parker of Hong Kong.

Burial will be private. The family prefers contributions to a favorite charity.

WOLF MAN MEETS THE AUDUBON SOCIETY

Raymond Underwood, a trainer for Guide Dogs for the Blind in San Rafael, shows a rather unusual "dog" to those attending the first fall meeting of the Marin Audubon Society. The animal is Miska, a 6-month-old gray wolf that Underwood has raised since she was six days old. The tame 67-pound wolf (she will eventually weigh more than 100 pounds) is a family pet. She was hand-fed by Underwood until she was old enough to fend for herself. Miska came to the meeting to illustrate a speech by Scott Sway of the North American Association for the Preservation of Predatory Animals. (Independent-Journal photo)

States Ease Voting Process On Campus

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Most of the nation's approximately 8 million college students will be eligible to vote in their campus towns in November.

Large numbers of states have made it easy for the students by requiring only a short period of residency—30 days or less in many cases—in order to vote in their campus towns. Some states are setting up polling places on the campuses.

The big exception is New York, where the state's 548,000 students are required by law to vote at home. About 10 other states with 675,000 students have similar restrictions.

In California, whose 1.2 million college population is by far the largest of any state, students will be permitted to vote in their campus towns. The secretary of state's office said no differentiation would be made between home state and out-of-state students in determining eligibility.

According to preliminary estimates, about 7.7 million persons are attending college this fall. But only about 60 per cent of them are in the newly enfranchised group of 18 to 21 year olds, who number about 12.1 million in the nation. The others are older students in graduate school or perhaps still doing undergraduate work.

More than 30 states require that in order to vote, a student must declare residency in a state. Missouri requires residency of one year and Nevada six months. But South Dakota requires only 15 days residency and Wisconsin only 10 days.

Other states requiring some sort of relatively easy residency requirement include: Alabama, Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming.

Alabama, Colorado, Hawaii, Minnesota, Ohio, Washington and West Virginia will require the students to make a declaration of intent to settle there. But Oregon will allow students to vote where they say their residence is with no additional proof required.

In Pennsylvania, a court suit shaped up over whether students should be required to sign affidavits declaring themselves residents. The solicitor is demanding proof of long-term residence; the state attorney general opposed the signing of an affidavit.

Some residents of Nacogdoces, Tex., a college town, have filed suit in federal court to require students desiring to vote to prove they intend to become permanent residents. A 1971 Texas law required students to vote in the county where they got their major support—in most cases, where their parents live—but the state agreed it was unconstitutional.

Some states have taken specific steps to insure a student doesn't vote both at home and on campus.

Iowa and New Mexico require an affidavit that a student is voting only once. The Kansas secretary of state is notifying the election board where a student previously was registered to cancel the old registration. Ohio will make spot checks to make sure students are not voting absentee elsewhere.

In Montana, 18-year-old students will have to vote where their parents do because 19 is the age of majority there. New Hampshire will allow an out-of-state student to vote in New Hampshire only if he arranges it with his home state.

The Michigan Supreme Court ruled that all of the state's 160,000 students may vote in their campus towns.

It will be more difficult if not impossible in other states for students to vote in campus towns. These include Alaska, Arkansas, Delaware, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Rhode Island and Virginia.

Students in Alaska, Rhode Island and Maine will have to vote by absentee ballot and there are no special campus arrangements.

2,300-Unit Housing Plea Due Study

The Novato Planning Commission will continue consideration of developer John E. Kenny's proposal for 2,300 housing units on 700 acres in Black Point when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday in the community house.

The proposal has been before the commission for several months. Dan Coleman Associates has designed the development with houses on keys in a lagoon and on the adjacent hillside.

The commission also will consider precise development plans for a 240-unit apartment on 20 acres on San Marin Drive west of San Ramon Way for Exmoor Land Co. It also will consider plans for 48 single-family townhouse units on the west side of Highway 101 south of Redwood Boulevard for Robert L. Goetz Land Development Co.

Additions To List

A headling in yesterday's Independent-Journal indicating that the Petaluma Recreation, Music and Parks Commission had "narrowed" its list of priority projects was in error. The commission on Tuesday added to the list of projects it rated desirable, the article accompanying the headline.

All Of City Now Inside School Lines

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — The Sonoma County Board of Education has approved a boundary change that will place the entire City of Rohnert Park within the Cotati School District.

The board approved the request Thursday to remove the northern portion of Rohnert Park from the Bellevue District and place it in the Cotati district. The area is inhabited by only two families, but future development is expected to bring a large population.

It was the third request by the Cotati district to annex the area. Cotati board president Maurice Fredericks argued that the land should be annexed so that all of Rohnert Park falls within the same school district.

The same area also was transferred from Santa Rosa High School District into Petaluma High School District, which now serves most of Rohnert Park.

The board heard that the boundary change at this time will have little financial meaning for any of the districts.

Red-Held Hamlets Retaken —Fighting Rages Near Saigon

SAIGON (UPI)—Government troops with close support from fighter-bombers recaptured three of six hamlets outside Saigon seized by Communist guerrillas but fighting still raged within 10 miles of the South Vietnamese capital, field reports said today.

American warplanes responded to the threat against Saigon by striking within five miles of the North Vietnamese capital of Hanoi and military spokesmen said at least 10 surface-to-air (sam) missile sites were destroyed in the raids.

The Command also reported that a U.S. F4 Phantom jet was shot down Thursday by a North Vietnamese MIG fighter 70 miles northwest of Hanoi and the two crewmen were listed as missing. Other Phantoms Friday caused the crash of a MIG19 over North Vietnam and the Command listed it as a "kill."

Hanoi Radio charged in a broadcast monitored in Saigon that U.S. planes in raids over North Vietnam hit two streets in the center of Hanoi, killing four persons.

Military spokesmen and field reports said the three hamlets reoccupied late yesterday were outside Phu Cuong, capital of Binh Duong Province about 13 miles north of the capital. Propeller-driven Vietnamese Air Force Skyraider bombers pounded Communist positions in the area near the Saigon River during the fighting, field reports said.

The U.S. Command ordered 11 waves of B52 bombers on overnight missions in Military Region III—the 11-province area around Saigon—the closest only 15 miles west of the city. The B52s could not be used n the battles around hamlets along Highway 13 to the north of Saigon because the area is so densely populated.

Military sources said South Vietnamese commanders had intelligence reports that at least 250 Communist soldiers were within striking distance of Saigon's Tan Son Nhut airbase. Government troops at the base Friday night were using red and white rocket flares to direct incoming warplanes on which approaches to use at the huge airfield.

Aged Sought In Aid Plan

By BARBARA HOSMER

A multi-agency effort is being made in Marin to locate aged persons who could qualify for food stamp assistance to improve their diet and health.

So far, said Frances Dahl, nutritionist with the Marin County Department of Health, some 300 replies have been received. The next step is for the Marin County Department of Social Services to determine if each of these persons is eligible for food stamps.

Called Project Find,the idea grew out of the White House Conference on the Aged.

"It's a one shot attempt," Mrs. Dahl said.

LAST MONTH the U.S. Social Security Administration mailed out cards with each social security check telling the recipient he or she may be eligible for food stamps. If interested, the person was instructed to mail in the card.

From there trained volunteers, which have been recruited through the Volunteer Bureau of Marin and trained by the Red Cross, go to the respondent's home and urge him or her to go to the Department of Public Social Service at the civic center. They may help make transportation arrangements if needed.

Then a DPSS eligibility worker will determine if the person qualifies for food stamps.

Of the 300 replies, Mrs. Dahl said, "I didn't think there would be any such response, but all of them may not be eligible."

THE NUTRITIONAL problems of the aged are found here in Marin, she agreed. She said that diet deficiencies in the aged result from:

Lack of interest in eating, especially when they are alone or don't have a family to cook for.

Insufficient money — pensions that won't stretch. "This is where Project Find can help with food stamps," Mrs. Dahl said.

Illness or disease which prevents them from getting the food they need if they are on a special diet or are not able to get out and shop;

Living in rooms that lack cooking facilities and being stuck with sandwich-snacking.

She said that in areas such as Los Angeles that have a heavy concentration of aged persons on small income, many U.S. Department of Agriculture programs are helping, but areas such as Marin which lack a high number of such persons do ot benefit from other USDA food programs.

"THERE ARE all kinds of programs in California to help but Marin doesn't get its hands on them because it is not considered an area of great need," she explained.

She added that there is a resistance to food stamp programs among older persons. "They don't want a 'hand-out' but really the food stamp program is for all people with limited incomes."

Financial problems create nutritional problems, she said.

In California, she said, some 2½ million persons are over age 60 and 30 per cent are under the poverty level.

MRS. DAHL said that it has been figured that on the West Coast the minimum amount a woman over 55 needs is $7 a week; and for a man $7.50.

"But you'd almost have to be a home economist to work it out on that."

She said that the maximum $36 worth of food stamps a single person could get per month "is minimal."

A Fire Extinguisher Home Must

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Every home should have at least one fire extinguisher on each floor, with an extra one in the kitchen that should be especially effective on grease fires, warnu safety expert Lawrence C. Howe.

Everyone in the family should learn the proper use of the extinguishers and every home should have a fire drill once a week to instruct the children what to do in case of fire, he adds.

"Fires in industry are not as damaging as they used to be, mostly because industry has aquipped itself and trained its workers to avoid fires, or overcome them quickly if started," says Howe, president of Howe Services, Inc., a firm here that specializes in illuminated industrial safety signs.

Most homes, however, have no fire extinguishers and families are not familiar with their use, notes Howe, who suggests taking these precautions to avoid home fire hazards:

Make sure all electrical appliances are in good order.

Make sure your wiring is in good repair; have it checked at the first sign of trouble.

Keep matches where children can't get at them; and teach children their proper use and danger.

Check your furnace, all heating equipment and ducts. If you have air conditioning, include that in the check.

Be sure that your flammable materials, cleaning fluid, etc., are properly stored, out of the reach of the children.

Don't let rags, paper, or other combustible materials pile up.

Know what furnishings in your home are flammable, and try to keep these to a minimum by using fireproof or fire-resistant materials.

And always use caution.

Cal Davis Coed Is On Soccer Team

DAVIS, Calif. (UPI)—Elizabeth Jane Davis says women's liberation had nothing to do with her decision to join the previously all-male junior varsity soccer team at the University of California at Davis.

Miss Davis said she joined the team simply because she likes soccer.

"It's not like football," she said. "I'd never play football. Contact is most insignificant in soccer. The most important things are the philosophy and strategy—working as a team and control of the ball."

Miss Davis, who is 5-5 and 125 pounds, said she has suffered some "bruises and scars" since she started playing. "But I hand out as many as I get," she added.

Coach Will Lotter said Miss Davis makes up for her small size by aggressiveness. "She drew fouls in a couple of games," he said.

Jane was introduced to the sport about a year and a half ago in UC Davis' coeducational intramural program.

She said she signed up for the intercollegiate team because "there are no women's teams at Davis and it was the only way I could play."

ON THE AGENDA

Marin Hospital Volunteers To Hold Annual Meeting In Fairfax

The annual meeting of the Marin General Hospital Volunteers will be held Wednesday at the Meadow Club in Fairfax, with Dr. William Clark, hospital chief of staff, as the speaker.

The 1,100-member volunteer organization will receive reports of the fiscal year just ended, according to Mrs. Donald Murray of San Rafael, chairman of the Council of Volunteers.

The meeting will open at 10:30 a.m. A social hour and luncheon will follow the business session, and a fashion show by Kaufman's San Anselmo will conclude the events. Models will be the members of the Jack and Jill Branch.

In the fiscal year which ended June 30, the volunteers provided 59,000 hours of service to the hospital.

THE SISTERHOOD of Congregation Rodef Sholom will hold its annual membership luncheon Thursday at Temple Rodef Sholom, 170 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael.

A sherry hour will begin at 11:30 a.m., with lunch to follow. Then a musical program will feature Israeli singer Mrs. Esther Sorokin, formerly of the Israeli Opera. She will be accompanied by Mrs. Elsie Krinitsky.

THE VILLAGE Salvage Shop of Tiburon will hold its annual fashion show on Thursday at Del Mar School auditorium. A boutique items sale will begin at 9:30 a.m. and the fashion show at 10 a.m. Coffee and homemade cookies will be served.

Chairman Mrs. Charles Bassett is assisted by Mmes. Victor Avilla, boutique; Peter Watson, tickets; Geoffrey Jones, fashions; Joseph Ramblas, awards; Martha Bigelow, commentator; John Hoefer, piano, and Allan Dougherty, publicity.

The shop's 20th anniversary will be celebrated following the fashion show with birthday cake.

KATE BRAJKOVICH, assistant district manager of the Social Security Administration in Terra Linda, will speak at the dinner meeting Wednesday of the Marin County Legal Secretaries Association.

The group will meet for a social hour at the Los Robles Mobile Home Park clubhouse in Bel Marin Keys at 5:30 p.m. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m.

Reservations chairman is Frances Elvebak of the Bank of Marin, San Rafael.

PROSPECTIVE MEMBERS of the Marin Chapter, Women's American ORT, will attend a membership tea at 8 p.m. Thursday for a briefing on the activities of the organization.

A Week Devoted To Issues

A "political awareness week" will be sponsored by the students of Dominican College and the League of Women Voters of Central and Southern Marin starting Monday.

Pros and cons on ballot issues for the Nov. 7 general election will be conducted by the league at 7:30 tonight in Pennafort Hall.

Candidates night will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday, in Guzman Hall. Expected to attend are Rep. William Mailliard, Roger Boas, Assemblyman William Bagley, Harry J. Moore and possibly Peace and Freedom Party candidate Bill Mack Webber. Also Marin supervisorial candidates Barbara Boxer and Peter R. Arrigoni Jr., second district, and Gary T. Giacomini and Michael Peevey, fourth district.

Platforms on parade will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Fanjeaux Hall. A summary of the viewpoints and platforms of the Republican, Democratic and American Independent parties will be discussed.

A political information center sponsored by the Associated Students of Dominican College in Bertrand Commons will open throughout the week.

The associated students also will conduct a voter registration drive and a mock election on campus during the week.

The tea will be held at the home of Mrs. Ira P. Sapan, 16 Mount Talac Court, Upper Lucas Valley.

All women interested in the group may attend.

UPSILON GAMMA Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi will host a model meeting for prospective members at 8 p.m. Wednesday at the home of Mrs. James Schyberg of Novato.

Officers and committee heads will explain the history and traditions of Beta Sigma Phi and the chapter's local service projects for the upcoming year which will include birthday parties at St. Vincent's School for Boys, assisting Head Start in Novato and making food baskets for needy families.

Prospective members are Mmes. Jerry King and William Larson of Novato.

MEMBERS AND guests of the Episcopal Church of Our Saviour, Mill Valley, will meet for a gala evening at the Ralston White Memorial Retreat in Mill Valley Friday.

Dinner will be served at 8 p.m., with entertainment and music for dancing following.

Parishioners planning the evening, which opens the fall season of feilowship and stewardship, are the Mmes. Gerald Frank, William Smith, Richard Rider, Edward Simons, Forrest Goss, William Cullen, Ray Winfrey, Gordon Gritter, Lester Fitzsimmons, Lewis Griselle, Leslie Palmer, James Carter, John Freschel, Charles Jensen, Peter Empy and Joseph Taylor.

CONSTANCE KARLA, former Mill Valley librarian, will speak on "Karla's Cats" and include a display of handwork and show slides at the meeting Friday of the Tamalpais Center Women's Club. The program will be presented by the Drama-Literary Group of the club at the clubhouse in Kentfield. The event will begin at noon.

Show To Feature Metaphysicist

Libras are often called the beautiful people of the horoscope, according to metaphysicist Kay Ksanda, who will be a guest on "What's Happening," Jorie Parr, will also interview Marjorie Lumm of Sausalito of the Wine Institute's Home Advisory Service, who will discuss cooking with wine and trips to the wine country.

Lack Skill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — What's the matter with college kids today? Many of them can't read. The National Reading Center says about one-third of all freshmen entering college this fall lack the basic reading skills they need to meet minimal requirements for college study.

The Shape Of Baby's Head

I-J Special Report

NEW YORK — Among the advantages Adam and Eve had besides the principal one that they escaped teething, as Mark Twain once pointed out — was that they never got a pediatrician's bill.

As things stand however, Eve may well have missed out on some things, like a couple of baby showers, for instance, to get the layette going and, when the baby came —the opportunity to ask her doctor that all-time favorite: "Isn't his head a funny shape?"

Ever since motherhood caught on it would seem that few new mothers have been able to resist asking that question. According to Dr. Glen C. Griffin of South Davis Medical Center in Bountiful, Utah, it shares top honors among other predictable quizzing of doctors by new parents, reports the Health Insurance Institute.

Another question which physicians count on being asked is "Does it hurt a baby to cry?" said Griffin, who has compiled and answered this and other key questions that mothers and fathers have asked since time immemorial in a booklet "41 Questions and Answers About Your New Baby."

IN ANSWER to that "funny-shape-head" query, Griffin usually finds himself assuring parents that in the beginning, "baby's head is large in proportion to the rest of the body" and made up of several bones which "do some giving-and-taking during birth —and don't join until later."

Thus, at first, baby's head "may be shaped longer, rounder or flatter, depending on the position at birth." Also, said Griffin, "the forehead may often be quite flat and sloping toward the back."

But, don't worry, "In the first few days quite a bit of natural reshaping takes place and baby will begin to look better in a day or so," he promises.

As for those two soft spots on the baby's head where the bones have not yet come together (they're called fontanels); "the smaller one," according to Dr. Griffin, "disappears rather soon," but the other "usually takes one year to one-and-a-half to close." It's just nature's way.

To a mother who wants to know: "Does it hurt baby to cry?" Dr. Griffin's reply is "Depends on what's going on." Among the many reasons for a crybaby may be a messy diaper or a tummy ache.

In the latter case, cry-language translates into: "Sit me in your arms and burp me." Causing discomfort may be an overly-filled or an empty tummy, or perhaps, he said, "baby's just tired and needs to cry himself to sleep." All babies are going to do some crying, anyway, Griffin points out . . .or they wouldn't be card-holding babies, would they?

"Is hiccoughing a bad sign?" elicits this answer: "No, most healthy new babies have periodic episodes of hiccoughing which cause no difficulty at all."

YET, ANOTHER frequent question, "How do I know when my baby is hungry?" gets answered with a no-nonsense;"If it's been a while since the last feeding — and the baby starts yelling." It's a pretty good assumption that when these two factors converge, baby wants vittles. "A demand schedule," according to Griffin, "makes more sense than feeding a baby on a strict clock schedule."

As for that all-important first question: "Is everything all right?" the answer, more than likely, will be "yes." Some important factors contributing to baby's well being, notes the institute, have been the improvement of maternal health and reduction of birth defects through high quality comprehensive maternity and infant care provided by public and private health programs in recent years.

Most significant has been the dramatic drop in the nation's infant mortality rate from about 65 deaths per 1000 live births in 1930 to less than a third of that toll. Today, childbirth is easier, delivery is safer and more babies are born healthier than ever before — as a result of this century's advances in public health, safety and medicine.

MR. AND MRS. TIMOTHY B. TEMPLE
To live in Larkspur

T. B. Temple Weds Miss Shellhammer

Katherine Louise Shellhammer of Bowling Green, Ohio, became the bride of Timothy Bruce Temple of Larkspur in a ceremony last night at Prout Chapel in Bowling Green.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ray J. Shellhammer of Bowling Green, and the bridegroom is the son of Thomas P. Temple of Toledo, Ohio, and the late Mrs. Temple.

Maid of honor for her sister was Christine Shellhammer of Bowling Green, and Mark Beck of Hollywood was the best man.

Katherine graduated from Bowling Green High School and attended Bowling Green State University. The bridegroom's schools are DeVilbiss High School in Toledo and Bowling Green State University. He is employed by the Emporium in San Francisco.

The bridegroom's sisters are Rebecca Lois Temple of Toledo and Mrs. Terry Ann Temple Jacobson of Puchendorf, Germany.

The newlyweds will live in Larkspur.

SANDRA P. STANLEY
December wedding

Wedding In Anaheim Is Planned

A Dec. 23 wedding in Anaheim is planned by Sandra Paulette Stanley and Brian Victor Steen-Larsen, both of Pocatello, Idaho.

The future bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon F. Stanley of Anaheim. She is the sister of T. Brent Stanley of Anaheim and a graduate of Katella High School in Anaheim. Sandra is a senior at Idaho State University.

Brian is the son of Mrs. Maria Steen-Larsen of Woodacre and the late George H. Steen-Larsen. Steven James Steen-Larsen of Sonoma is his brother.

He graduated from Drew School in San Francisco, the California Maritime Academy in Vallejo, College of Marin and Headl's College of Engineering.

Christmas Card Sales Aid Blind

Marin Delta Gamma Alumnae are selling Christmas cards as a benefit for national and local aid to the blind projects.

Half of the cost of the cards goes to the projects, members said.

Manhattan Is Scene Of Insomniac Tour

When Colonel Albert A. Pope of Boston commissioned the first American bicycle — a 70 pound affair — from a sewing machine company back in 1877; it is unlikely that he saw it having any effect on insomnia.

The fact is that, recently, some 10 intrepid — and sleepless New York cyclists covered 14 miles of the city's streets and parkways in the Third Insomniac Bicycle Tour of Manhattan. Ranging in age from 16 to 60, they started their tour at 2:30 in the morning and ended it some five hours later.

WHAT'S YOUR REAL ESTATE PROBLEM?

Dear Mrs. Taylor:
I have had a lot of bad luck the past three years and I'm going to have to sell my house to stay in business. A neighbor has offered to buy my home at a price I feel is downright robbery. I haven't turned him down yet because I must do something soon.
Is there any other way that you know of for me to sell in a hurry and still get more than he is offering me? F.G.

Dear F.G.:
There may be. Of course, I don't know what your property is worth. It apparently isn't worth as much to your neighbor as it is to you. Is it possible you both may be wrong?
It would be best for you to consult a qualified real estate investment specialist in your area. After appraising your property, he may have an investment buyer who will pay more than the neighbor, even though it may not be as much as you want. Perhaps he could represent you with the neighbor and negotiate a better price for you than you can for yourself. This is often the case. He knows many ways to solve such problems as yours other than the customary outright sale method, and maybe one of those methods will obtain the money you need right now, and still bring you a higher price than the neighbor is willing to pay.
In any event, all you can expect in your circumstances is the best price possible in the shortest possible time. It is a matter of need and benefits to you that you have to consider — not just a desired price. Sincerely, L.J.T.

Hero Worship Truly Strange, A Very Special Time In Life

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I had to chuckle at the letter from "Donny Forever." Sympathetically. This young girl brought many thoughts of my own "hero," and I'd like to let her know she's not alone.

I am 17 and have been "in love" with a young actor I'll call "Mike" ever since I was 13, but now he's just a pleasant thought. I'm reaching out for my own real Mike, whoever he may be, and I don't need my dreams so much anymore.

As you said in your answers, Helen and Sue, it was and still is comforting for me to have a make-believe someone who always says the right things, never makes me feel awkward or dumb, and is waiting there when my imagination calls for him. "Mike" heard all my problems, worries, triumphs — and he never once laughed at me. He'll always have a special place in my heart and mind, though he'll never know he was there.

Tell "Donny's Girl" that she will outgrow it but she'll never forget him. Hero worship is truly a strange phenomenon in learning to love, but I think no girl should be without it. It's a very special time in her life. — MIKE'S GIRL

HELEN AND SUE:

Do I ever know how "Donny Forever" feels! Last year it was "David Forever" with me, and every time I saw him in the Partridge Family I got terrible pains in my stomach. But after awhile I realized he was just human and not perfect. I still dig on his records but I'm not madly in love anymore.

Believe me, "D.F." will enjoy Donny more when she cools off. And it's a lot easier on the stomach! — UNDERSTANDING

RAP:

You asked to hear it from other parts of the country on what those leather knotted bracelets mean. My friends and I use them for good luck charms. If you wear one for a year without taking it off you're supposed to get five years of good luck. Maybe that includes "Keeping Bears Away," I don't know. — H.T.H., TEXAS

HELEN AND SUE:

The leather strap tied in a knot around your wrist or ankle doesn't mean anything bad in our Midwest town. You're supposed to make a wish, tie the leather on, leave it on for a year, and your wish will come true. I'm in my 11th month. — LEATHER STRAP LOVER

DEAR RAP:

A leather bracelet means you take drugs, and the number of knots is the diffarent kinds of dope you've taken.

Maybe they don't scare bears away or attract wolves, but they sure do attract pushers. — J.A. (OUT WEST)

RAP:

They're called "S" or "W" bracelets around here, for good reason. The knots are your score with guys. — FROM WASHINGTON

H AND S:

The knots in the leather bracelet are for how many guys are important to you. If one of them breaks his knot — it means true love. It doesn't mean a "done time" thing around here. — PENNSYLVANIA

RAP:

I'm in the Jesus movement, and the three knots in my leather bracelet mean "Father, Son and Spirit." I have another with just one knot — that means I am a person, not a "freak." — A FRIEND

RAP:

Those leather "thingies" have no universal meaning. A girl and I exchanged ours as "friendship straps." Like the Peace Symbol, they mean what you believe they mean. — TENNESSEE GIRL

DEAR GIRL:

You can say that again. See above. — HELEN AND SUE

Ceramics Give Floors New Impact

Floors continue to provide decorating drama in the home.

Newest impact comes from ceramic tiles with lines that, for the first time, include contemporary patterns in herringbone, cane, houndstooth and geometric designs.

One handsome design is a large circle, another is a quartet of circles that is available in colorful contrasts.

Some tiles may be put together to make interesting designs. For example, four tiles in an arc pattern may be laid to form a large circle or octagon shape.

The demand created by an era that prefers pattern to plain surfaces is the reason behind these innovative tile patterns, say spokesmen for the Tile Council of America.

SEW SIMPLE

A Shirtwaist Pattern For 'Not So Skinnies'

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by the Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

Everywhere I look I see the shirtwaist style, whether it's for daytime or for evening clothes. I don't have a bad figure. However, my waistline just won't stand for the excess bulk in most shirtwaist patterns. Can you suggest a shirtwaist pattern that will help us "not so skinnies" as you put it?

MRS. MARTHA C.

DEAR MRS. M.C.,

You must examine the lines of the pattern carefully. I find those patterns that have fullness above and below the waistline especially difficult to wear unless you are extremely slender. You will find many patterns that have an eased bodice and a fitted skirt, or a fitted bodice and a full skirt. Decide which part of your body can be fitted, and use that as your guideline for pattern selection.

I have found a pattern that I think is extremely attractive and slenderizing. It is fitted throughout the midsection. There are large tucks on the wrong side of the fabric. When the tucks end, you have low pleats in the skirt. This pattern would work beautifully whether it is short or long, and can be worn with or without a belt. It is a Simplicity pattern and available from size 8 to size 16.

DEAR EUNICE,

When I make a suit or a coat, I don't like the finished edge of the collar and lapels. They never seem to lay flat.

MRS. Y.J.

DEAR MRS. Y.J.,

After stitching any faced or outer edges, you must grade the seams. Trim both seams to one half inch, then trim the facing seam another eighth of an inch. This grading of seams avoids a ridge when garment is pressed.

Next, press the faced edges open on the point presser of your Tailor Trix pressing board. After the seams have been pressed open, baste them together, keeping the facing edge slightly to the back of the front edge, so that it won't have a chance to roll out and show, which is the first sign of an inexperienced dressmaker.

After the faced edges have been basted, press with a dampened press cloth using a rather hot iron. While the pressed edge is still slightly damp, slap the edges firmly with your pounding block.

MRS. J. H. Shelton of San Diego is this week's Tailor Trix winner for her sewing suggestion:

Plant Evergreens

Fall is a good time to plant evergreens.

"My mother gave me this suggestion to pass on to your readers. Use a thick sliver of soap for transferring pattern markings to fabric. It is more satisfactory than tailor's chalk or dressmaker's carbon because it can easily be brushed away and, of course, it washes out."

DEAR EUNICE,

I am making a dinner dress of sheer matte jersey. The bodice is fitted, but the long skirt is full. I've tried it on and the skirt pulls the bodice down and the matte jersey is so sheer that any undergarment I wear shows unattractively. Should I underline the bodice? If so, what should I use?

NANCY S.

DEAR NANCY:

I have examined many expensive gowns to see how the designers treat this type of fabric. They use a double layer of the sheer matte jersey for the bodice only. I would suggest you carefully baste the two layers of fabric together and also baste through the center of any darts. Now treat the two layers as one. By using the same fabric, you will still have the effect of the knit. It's better not to use a stable woven fabric with a soft, stretchable knit.

You will find that the extra layer of knit gives the bodice enough body to hold the weight of the skirt. It also acts as a covering for your bra and prevents the seams and straps from showing.

An extra precaution for this type of gown is to use a strip of grosgrain ribbon to act as a "stay" for the waistline. This should be tacked lightly to any seams or darts on the inside of the waist, leaving the ends free about 3 inches each side of the center back zipper. You can place a hook and eye on each end of the grosgrain ribbon and hook it together before zipping up your zipper. This prevents too much strain on the zipper which often causes the fabric to separate and look very unattractive at the waistline area.

Low Income Families Shop More Together

NEW YORK (UPI) —Husbands from lower income families are more likely to accompany their wives to the supermarket than those from higher income families, according to the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

In families with incomes of $10,000 or more, 26 per cent of the working wives and 15 per cent of the full time homemakers reported their husbands accompany them most of the time when shopping. These figures rise to 35 per cent and 41 per cent in families with incomes between $5,000 and $10,000 and to 55 per cent and 56 per cent where incomes are under $5,000.

Joan E. Carruthers Is Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hugh Carruthers of Kentfield have announced the engagement of their daughter, Joan Elizabeth Carruthers, to Douglas Keith Ashby of Palo Alto.

A late November or early December wedding is being planned.

Joan is the sister of Richard Scott Carruthers and the granddaughter of Mrs. Richard James Smith of San Francisco.

She is a graduate of Redwood High School, attended Boston University and was graduated from the University of California at Berkeley. Joan is working toward a teaching credential at California State University, San Jose.

Douglas is the son of Richard Ashby of Greensburg, Pa., formerly of Kentfield. He is the brother of Susan and Lawrence Ashby and the grandson of Mrs. Roy Farley of Aptos.

He attended Menlo School and is a graduate of Redwood High School and Middlebury College. He was graduated from Stanford University Law School in June.

Farm Seminar Won By Tomales Student

Eileen Pozzi, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pozzi of Tomales, has been named state winner in a seminar sponsored by the Marin County Farm Bureau and will now compete in the national seminar in Chicago on Oct. 29.

Eileen, a senior, is active in many organizations and an honor student at Tomales High School, according to Earl Smith, agriculture advisor at the school. She became a state winner at the seminar for her topic of various phases of safety. The seminar was held in Copperopolis (Calaveras County) from Sept. 24 to 28.

'SOS' Series Features Dr. Hicks

The "SOS — Stress in Our Society" lecture series at the College of Marin will continue Oct. 17 with a talk on adolescence by Dr. Philip S. Hicks, a consultant and teacher, at 7:30 p.m. in Olney Hall.

Cosponsored by the college and the Marin Mental Health Association, the series has consistently drawn capacity crowds. Dr. Hicks's lecture is the fifth in the eight-part program.

He will discuss adolescence as an important stage of development in the life cycle, emphasizing the problems of adolescents as they relate to the individual, the family and the society.

Dr. Hicks received his training at Boston University, the Institute for Psychosomatic and Psychiatric Research and Training in Chicago and the Langley-Porter Clinic in San Francisco. He has taught at California State University, San Francisco, and has worked as consultant to various Bay Area agencies.

'Orbiting Trash' Treaty Is Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate voted 67-0 Friday in favor of a treaty to make nations responsible for orbiting satellites that become trash.

The treaty provides that nations are liable for damages to persons and property caused when any object it has launched into space falls to earth.

Reports Of International Catskin Sales Are Probed

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — An international market is developing in the skins of domestic cats, with a San Francisco fur dealer among those offering fifty cents per skin, according to Belton Mouras of the Animal Protection Institute in Sacramento.

Investigators for the Institute, posing as fur sellers, received similar offers from dealers in Sacramento and in Memphis, Tenn., Mouras said.

"We started our investigation upon receipt of a dispatch from Coro, Venezuela, to the effect that a group of doctors and bankers proposed development of a farm for 60,000 cats to give employment to 100 persons and to take advantage of the offered price of two skins for one U.S. dollar," he said.

The organizers added that the farm would also breed 200,000 mice, for the dual purposes of developing feed for the cats and for making fertilizer.

As the research of the Institute widened, it came into possession of an advertisement of 58 international fur auctions to be conducted at the Fur Palace in Leningrad, U.S.S.R., with one category stipulating five thousand skins of domestic cats.

"Our investigators were told by the California fur retailers that the skins of cats from the various city pounds were not satisfactory, as the cats had to be in prime physical condition to bring 50 cents each," Mouras said.

"We were also told that it takes 30 cat skins to make a fur coat, that the skins were also used for gloves, and that the best cat skin season is from November to February."

The Institute said it had no knowledge that the trade is illegal, a point which is being checked along with the manner of killing the cats, to ascertain whether the practices are humane or otherwise.

Gem Theft Hearing Is Scheduled

A preliminary hearing for two Ignacio residents charged in connection with jewelry stolen from a San Rafael home last week has been scheduled for Oct. 19 in Marin Municipal Court.

Ronald Berg Goodrich, 23, charged with burglary and concealing stolen property, and Carol Ruth Litteral, who faces a stolen property count, pleaded innocent Thursday.

San Rafael police inspectors said Goodrich allegedly sold $1,780 worth of jewelry taken in a Sept. 26 burglary to a San Rafael merchant for $165.

The jewelry was part of $3,830 in possessions taken from the home of Elena M. Foley of Nova Albion Way.

Black Market For Methadone In Area

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A black market in methadone has appeared in San Francisco, but it does not approach the illegal peddling in other cities of the drug used to fight heroin addiction, city coroner Boyd Stephens says.

"We're pretty sure there's a black market, but things here still are fairly primitive compared to eastern cities such as New York," Stephens said Thursday.

While deaths from heroin overdoses over the past two years have run at about 60 per year, there were only two deaths as a result of methadone overdoses for the same period, Stephens said.

Nevertheless, Stephens said his office will take additional steps to detect any rise in methadone abuse. He cited two reasons for the black market in the drug which is used to treat some 500 heroin addicts in San Francisco.

First, Stephens said "rumors from the street" indicate many heroin addicts want methadone "because they know what's there. With heroin you never know what it's cut with. There's less chance of an overdose since all methadone now available comes originally from clinics."

Also, methadone, which helps addicts by blocking their craving for heroin, produces an effect like heroin if taken with a hypodermic needle instead of orally, Stephens said. "Some users even think it's nicer," he added.

To check for rises in methadone abuse, Stephens said his office next year will routinely screen the bodies of victims of traumatic deaths for presence of the drug. Now, such screening is limited to bodies of poisoning victims, Stephens said.

Reagan Names Two To San Diego Bench

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —San Diego deputy district attorney Richard J. Hanscom and attorney Mack P. Lovett have been appointed to judgeships in the San Diego municipal court by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Both men are Republicans and will receive annual salaries of $32,273.

Automobile Ads Rapped In Study

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (UPI) — Bess Myerson, New York City's commissioner of consumer affairs, yesterday released a consultant's report showing that only 16 of 54 automobile advertising claims studied appeared to have "an adequate technical basis."

The study by the engineering firm of Bolt, Beranek & Newman, Inc., was requested by the Federal Trade Commission because the agency's experts could not understand 43 per cent of the technical data submitted by automakers to back up their claims, Miss Myerson told a meeting of two consumer groups here.

"In 20 cases, the material submitted was irrelevant, grossly inadequate or actually contradictory to the claim," the report said. "In 15 cases, the material, though relevant, was inadequate to substantiate any reasonable interpretation of the claim. In 16 cases the material submitted appeared to provide an adequate technical basis. In three cases, the material submitted substantiated only a very narrow interpretation of the claim."

Miss Myerson said the report was datej July, 1972, but has not been made public by the FTC. It came to her "through unofficia! sources," a spokesman for the consumer groups said.

Where Are Those Hardy Individuals Of Yesteryear?

Security too often is an illusion. Some swap their whole life for it and then sadly wonder where the years went and for what when they reitre.

We know how security attracts. Recently we ran an ad for a medium staff position and received more than 100 replies. It was a modest job with a modest future, but secure. This ad is for people who want more from life than security.

It's for you if you seek opportunity . . . a chance to test your abilities and talents . . . to take the calculated risk with unlimited opportunities.

It's for exceptional individuals . . much like the erect, proud men who built our nation. It is for those willing to put their best efforts on the line for better rewards.

You can come from any walk of life. Your present occupation may be in automotive retail sales, insurance, furniture, securities, banking, the ministry . . . it doesn't matter. All that really counts is that you have the ambition and desire to stand tall and be something more than you are or can ever hope to be in your present job.

Those selected will become part of one of the most successful real estate firms in California. Our parent company is Dart Industries Inc., California's 20th largest corporation . How's that for security!

If you believe that you match the qualities we seek — or if you know of an exceptional individual you believe would meet our standards. call or write today:

SALES

SALESMEN ARE RARE

YOU HAVE TO FIND THEM

ONE AT A TIME

Certified Laboratories is looking for a special kind of person — not a specialized set of skills.

Our many faceted business involves the manufacture and sale of specialty chemicals and related product lines to the industrial, institutional, and commercial markets, and we needS7outstanding people in sales and sales management. The backgrounds of our people are varied; some are experienced salesmen, some not. We are interested in the person and are willing to invest our time, money and effort in training the right person to become successful.

If you can work well under normal business pressures, make decisions, and learn to lead others, Certified Laboratories can offer you an outstanding career opportunity now.

High weekly drawing account against an excellent commission structure. The average income of our salesmen their first year is excellent and they have a growth potential dependent only upon their own ability. Rewards are directly proportional to individual effort.

We have been growing at a 20% rate annually for the past ten years and intend to continue. Thus, at Certified Laboratories you don't stand in line for opportunity; your future is limited only by yourself. No previous sales or technical background necessary for the right person.

If interested, we would like to talk with you.

Please CALL COLLECT,

LOU SCHWARTZ

CHOOSE A SMALL COMMUNITY!

Park Terrace is a small group of townhouses, separated from the pleasant shops of downtown Mill Valley by a shallow stream and a growth of trees.

The 2 bedroom homes with 1¾ baths and a separate dining room are built with brick fireplaces, beamed ceilings and spacious private patios. A sunny loft adds a den or third bedroom. On level ground within easy commute to San Francisco, most of these homes have already been sold to young professionals.

Almost like 2 separate buildings on a large level lot. Separate entries with entry halls. 2 large bdrms. in each unit. All elec. kitchens. Hardwood floors, air conditioning. Living room with beam ceilings and brick fireplaces. Big yard. Separate laundry rooms. Big courtyard for extra parking plus garages. Both units have downstairs storerooms that could easily be expanded to make family room or 2 extra bdrms. in each unit. 1 unit has new w/w carpeting and has been completely repainted, would make excellent owners' unit. Ideally located. Quiet neighborhood, off Sir Francis Drake Blvd. $54,950.

ISN'T GOOD SERVICE WONDERFUL?
Our service is "late" but nice. Marin commuters have found it very convenient that our service department is now open till 7 pm. Monday thru Friday. In most cases we can give your VW a maintenance or tune-up by 7 pm if you come in by 5 pm. Call our private service line 388-5230 and give us a vote for "late" service.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Ex-Smoker Politician Has A Gripe—SMOKE—Filled Rooms

P.Y.H. writes: "I am a 45-year-old politician with a gripe. Last year I quit smoking, but my work takes me into many smoke-filled rooms. On leaving a meeting, my eyes burn and I cough as much as I did before I quit smoking. Is there any health hazard to inhaling secondhand smoke?"

There is no agreement on this problem. A room or car with several smokers can raise the carbon monoxide concentration of the air to and over the limits set by the government for occupational levels. Smoke fumes may create temporary alterations in vision and hearing, but nothing serious. The carbon monoxide replaces the oxygen and, at worst, affects the heart and breathing. Inhaling secondhand smoke has not been shown to increase the risk of developing lung cancer, chronic bronchitis, emphysema, or heart disease.

ACCORDING TG the surgeon general, Dr. Jesse L. Steinfeld, a recent Japanese study of 265,-118 men confirms what we already knew — cigaret smoking is deadly. The mortality from lung cancer shows a direct relationship to the number of cigarets smoked daily. For those who smoke less than 10 a day, the chances increase from 2.7 times in nonsmokers to 24.8 times among two-pack-a-day users.

In Britain, smoking cigarets is considered to be the most important predisposing facor in lung cancer, chronic bronchitis, and emphysema. It is also regarded to be an important factor in causing coronary heart disease and cancers of the mouth, larynx, esophagus, and urinary bladder. The English also have reasons to believe that smokers with peptic ulcer, pulmonary tuberculosis and cirrhosis of he liver have more trouble getting well.

DOES IT HELP to stop smoking? Evidence shows that it does, but it depends upon how long and how much the person smoked. It has helped when an older person is involved. Many smokers stop coughing after they quit, but the lung damage created by years of heavy smoking may not be corrected. The death rate of ex-smokers decreases steadily with the passage of time and approaches that of non-smoker after it has been stopped for 10 years.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

WILL POWER AND COLD TURKEY

E. P. writes: Is it true that it is too much of a strain on the system to give up beer and cigarets all at once?

REPLY

No, except that the will power may be strained. The situation is not comparable to giving up a drug such as heroin in which the addict develops severe withdrawal symptoms.

LEAD POISONING IN CHILDREN

D. writes: What is the most common cause of lead poisoning in children?

REPLY

Eating flakes of paint from furniture, fences, toys, or the walls of old buildings. The air also contains lead from auto exhausts.

UNBENDING KNEES

J. L. writes: I have trouble with my knees going upstairs and down and getting on and off the bus. Don't tell me it is old age — I am only 83 years young.

REPLY

Number Of Adult Smokers Declines

ATLANTA (UPI)—An Emory University sociologist has reported that the number of cigarette smokers 17 years or age or older has dropped by more than five per cent during the last five years.

Dr. Abbott Ferriss, chairman of the Emory sociology and anthropology department, estimated there are 48.8 million adults still smoking, but that's only 36.9 per cent of the population, compared to 42 per cent who smoked five years ago.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

EDDIE RICKENBACKER: How do you plan to spend your 82nd birthday? That was the question I posed to this great World War I flying "Ace." His reply: "With my family." Knowing that he had miraculously survived a ditching in the Pacific during World War II but instead of refusing to fly became the head of an airline company, did he have a message for Americans from his life's experience? "Yes," said Eddie. "Let the future be guarded by the past." Now living on the East Coast with offices in New York, Eddie will have 82 candles on that cake tomorrow (Oct. 8). Happy Birthday, Eddie!

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS TODAY

1. JUNE ALLYSON is apt to bounce out of bed, bubbling with excitement today on her 49th birthday — all 92 pounds, five-feet-two! The reason: Her career has taken a rebound in the hit musical, "No, No, Nanette." Long accustomed to being starred in movies, she fondly recalls those happy years and her marriage to the late: (A) Clark Gable; (B) Dick Powell; or (C) Tyrone Power.

2. ANDY DEVINE, still being heard on radio and TV doing commercials, reaches age 67 today. The onetime Mayor of Van Nuys (honorary) still enjoys the sunshine of Southern California and watches his old movies on TV, which would include his most acclaimed role with John Wayne in: (A) Covered Wagon; (B) Stagecoach; or (C) The Plainsman.

3. ALFRED WALLENSTEIN, 74 today, is the first native-born American who was educated in this country, to reach the status of full conductor of a major symphony orchestra. Besides leading the orchestras in Cleveland, Chicago, and Seattle, he was for 13 years the conductor of the Philharmonic in: (A) Los Angeles; (B) New York; or (C) Philadelphia.

ANSWERS

1. B (Dick Powell); 2. B (Stagecoach); 3. A (Los Angeles).

Ken Kline
John Daniel Schneider
John Leonard Holder
Patty Gaspari

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

South Could Have Made Game With A Very Simple Play

No bridge player blames himself until he has exhausted all other possibilities. Perhaps that's why South complained about his partner's bidding after he had gone down at four spades on the hand shown today. But every reader of this column will see that South could have made his game by a very simple play.

Opening lead — ♣ 9

FIRES BACK

West opened the nine of clubs, and declarer won in dummy with the king. He promptly led the king of spades from dummy, and East just as promptly took the ace. East fired back the nine of hearts to the ace, and West returned the queen of hearts.

When declarer played the king of hearts from dummy, East ruffed. The defenders now had three tricks safely stashed away, and they eventually got a diamond trick to defeat the contract.

South scolded his partner for bidding four spades but finally agreed that the contract was reasonable. He was just the victim of horrible luck: How could he tell that the hearts would break 6-1?

The victim of horrible luck was North. His bad luck was having a partner who didn't know enough to take 10 cold tricks.

DELAYED TRICK

The time you take a trick is sometimes, but not always, important. In today's hand, the king of hearts is just as useful at the eighth trick as at the fourth trick. To put it another way, the king of hearts isn't needed as a heart trickbut can be used as a winner that disposes of declarer's diamond loser.

When West takes the ce of hearts and returns the queen of hearts, declarer should play low from the dummy. West continues with the ten of hearts, and South plays low from the dummy and ruffs in his hand.

Now declarer draws trumps and leads the king of hearts to get rid of a diamond. The rest is easy.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 1-no trump (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠- 10 9 8 7 4 2
♥- J 7
♦- 6 5 2
♣- 6 3.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two spades.

You expect partner to pass, and you hope to fare better at spades than he would at no-trump. Your hand should be good for three spade tricks if spades are trumps, but it might be completely worthless at no-trump.

Old Sea Monster Being Mounted

DALLAS (AP) — Bob H. Slaughter, a paleontologist at Southern Methodist University, is in the process of mounting an 80 million-year-old sea monster found in early April near here.

Slaughter says the remains he is reconstructing are those of a plesiousaur, a sea creature which had fins instead of feet. He says the monster lived in a seaway which linked the Gulf of Mexico with the Pacific Northwest.

No Money In This Business

Pair's New Store 'A Ministry'

By MARY LEYDECKER

The partners in one of Marin's newest businesses — which opened this week in quarters formerly occupied by Arthur Murray and later a waterbed firm — have absolutely no expectations of making money.

Furthermore, they expect to have to continue working at other jobs to keep the business in existence.

Nor does this mean that Kent Philpott and Clifford Silliman have an unbusinesslike approach. They simply view their new "Christian General Store" as a ministry rather than a means of earning a living.

Because the only store in Marin selling religious literature (except for two local seminaries' book shops) closed about a year ago Silliman and Philpott, both active in what they call "interdenominational ministry," conceived their plan.

Although they work mostly with young "Jesus freaks," the two see their enterprise as of use to the conventional churches in Marin.

"We chose the name Christian General Store because we didn't want to be limited," Philpott, a graduate of Golden Gate Baptist Seminary, said.

The result of a year's planning is a spacious, cheerful facility on the second floor of a building on the Miracle Mile in San Rafael which also houses a Japanese restaurant.

Left from Arthur Murray days are fancy chandeliers, large mirrors on the walls, a polished hardwood floor and comfortable furniture.

New are attractive shelves built by the two men and other volunteers and a fresh coat of paint. (Philpott and some of his friends support their ministry through housepainting and other such work.)

Also new is a big coffee pot, from which all visitors are invited to share a cup of coffee.

There is a bulletin board listing activities of Jesus freaks or more conventional religious events. The shelves contain literature, both hardcover and soft, ranging from publications of the prestigious Oxford firm to books on street ministry. There are bumper stickers proclaiming such slogans as "God is alive."

The store also offers handcrafts made by people who live in what the two call "Christian houses." These residences, which offer homes along with the Christian message to young people off the streets, are managed by persons like Silliman. He and his wife are house parents of Berachah House in Petaluma.

Another such house in Mendocino County has provided jewelry for the shop — the members fashion abalone and other materials into crosses and other Christian symbols.

Philpott said anyone who wants to sell handwork may place it at the shop, which will add 25 per cent to the price for overhead.

He and Silliman will not take salaries out of the store, however, as "we consider this a ministry."

They do not expect a lot of "street traffic," because of their second floor location but describe their mission as one to local churches and Christians.

The project was conceived about a year ago when Silliman received an unexpected windfall for his ministry. "A guy showed up on a motorcycle (at Berachah House). He was a Jewish kid from the East Coast. He stayed and became a Christian," Silliman related.

When the youth was given $3,000 as a college graduation present, he turned it over to the ministry.

"We didn't know what to do with it at first," Philpott said, but later he and Silliman decided on the bookstore.

Through their jobs — housepainting, rototilling and trash hauling, they added another $1,000 to the fund. Then for seven months they negotiated for the store's quarters.

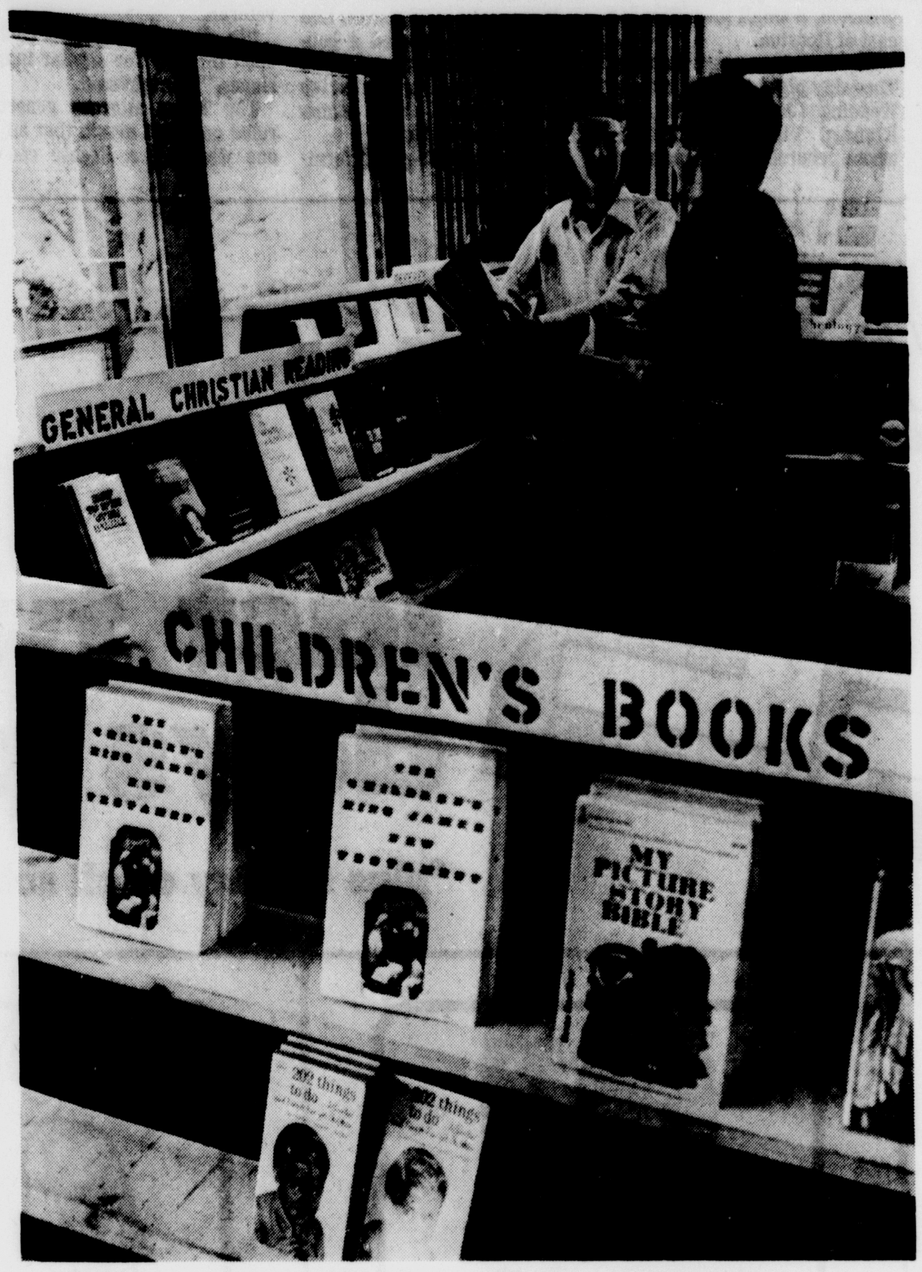

Half a dozen local churches and their members have helped the two men since then — one benefactor paid the first and last month's rent. Another supporter placed an ad in the Independent-Journal.

Volunteers, along with Philpott and Silliman, will staff the store. "We only have about half the books we have ordered," Silliman said, since several publishers have been very slow.

There also is a shelf of free literature — used books and paper tracts.

On Wednesdays the store offers free delivery of any book, aimed especially at shut-ins or others without transportation and for large orders.

"This is not a coffee house or a drop-in place," Philpott said, but he invited Marin Christians to come in, browse around and sit down and have a cup of coffee.

New Slate For Marin Deanery

Delegates from all Marin County Catholic churches, composing the Marin Deanery Council, have elected new executive officers for the council.

They are: Chairman, Peter Allen Smith of Kentfield; vice chairman, Dr. James Pelfini of San Rafael; secretary, Sister Therese Morneau of Fairfax; treasurer, Joseph Baumann of San Anselmo; delegate to Archdiocesan Pastoral Council, Albert T. Olivier of Novato.

Smith succeeds Thomas Kelly of Fairfax.

Women Welcome In Ministry, Says ALC

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI)—The American Lutheran Church (ALC) said Thursday night that women should be "welcomed to serve in the professional ministry."

The 1,000 delegates to the ALC's sixth general convention approved a formal statement to that effect, differing strongly from the opinions of the Missouri Synod whose members feel that women should not be ordained.

The ALC statement about women in the church said nothing in the Scriptures forbids women being ordained into the clergy. It proposed that women be encouraged to take a more active part in church leadership and said in part:

"Channels should be opened whereby more women can be informed of, motivated, and welcomed to serve in the professional ministry of the ALC."

Despite the discrepancy in opinion of women between the ALC and the Lutheran Church in America (LCA) on one side and the Missouri Synod on the other, several speakers mentioned close cooperation among the three groups.

The convention opened Wednesday and will run through next Tuesday.

English Teacher To Give Message

Eb Andrew, an English teacher at Redwood High School, will speak from the pulpit at Lucas Valley Community Church for three Sundays this month in Rev. Dale Nystrom's absence. He will preside over the 9 a.m. contemporary celebration and the 10:30 a.m. traditional worship services. High School youth will be participating in the contemporary services.

Andrew is an ordained minister, having received his bachelor of divinity degree from Berkeley Baptist Divinity School. He finished a year's pastorate this summer at Jackson Hole, Wyo.

Nystrom and his wife and other church members will take a 22-day tour of Europe and the Mid-East, leaving tomorrow.

Korean Believers

SEOUL (UPI) — South Korea has about 7.2 million Buddhist followers, 4.4 million Confucian adherents, and 4 million Christians, including 3.2 million Protestants and 780,000 Roman Catholics, according to an official estimate.

Mormon Elders Sustain Lee

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The elders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon) yesterday sustained 73-year-old Harold B. Lee as the youngest president of the church in four decades.

In a series of eight votes in the silver-domed tabernacle, the priesthood and general membership raised right hands to confirm the choice of Lee and his two counselors.

N. Eldon Tanner, who presided over the vote, said it was unanimous.

Preacher With A Scratch Pad

LEONARD, Minn. (AP) — With a pen n one hand and the Scriptures in the other, Jim Howard is an advocate of Christ — both with words and sketchpad.

Sundays he preaches to his little congregation of 30 to 50 people. On weekdays, he draws pictures. Some illustrate the word of God. Some simply are of a commercial nature — to provide "daily bread" for his wife and family.

Howard's illustrations are seen on covers and pages of books. They show up on letterheads and stationery.

Before 1980, pen and ink sketches by the man from the "backwoods" of Minnesota will be seen by millions who read the new English version of the Bible.

Howard has been commissioned to illustrate the New and Old Testament being published by the American Bible Society. He calls it "by far the largest, most exciting and rewarding work I have ever done."

The tall, gentle preacher works each day in an old hunting shack near his rural home. The Bible he is illustrating will incorporate the New Testament version called "Good News for Modern Man" into a complete new Bible. His drawings will be page size. "It's creative work," Howard says. "They aren't telling me what o draw. What they want is totally original and unique work."

A quiet and unassuming man, he walks in the woods with his dogs each morning. He reads the Scriptures at the beginning of each day.

"I feel," he says, "like that is daily food."

While he partakes of his "food," Howard is likely to jot down quick notes that show up later in sermons or as illustrations.

He chops wood to keep the house warm. He keeps a pair of snowshoes on the wall of the living room and uses them to go for supplies if the roads are blocked.

He and his wife, Joyce, share the responsibilities for their young family — Andrea, 8, Jimmy, 6, Senja, 4, and Peter, 1.

Howard sticks to his drawing board most weekdays.

Mrs. Howard works with him at Clover Chapel, which is independent and inter-denominational. Every other Friday night they have a group of young people — called Crusaders — come to their home.

With their children in bed, the Howards play games, sing hymns and read the Bible with the 15 to 20 young people who show up.

'Coping With Change' Series To Begin

"Coping With Change," a six-session program led by Rob Miller will discuss change in people and their families on successive Thursdays, beginning next week, at 8 p.m. at the Christian Education Building of Christ Presbyterian Church, 620 Del Ganado Road, Terra Linda.

Miller said the series will focus on understanding drug use and approaches that might be taken to handle its related problems within the family unit.

Our 4th Right Should Be To Die With Dignity

By LOUIS CASSELS
U. P. INTERNATIONAL

In the Declaration of Independence, America's founding fathers affirmed the belief that every human is endowed by God with inalienable rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Had they foreseen the capacities of modern medicine, they might have added a fourth basic human right: the right to die with dignity.

Dying is a universal human experience. Like all other experiences, it has content and quality. It can be done bravely or cravenly; reluctantly or with serene acceptance. It can take place in the warmly supportive setting of a home and a family, or in the coldly impersonal atmosphere of an institution.

Time was —and not so long ago, at that —when most people died in their own beds, surrounded by their loved ones, in full knowledge that their time had come.

Today, death is more likely to occur in a hospital or nursing home. The patient, if conscious, is surrounded during most of his waking hours by professional personnel who all too often feel it is part of their duty to "keep up the spirits" of the dying by deceiving them about the gravity of their condition.

Many patients are denied any knowledge of the approach of death because they are in a comatose condition for weeks, months or even years before their hearts finally stop beating. Run enough tubes from the patient's body to modern medical gadgetry and he can be kept technically alive long after he has ceased to think, feel, understand or interact as a sentient person.

Dr. Melvin J. Krant, a physician who heads Boston's Equinox Institute, says people who die in institutions have "little opportunity to be assisted in working out meaningful details of the dying experience."

The whole focus of institutional attention is on keeping the patient technically alive as long as possible instead of respecting his right to die with dignity. All too often, says Krant, a dying person is treated in an institution "as a leper, rather than as a man or woman reaching the end of a personal life".

Krant believes several things must be done to restore the possibility of a dignified dying experience.

First, he urged that both children and adults be "educated for death" by schools and churches. They should be helped to face the inevitability and "naturalness" of death as something that will happen sooner or later to everyone they love —and to themselves.

Second, health insurance regulations need to be changed so that families are not under tremendous financial pressure to put a gravely ill relative in a hospital or extended care facility. This would reopen the option of dying at home in one's own bed, a method of departure for which many people have a stronger preference.

Third, Krant says, we need to "review and explore the meaning of control of one's dying." By this, he does not necessarily mean people should be encouraged to end their own lives by suicide, or that terminally ill people be ushered out by deliberate medical execution.

Since most people move slowly into death, their right to "control" their dying experience really means that they are allowed to retain power of decision "over those few remaining choices and options" which may determine how long they'll linger or where they'll die.

All major Christian and Jewish bodies uphold Krant's contention that there is no moral reason why any person should be be compelled to undergo extraordinary medical measures rather than peacefully accept a natural death.

But most doctors are imbued with the idea they should never stop fighting to maintain technical life —no matter how hopeless or costly the battle may be, or how the patient or his family may feel about the matter. Thus contemporary society often robs people of the right to control their own dying and thus to die with dignity.

Father James Adams (left) of the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin receives keys to the Church in Ignacio from Father Joseph Kennedy as their congregations last Sunday shared the Ignacio church for the first time. The Greek Orthodox church has purchased property near the Church in Ignacio, and will use the church until its own facilities are built, with construction to begin next year. The Greek Orthodox church for the past three years has been using facilities at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo. Looking on is Father John Yaryan, Kennedy's assistant.

Vice Boss Seeks Fraud Charge In Men's Marriage

By E. MICHAEL MYERS.

HOUSTON (UPI)—The city's vice squad chief said Friday he would press fraud charges against a frail female impersonator and a burly ex-football player who were married in a chapel —he in a tuxedo and he in a gown.

Polica Lt. J.M. Albright said he thought the county clerk who issued the marriage license to the two men was duped and Texas law violated.

"We certainly are going to try to press charges against them and the people that performed it," Albright said. "This is obtaining a document by false pretext."

Richard Cross, the couple's attorney, said the marriage was legal and they planned to ignore the fraud charges.

"There is nothing in Texas law which says the two persons getting married must be of the opposite sex," Cross said. "For there to be fraud they must obtain something of monetary value and there is no provable monetary value to that slip of paper."

William Ert wore a miniskirt, a wig and lipstick when he and Antonio Molina applied for their marriage license Wednesday at Wharton, a small town 60 miles east of Houston.

The two men were married Thursday night at the Harmony Wedding Chapel by the Rev. Richard Vincent of Dallas, whose church offers services for homosexuals.

For the 11-minute formal ceremony, Ert, 30, of Buffalo, N.Y., wore a blonde wig and was dressed in a flowing white wedding gown with a train five yards long. He carried a bouquet of artificial pink and white flowers. Ert was hair stylist for the late actress Jayne Mansfield from 1963 to 1966.

Molina, 33, a 235-pound former football player in high school at Brownsville, Tex., and at the University of Houston, wore a black tuxedo with tails and a white bow tie. He is a Navy veteran.

"In all probability, this could open the way for similar marriages," Albright said.

The Texas attorney general ruled only last month that anyone who had a license could marry, but he instructed county clerks not to issue licenses to persons of the same sex.

"The law says they cannot marry," said Houston District Attorney Carol S. Vance. "They have no marriage at all. The marriage license is just a worthless piece of paper."

Ert and Molina said they would "honeymoon" at an unknown spot.

All Seems Well With Warriors: Star Barry Back

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Rick Barry is back in town, and all seems well again with the Golden State Warriors.

Barry, who started his pro career with the Warriors six years ago and then left for the rival American Basketball Association and promised riches, came home Friday to fulfill the remaining three years of a five-year contract signed in 1970.

"I'm happy to be back," said Barry, "and I hope I can help the team win the (National Basketball Association) championship."

Terms of Barry's contract with the Warriors were not disclosed but it is believed he will get more than the $218,000 a year agreed upon two years ago. "Other considerations" were included but were not revealed.

Barry said he decided to return to the Warriors after conferring all day Tuesday with Warriors owner Franklin Mieuli. Last year Barry played for the ABA New York Nets, but his contract with them was superseded by the pact signed with the Warriors. He had a choice this season of playing with the Warriors or no other team.

"As of now I owe the New York Nets nothing," Barry said. "I was released from my commitment with the Nets. I just didn't want to sit out another year (as he did when he first switched from the Warriors to the ABA)."

Barry led the Warriors to the NBA West division title in 1967, then left to sign with the ABA Oakland team, coached by his father-in-law, Bruce Hale, now the coach at nearby St. Mary's College.

The following year the Oakland Franchise was moved to Washington, D.C. and subsequently to Virginia. Barry never played in Virginia, which traded him to the Nets, a team he helped to the ABA playoffs last season.

During the moving around Barry signed a contract with the Warriors, which he later failed to honor, but a federal court recently ruled he was the property of the Warriors for three more seasons.

Barry was reluctant to leave New York because of lucrative television and commercial sidelines, but Mieuli, who never stopped trying to get him back for the Warriors, finally succeeded—and the guess is it cost him probably more than he could afford to pay, unless the Warriors become a better drawing card with Rick in the lineup alongside Nate Thurmond.

49ers Visit Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — San Francisco's 49ers beat out the Los Angeles Rams by one-half game for the National Football League Western Conference title a year ago and tomorrow they are favored to go a step up in this year's race.

Actually, in 1971, the Rams won all three games against the 49ers but already have lost the pre-season battle and are favored by a touchdown to do it again in the first of two regular season games.

Biggest question mark rests with Rams' quarterback Roman Gabriel and the tendinitis in his right elbow. Should Gabriel come up this 1 p.m. PDT kickoff without an ache in his arm, the Rams could be formidable.

John Brodie, the veteran quarterback of the 49ers, appears in good shape after recovering from a wrist injury suffered when the San Francisco club was surprised by lowly Buffalo 27-20 two weeks ago. In their latest outing, the 49ers whipped New Orleans.

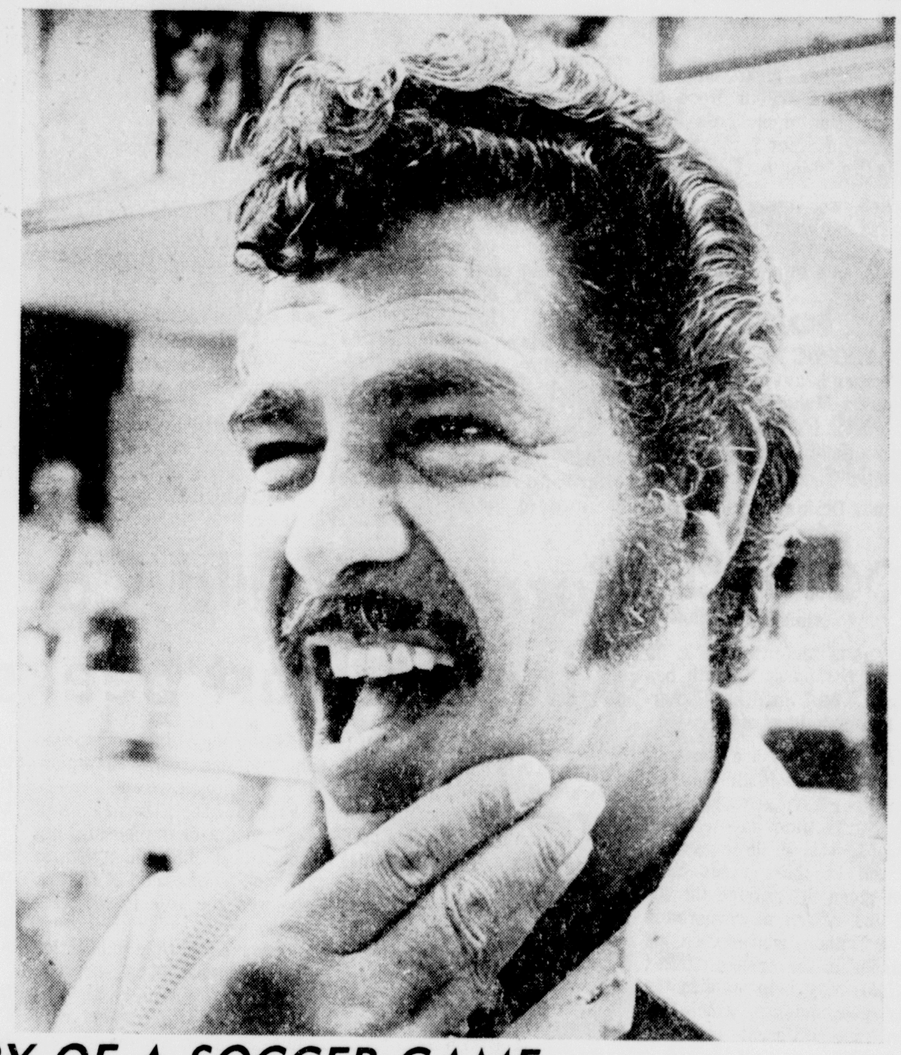

Brodie can become only the second man in NFL history to pass for more than 30,000 yards if he can hit for 124 against the Rams. Baltimore's John Unitas tops the list with 38,657 compared with Brodie's second place total of 29,876.

Place kicker Bruce Gossett, the former Ram now playing with San Francisco, kicked three of four field goal attempts last week and now has seven of eight for the year and a streak of 21 consecutive games in which he has scored a field goal. His 34 points leads the club and the league in scoring.

With a 2-1 record, the 49ers share the division lead with Atlanta. The Rams are one-half game behind at 1-1-1 but must rebound immediately to stay in the race.

Defensively, the 49ers have sacked opposing quarterbacks 11 times and the club held New Orleans to but seven yards net rushing.

A HAIR-RAZING STORY OF A SOCCER GAME

James Bryan, 47, of Mill Valley, cheerfully submitted to the barber's razor yesterday, even though it meant his prized beard would be gone. Bryan coaches seventh and eighth graders at Mill Valley Middle School in soccer. He has two teams — a regular squad of better players and a handicap team. He told the handicap team players he would shave off the beard if they beat the regulars — and they did, 3-2. "The mustache wasn't part of the bargain," said Bryan. "We've got a game with another school coming up. If the handicap team wins that, the mustache goes." Barber was Warren Moran of Warren's Barber Shop in Sausalito.

Seals' Season Starts Tonight

VANCOUVER, B.C. (UPI)—Banking on an improved defense, the California Golden Seals open the National Hockey League season tonight against the Vancouver Canucks.

During the summer, the Seals lost their two top scorers—Gerry Pinder and Bobby Sheehan—and key defenseman Paul Shmyr to the rival World Hockey Association.

Seals General Manager Garry Young fired coach Vic Stasiuk after last season and Young now is coaching the club. He is banking on youngsters in key spots this season.

They include defenseman Stan Weir, who is regarded as one of the better young players in the NHL, and forward Hilliard Graves. Weir, 20, played with Medicine Hat in the junior league last season while Graves, 22, was with Baltimore in the American Hockey League.

If we're going to win, we're going to have to be tough defensively," said Young. "This club has a lot of determination. We played good hockey in the last few exhibition games. I think it's going to be a great season."

Young also is banking on Marshall Johnston to play both wing and defense.

"He's a great penalty killer and he knows how to work the power play," said Young.

Gilles Meloche will start in goal for the Seals while Ivan Boldirev and Stan Gilbertson will join Hilliard on the front line. Captain Bert Marshall anchors the Seals defense.

California finished the exhibition season with a 3-5-1 record.

Jets Play Dolphins In Conference Game

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The New York Jets have had a week to lick their wounds after being dumped by lowly Houston last Sunday and tomorrow should find them a little more aggressive—lest they find their playoff hopes quickly vanishing.

In the key American Football Conference game of the weekend, the Jets, who looked listless, almost pathetic, last week as they suffered their first loss in three outings, take on the unbeaten Miami Dolphins at Shea Stadium.

DEFENSE

Though known for their excellent rushing offense (Larry Csonka, Mercury Morris and Jim Kiick) which is balanced by a very real aerial threat (quarterback Bob Griese to wide receiver Paul Warfield), much of the Dolphins' success this season has been built around its defense which has allowed fewer points (37 in three games) than any of its AFC rivals.

Last week the Dolphins held powerful Minnesota to only 14 points as they edged the Vikings 16-14. Miami's defense has allowed its opponents only five touchdowns and has given up an average of only 246.3 total yards per game.

VULNERABLE

But if the Dolphins' defense has a vulnerable spot it may be in its passing defense where the opposition has completed 53.2 per cent of its attempts for 411 yards and three touchdowns in three games.

And if anyone is capable of exploiting a weak pass defense, Joe Namath is the one.

Namath? who is flanked by the leading AFC rusher, John Riggins, in the backfield (Csonka is second), leads the National Football League in yards gained through the air (910), touchdown passes (9) and average yards gained per pass (11.2).

RECEIVERS

Namath has three excellent targets in tight end Rich Caster and wide receivers Eddie Bell and Don Maynard. And, should

Marin 'Cats In Vallejo Grid Clash

The football season that started so brightly for Marin Catholic High School is getting gloomier and gloomier with each passing week, and no respite is offered by tomorrow night's game, an 8 o'clock encounter with St. Patrick's in Vallejo.

SCOUTS

"We sent some of our kids up there to scout them," said Wildcat coach Bruno Banducci, "and word is they've got a good ball club. They're big and strong, and their backs run hard. They lost to Cardinal Newman (of Santa Rosa) by just a few points, and you know what Cardinal Newman did to us."

Who could forget? The Santa Rosans pummeled Marin Catholic last weekend, 31-8, for the Wildcats' third straight defeat after a season-opening, 25-0 victory over St. Elizabeth of Oakland that now seems so far in the past.

INJURIES

"We've had some more injuries," said Banducci, who can't afford them, having started the season with just 22 players. "Most of the week we had only 15 kids out for practice. We couldn't conduct the practice unless the trainer held the dummy."

WINTERS OUT

Joe Winters, a two-way tackle, will miss the game with pains in his back. Mark Ferrua, a tight end or running back, still has a swollen ankle. 'Cats reserve quarterback Rick Lopez has an injured arm. "A couple of kids missed practice with flu and cold, but they'll play," said Banducci.

"A game on Saturday is won between Monday and Friday," he continued, "but we've had some lousy practices. The situation is bad, and the kids sense it."

Abdul-Jabbar Drug Charge Out

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI)—Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Lucius Allen were scheduled to meet with an assistant to National Basketball Association commissioner Walter Kennedy today to discuss the two players' arrests on drug charges.

Simon P. Gourdine, legal counsel for the league, was to meet with the players and representatives of the Milwaukee Bucks in a fact-finding session on the charges.

Abdul-Jabbar and Allen were picked up in Denver yesterday with two other men, and held in jail five hours on suspicion of possession of marijuana and other drugs.

CLEARED

Abdul-Jabbar was cleared later because "there was insufficient evidence that a crime had been committed," according to Denver District Attorney Jarvis Seccombe.

But Seccombe's office said Allen and one of the other men arrested, Stephen E. Duncan, 23, a University of Missouri student, would be charged Tuesday.

Allen will be charged with possession of marijuana and conspiracy and Duncan with possession of marijuana and other drugs. Charges against the fourth man, Mordecai Cooke, 23, of Seattle, Wash., will not be filed.

MEETING

Abdul-Jabbar and Allen were scheduled to meet with newsmen on their return to Milwaukee from Denver where the Bucks beat the Denver Rockets 130-92 Thursday night in an exhibition game.

But both left the airport hurriedly and Bucks general manager Wayne Embry held a hastily called news conference.

KAREEM ABDUL-JABBAR

and he said the two players had asked him to make a statement for them.

"We are innocent and we are sure the facts will disclose that we are innocent," Embry said for the two. "We are totally apologetic to the club and the fans."

'HASSLED'

Embry described the two players as "remorseful and embarassed" during the plane ride home. He said they didn't want to meet with the newsmen because "of the way they had been hassled all day by the press at the Denver airport."

Embry wouldn't talk about the incident in Denver, but earlier in the day Bucks' president William Alverson issued a statement on the matter.

He said Abdul-Jabbar and Allen had gone to the home of Denver Rockets player Warren Jabali for dinner after the game. He said when they left Jabali's house they were looking for a cab when the car carrying Cooke and Duncan came along and Abdul-Jabbar and Allen accepted the offer of a ride back to the hotel.

CAR STOPPED

Enroute the car was stopped by two police officers because there was no light over the license plate, according to Sgt. Steve Metros of the Denver vice squad.

"The officers detected burning marijuana coming from the car and arrested the four occupants," Metros said. "Small amounts of suspected marijuana and dangerous drugs were recovered from the car."

Abdul-Jabbar, the 7-foot-2 center whom some people call the greatest basketball player in the world, led the NBA in scoring last year. He was voted most valuable player in 1970-71, the year he led the Bucks to the world title.

Indirect Kick Lifts San Rafael

Misak Pirinjian scored on a difficult indirect kick with about 10 minutes gone in the third quarter last night to give San Rafael High School a 1-0 victory over Terra Linda in the Marin County Athletic League's first night soccer game.

In other MCAL action, San Marin upset Drake, 4-2; Novato dumped Marin Catholic, 2-0; and Redwood drubbed Tamalpais, 5-1.

"It was the third consecutive game against Terra Linda in which Misak has scored on an indirect kick," said San Rafael coach Bill Monti. "His consistency is almost superphenomenal."

On an indirect kick, the ball must be touched twice before a goal may be scored. The defensive team usually sets up a cordon around the goal mouth, and the trick is to kick the ball high and low enough to go into the eight-foot goal.

About 300-350 fans witnessed the game at San Rafael High. "It was very successful," said Monti of the night soccer venture.

U.S. Golfer Gains Japan Golf Lead

INZAIMACHI, Japan (UPI)—Gay Brewer of the United States, the 1967 Masters Champion, today fired a brilliant four under par 67 for a one stroke lead over Australian David Graham in the third round of the $300,000 Taiheyo Masters, the world's richest golf tournament.

Brewer, who won the Canadian Open last July and was second by one stroke in the John Player Classic last week in England, shot a 32-35—67 for an eight under par 205 for 54 holes on the 7,166-yard, par 71 Sobu Country Club Course. Perfect sunny weather prevailed in contrast to the daylong rain Friday.

Graham started the day with a four stroke lead over Brewer and Homero Blancas, who were tied for second place after two rounds, shot a 37-35—72 for a seven under par 206 total.

Australia's Graham Marsh was alone in third place as he fired a two under par 69 for a four under par 209.

Lee Trevino, who continued to attract the largest gallery, shot a one under par 70 for a one under par 212 total for ninth place, along with John Miller

Warriors Overhauled By Hairston, Lakers

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI)—Harold (Happy) Hairston converted two free throws with 14 seconds remaining to rally the Los Angeles Lakers to a 109-108 victory over the Golden State Warriors in a National Basketball Association exhibition game Friday night.

The Lakers, winning for the fifth consecutive time, rallied from a 10-point deficit with 3 12 minutes to go. Hairston made the last four points and finished with 21.

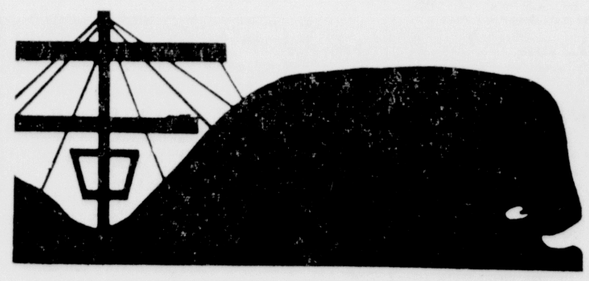

Leroy Ellis, substituting for salary holdout Wilt Chamberlin, led the Lakers with 26 points, one more than Jerry West. Cazzie Russell paced the Warriors with 27.

Rick Barry, signed by the Warriors Friday was on the bench in the first half but did not play. He is expected to be in the lineup tonight when the Warriors and Lakers tangle again tonight at San Diego.

Two key players in the contest were injured—center Nate Thurmond of Golden State and Gail Goodrich of the Lakers.

Hunter, Lolich Discuss Award

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

OAKLAND — Pitching stars Mickey Lolich of Detroit and Jim Hunter of Oakland, the starters in today's opening game of the American League playoffs, disagree about who should receive the Cy Young Award this year as the best pitcher in the league.

And neither picks himself. Lolich favors Wilbur Wood of Chicago; Hunter picks Gaylord Perry, the former San Francisco Giant pitching for Cleveland.

Lolich was upset last year because he thought he should have gotten the award instead of Oakland's Vida Blue.

Boxing

STATELINE, Nev. — Former — Former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali and Bob Foster have agreed tentatively to fight Nov. 21 at a Lake Tahoe hotel.

James Deskin, executive secretary of the Nevada Athletic Commission, said the commission had not approved the bout and had not received signing contracts "but I can't see any stumbling blocks."

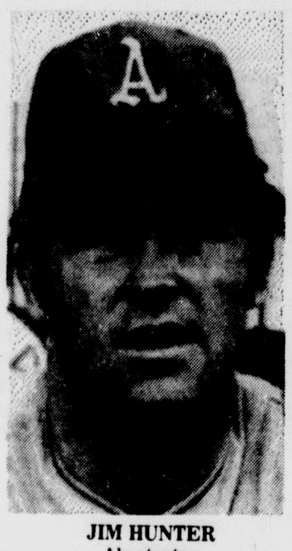

Golf

SAINT-NOM-LA-BRETECHE, France — Arnold Palmer of the United States made one of his famous charges Friday by shooting a four-under-par 68 to jump into a four-way tie for first place in the $33,000 Tournament of Champions golf competition.

Palmer turned in the tournament's best score by making a total of six birdies over the 7,000-yard (6,410-meter) course.

Gary Player of South Africa and Tommy Aaron of the United States repeated their 71 scores of Thursday's opening round to remain tied for the lead.

Spaniard Angel Gallardo also warmed to the course in the Paris suburbs by going around in 70 strokes, two under par, to claim a share of the lead.

TOKYO — Fred Stolle upset John Newcombe, the No. 1 seeded player, today to move into the finals of the $33,000 Pepsi Tournament against Ken Rosewall, who won easily over Cliff Richey.

Stolle lost the first set 6-1 to Newcombe but was able to bounce back and win the second and third sets, 6-3, 6-3.

Rancho Triumphs In Football

By PAUL DWORIN

During the half-time ceremonies of last night's Rancho Cotate High School of Rohnert Park football game, Cougar mascot Marlene Soiland outdueled the Sonoma Dragon and cut off its head.

That was pretty much the story of the game as the Cougars completely severed Sonoma's attack, limiting it to 107 total yards, and dominated the second half to slay the Dragons, 20-0. The Cougars are working on a 13-game winning streak overall and own a 2-0 Sonoma County League mark.

The defense was responsible for two Rancho Cotate scores, as defensive back Ray Jones picked off a Jon Locarnini pass and ran it xack 55-yards for the score, and lineman Gary Balfour intercepted another one on Sonoma's 30-yard line. Six plays later, Bob Haas hit Frank Garrett for the Cougars' final score. Haas' alternate, Eric Mogel hit receiver Ray Logue with a five-yard scoring pass.

56TH YEAR

NHL To Begin Season Tonight

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The National Hockey League, minus a few familiar faces but plus a pair of new franchises, opens its 56th season tonight in the wake of skyrocketing salaries, player raidings and courtroom fireworks triggered by the challenge of the fledgling World Hockey Association.

Already committed to the new league are former NHL superstars Bobby Hull, Derek Sanderson and Gerry Cheevers, while the established league may also be temporarily without its biggest drawing card in Boston's Bobby Orr, who is still mending from offseason knee surgery.

NEW TEAMS

Meanwhile, joining the NHL as the 15th and 16th franchises are the Atlanta Flames and the New York Islanders. Both represent breakthroughs of sorts in that the Flames will be hockey's first major league venture into Dixie while the Islanders give New York the distinction of being the only city to foster two franchises. And, you can make that three if the WHA's Gotham entry, the Raiders, are to be counted.

Inaugurals on tap for tonight include Minnesota at Montreal, Chicago at Toronto, the New York Rangers at Detroit, Atlanta at the New York Islanders, California at Vancouver, Philadelphia at St. Louis and Los Angeles at Pittsburgh.

RANGERS

On the surface, the New York Rangers, least affected by the WHA raids, are given the best chance of unseating the Stanley Cup champion Boston Bruins who lost Sanderson, Cheevers, Johnny McKenzie and Ted Green to the rival league.

The Rangers return the league most potent scoring line of a year ago in Jean Ratelle, Vic Hadfield and Rod Gilbert plus all star defensemen Brad Park and Rod Seiling and the slick goaltending duo of Ed Giacomin and Gilles Villemure. A history of injuries plus a shortage at left wing behind Hadfield appear to be the only factors that could KO the angers hopes for their first NHL crown since 1940.

Boston, when Orr8is ready to play, will again be strong if for no other reason than the explosive high-scoring trio of Phil Esposito-Ken Hodge-Wayne Cashman. But somewhere the Bruins must find a replacement for Cheevers in goal as 37-year old Ed Johnston can't do it alone.

MONTREAL

Should the Rangers fade or the Bruins fail to bounce back from their losses, the ikely eastern division champ and even overall titlist could be the Montreal Canadiens. Les Habs are loaded with scorers in the brothers Mahovlich (Frank and Pete), second year man Guy Lafleur, and Yvan Cournoyer. And All Star Ken Dryden lends strength and finesse at goal.

Hardest hit by the advent of the new league besides Boston were Chicago and Toronto. The Black Hawks lost Hull and that's a pretty good share of the franchise, while the Maple Leafs were stripped of their top two defensemen in Rick Ley and Brad Selwood plus No. 1 goalie Bernie Parent.

TOP CHOICES

Highlight of the two new franchises will likely be the No. 1 and 2 choices of the amateur free agent draft. Both Billy Harris, selected by the Islanders and Jacques Richard, picked by Atlanta, have more than lived up to their advance billing in pre-season.

Of particular note regarding the two new teams is their coaches. The Flames, while opening up shop in a heretofore alien hockey land, will be coached by all-time great Bernie "Boom Boom" Geoffrion while New York's second entry features former Canadiens and Rangers star Phil Goyette behind the bench.

the Miami defense stack up against the pass, Namath has Riggins, Matt Snell and Emerson Boozer to hand off to.

Where the Jets are weakest, however, is in their defense where they have given up more total yards than any team in the NFL (1111 in three games.) But 801 of those yards have been given up through the air and the return of cornerback Steve Tannen, who injured his shoulder in the opener against Buffalo, may help stablize the Jets' pass defense, which has seen nine different combinations used.

POINT SPREAD

The point spread on the game is three points in Miami's favor but the game sizes up as an air war — meaning unpredictable. The Dolphins may look stronger and more balanced but the Jets have Namath and, as Baltimore found out two weeks ago, he alone can make the difference.

In other contests Sunday, Atlanta hosts Detroit in a battle of division leaders in the NFC, Dallas goes against Pittsburgh, Chicago is at Green Bay, the New York Giants host New Orleans, Philadelphia takes on Washington, St. Louis is at Minnesota, San Francisco is at Los Angeles, Kansas City is at Cleveland, Denver goes against Cincinnati, New England plays Buffalo and San Diego is at Baltimore. Monday night Houston hosts Oakland.

Former World Car Race King Stewart Seeks Rain

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (UPI) Former world champion Jackie Stewart of Scotland was counting on some help from the rain today to maintain his pole position for Sunday's United States Grand Prix.

If it rains, as forecast, the new lap record of 120.99 miles per hour Stewart set in practice Friday will be good enough for the pole in the world championship event.

A rainy final practice session also will work against new world champion, Emerson Fittapaldi of Brazil, who could qualify no better than eighth in the opening time trials.

Stewart drove the same Tyrell-Ford he used to win the Canadian Grand Prix two weeks ago to set the record pace. America's Peter Revson in a McLaren was a surprising second at 120.93 and Denis Hulme also driving a McLaren, was third among the 31 entrants in 120.27.

The 200-mile championship, last of 12 races held around the world this year, is expected to shape up as a duel for second place in this year's championship standings.

Fittapaldi already has clinched the championship, but Stewart, the 1971 champion, is only one point ahead of Hulme, who won the title in 1967, for second.

Revson's fast time in practice was somewhat of a surprise, although the American has been a driver to contend with since he took second in the Canadian race. An American has never won the U.S. Grand Prix.

Fittapaldi, driving the John Player Lotus, could do no better than 118.721 m.p.h. in practice, the eighth fastest qualifying time.

"Their tires made the difference," a spokesman for Lotus said.

"Stewart, Revson and Hulme all have new tires developed especially for this track and they're giving them a four seconds a lap advantage on Emerson."

Stewart made a special trip to Watkins Glen last week to test the new tires, which both the Tyrell and McLaren teams will use in the Grand Prix.

The fourth fastest time of the afternoon was set by Stewart's teammate, Francois Cevert of France, at 119.83 mph. Cevert won the U.S. Grand Prix last year.

Clay Regazzoni of Switzerland, in a Ferrari, was fifth at 119.25. Sixth was Chris Amon of New Zealand in a Matra at 119.21 and seventh was Jody Scheckter of South Africa in a McLaren at 118.12.

It is the first grand prix ride for Scheckter, who at 22 is also the youngest driver in the field.

It was a disappointing day for America's Mario Andretti, who hoped to qualify high in the field. His best time of 118.63 placed him ninth, however. His Ferrari, like Fittapaldi's Lotus, does not have the new tires.

The other two Americans entered in the race, Skip Barber in a March-Ford and Sam Posey in a Surtees-Ford, ran far back in the field.

and Takashi Murakami of Japan.

Brewer caught up with Graham on the fourth hole and took a one stroke lead over him on the seventh. Graham birdied the 10th to match Brewer. They shared the lead all the way until the 17th hole when Brewer took a two-stroke margin by birdying the hole against Graham's bogey.

Graham sank a five-foot birdie putt on the 18th to keep one stroke behind Brewer.

Brewer sliced Graham's four stroke lead by three strokes on the first hole. Graham took a double bogey six when he hit a bad lie and then had to hit a shot over the trees to a blind green.

The shot was bad, and Graham two-putted for his six. Brewer, on the hand, had hit his second shot into a sand trap, but holed out a 35-yard shot with his sand wedge for a birdie.

Brewer then sank birdie putts of four feet on the second five on the seventh and 20 on the 17th.

"Graham had a four-stroke lead bt was unfortunate to take a double bogey on the first hole," Brewer said. "I birdied it and I caught up with three strokes right there. But I didn't think I would catch up with him today."

Japan's long hitting Masashi Ozaki fired a one under par 70 for an even par 213 total to be tied for 12th place with Hubert Green, Kermit Zarley and Dale Douglass.

Billy Casper and Australia's Peter Thomson were tied for 20th place with two over par 215 totals along with Bruce Crampton, Tom Shaw, George Archer and Japanese amateur Tsuto

Water Polo: Tamalpais Surprised

San Rafael High School knocked Tamalpais from the unbeaten ranks with a vengeance yesterday, getting 12 goals from the Kamler brothers in a 15-3 water polo victory.

In other Marin County Athletic League action, Redwood annihilated Novato, 23-5; and San Marin defeated Drake, 12-5. Undefeated, league-leading Terra Linda drew a bye.

Mike Kamler scored nine goals and brother Jeff added three for San Rafael, which moved into second place at 3-1. Coach Bill Ranney also singled out goalie Mike Sisemore, who blocked 29 shots, for praise.

Eight different players scored for Redwood, with the leaders being Warren Lager with six goals and Corwin (Corky) Hull with five.

Standings

Terra Linda 3-0, San Rafael 3-1, Tamalpais 2-1, Redwood 2-2, Novato 1-2, San Marin 1-3, Drake 0-3.

Opperman Leads By 4 In State Golf Tournament

SANTA CRUZ (UPI)—Steve Opperman broke open the logjam in the California State Open Golf Tournament as he took a three-stroke lead into today's third round of the California Open Golf tourney.

Opperman, of Fremont, fired a 67 over the De Laveaga course Friday to go with his opening round 69 over Pasatiempo for a 136 total. He had shared the opening round lead with five other golfers.

Jim Beetham f Long Beach, Bruce Osborne of La Mesa, and Alan Tapie of Downer were tied for second at 139 moving into today's play.

FIRM'S PLAN BACKFIRES

Polyturf Group Gets Publicity; Orange Bowl Effort Is Blasted

MIAMI (UPI)—When American Biltrite Rubber Co. agreed nearly three years ago to install polyturf in the Orange Bowl at a cut-rate price, they were counting on lots of publicity.

Well, they got plenty of pub licity—most of it bad. And they're still getting it.

At the end of last season, the outcry against the Orange Bowl's "mod sod" was so loud and fierce that American Biltrite decided to rip out the original carpet and replace it free of charge with Polyturf II.

They figured Polyturf II would get the company back in good graces with Orange Bowl fans and players. It did—for a while.

Then University of Miami Coach Fran Curci scheduled an afternoon practice in the Orange Bowl and it happened to rain. The carpet suddenly turned into a skating rink and Curci and his players came away mumbling and angry.

Then the Miami Dolphins opened their exhibition season and there were more gripes—not an outcry, but still complaints.

Game films showed over 100 slips on the plastic grass and during the game, fans repeatedly began chanting "we want grass ... we want grass."

Friday, American Biltrite officials came to Miami again, this time to show off a new type of shoe they claimed would solve the footing problems when Polyturf II gets wet.

The shoe was one of 40 designs tested by Spring Hill College, which has an extensive program to test sports equipment for safety. The shoe is made of canvas and has a sole studded with 100 short pointed rubber cleats.

Both the Dolphins and Hurricanes will be supplied with the new shoes before their next home games and American Biltrite is also going to have a shoe bank for visiting teams.

"We are convinced we have the best product on the market," American Biltrite Vice President Robert Thalhofer said Friday, "But just like our competitiors, we have a wet field problem. We don't have a permanent solution yet, but we're working on it, designing new equipment to dry out the field and trying to find suitable equipment that can be used in the meantime."

Thalhofer also admitted that water collected from the Orange Bowl playing field contained a "high degree of oil and grease," confirming a complaint made by Miami quarterback Bob Griese after the soggy Dolphins-Houston game

"The oil and grease are not coming from the field components," Thalhofer said, "but we don't know where it's coming from." He promised more study.

Injuries Fatal For Prep Gridder

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI)—A 16-year-old youth died early today of injuries he received in a football game Friday night between Jacksonville High School and Walter Wellborn High.

Arthur Odell Cannon, a junior at Jacksonville, suffered a head injury in the game and was taken to an Anniston hospital.

Set Fishing Dates To Game Commission

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The California Fish and Game Commission yesterday received a recommendation to create permanent dates for trout and salmon fishing seasons.

The state Fish and Game Department recommended that the permanent opener in most of Northern California be the last Saturday in April, and the opener for the North Coast be the Saturday preceding Memorial Day. The season would run through Nov. 15. However, there are many localized exceptions to the rule under the proposal.

A hearing on new fishing rules will be held in Redding Nov. 3, with final adoption of the regulations by the commission scheduled for its Dec. 8 meeting in Los Angeles.

The department says establishment of the permanent season opening date would enable fishermen to schedule vacations and fishing outings more conveniently.

Other department recommendations call for removal of the 20-pound weight limit on catfish, restoration of salmon runs in the San Joaquin River system, opening sections of the Kern River to all-year fishing and protection for amphibians and reptiles.

DETROIT TREK FOR A'S NEXT

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Oakland A's will leave for Detroit tomorrow at 6 p.m. via a World Airways charter plane with a drawing of owner Charles Finley and the mule mascot, Charlie O., on its nose.

By that time, Oakland will have played the Tigers twice and been through a gala civic send-off arranged by the city of Oakland, the Port of Oakland, the booster's club and World Airways following the second playoff game in the best-of-five series with Detroit.

The series resumes Tuesday in Detroit.

Sad End Of Prep Team Football

OTIS, Colo. (UPI)—Lone Star High School has 19 students. Eight of them are boys and all of them were needed for the school's football team in the Class A eight-man league.

But two of them were injured last week in Lone Star's 103-0 loss to Otis and so school officials announced Friday that Lone Star was withdrawing from the league competition.

The rest of the teams on Lone Star's schedule have been given forfeit victories.

Seattle Indoor Track Meet Set

SEATTLE (UPI) —The Seattle Indoor Track Meet, which disappeared last winter because of a scheduling mixup, will return Feb. 3 with a new sponsor.

The Washington Track and Field Association will replace the Carroll Club, a group of sportsminded Catholic laymen, as backers of the meet.

The event was dropped last year when the Seattle Coliseum was booked to capacity with other sports.

Driver Donohue Enters Car Race At Laguna Seca

Donohue will drive a Porsche at Monterey, the same machine he drove to victory in Canada. Teammate George Follmer of Arcadia, Calif., can clinch the Can-Am title with a victory here—the next to last event in the nine-race series.

Donohue has been America's top driver in road racing since 1967, having won the U.S. Road Racing Championships and the Trans-Am title as well as the Indy 500 this year.

$300,000 Hollywood Demo Dinner

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—California Democrats reaped a $300,000 profit Friday night from a $5,000-a-couple dinner party featuring prominent party members and Hollywood personalities.

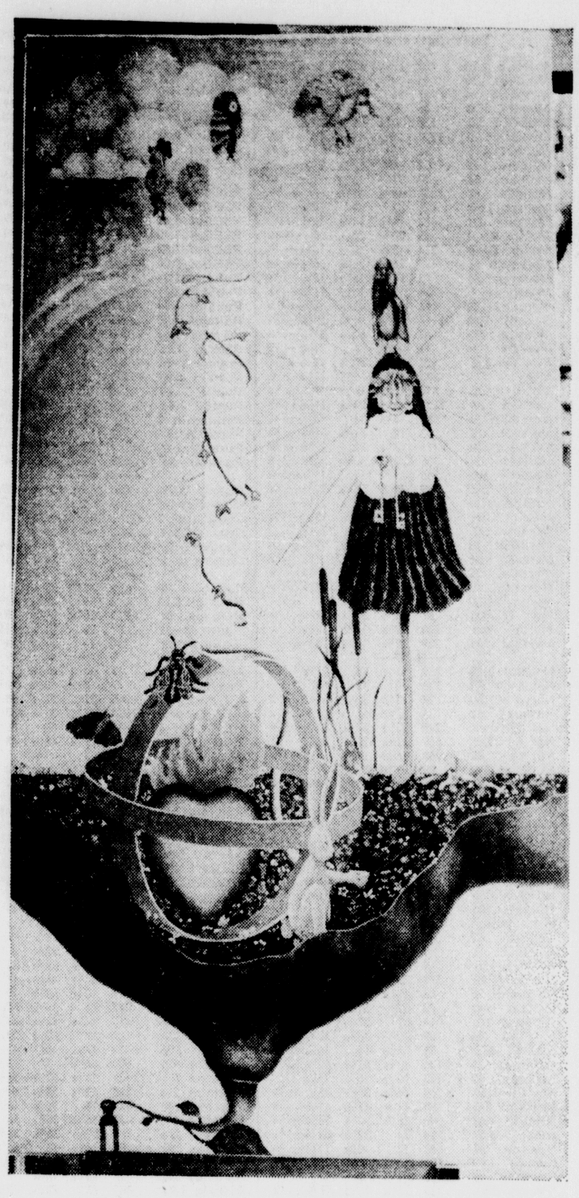

However, the funds are earmarked for the re-election campaigns of Democratic Senators and Congressmen rather than the money short presidential campaign of Sen. George S. McGovern.

Hollywood celebrities attending the affair at the ritzy Bel Air home of former California National Committeeman Eugene Wyman and his wife, Rosalind, also a former party official, included actress Jill St. John, who recently attended a party at the Western White House as the date of presidential advisar Henry Kissinger.

The menu featured crab stuffed trout, tournados of beef, sauteed mushrooms, noodles macadamia, green beans, endive salad, cheeses, hors d'oeuvres, California wines and chocolate mousse almondine for desert.

Lavelle Promotion Is Denied

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate Armed Services Committee voted unanimously to confirm Gen. Creighton W. Abrams as Army Chief of Staff, but in a rare action denied promotion to retired Gen. John D. Lavelle.

Lavelle was forced into retirement by the Pentagon after admitting that he had violated President Nixon's orders by bombing North Vietnam last winter.

Abrams was Lavelle's superior during the raids that occurred between November, 1971 and March 1972.

The votes Friday were 16-0 for Abrams' confirmation and 12-2 to deny Lavelle promotion. Abrams' nomination now goes to the Senate.

Chairman John C. Stennis, DMiss., said as far as he knew it was the first time in history the committee had ever denied promotion on the retired list to a general officer.

$150,000 Gift Will Finance S.F. Symphony Tour

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A joint gift of $150,000 was tendered yesterday by the Bank of America and Standard Oil of California to finance the San Francisco Symphony's first European tour next spring.

An announcement said the symphony, led by maestro Seiji Ozawa, will lead a 17-city tour over three weeks, opening May 15 in Paris, then visiting Brussels and Courtrai in Belgium; Brighton and London, England; Chartres, France; Zurich, Basel, Geneva and Berne in Switzerland; Hanover, Berlin, Munich, Frankfort and Linz in Germany; Vienna, Austria, and Florence, Italy.

Phillip S. Boone, symphony president, said, "This is the first time that American industry has sponsored the international tour of a major West Coast performing organization.'

Thieves Get 60 Refrigerators

Sixty used refrigerators belonging to the Marin County Housing Authority were stolen from the old Marin City firehouse between Friday and Monday, the Marin sheriff's office reported yesterday.

Deputies said the refrigerators in the abandoned building at 630 Drake Avenue had been removed from community housing projects.

No value was placed on the stolen property.

ART REVIEW

Media Exhibit Offers Best

By ADA GARFINKEL

There is often loud and scathing criticism by artists against the whole system of juried art shows that it is an antiquated and sometimes biased procedure.

Nevertheless, when a jury of outside artists whose own work is outstanding is invited to act as jurors for a group's most important exhibit of the year, it is an incentive to offer one's best. And this is how it is in the current 45th annual all-media exhibit at the Marin Society of Artists' gallery in Ross.

Last year's annual witnessed the unprecedented and traumatic situation of having all craftwork thrown out by the jury. Perhaps this accounts for the small entry in this category this year, but what is there is excellent. Take, for example, Bernadette Cole's striking large glazed stoneware bottle, Carol Herschleb's severely simple planter group, and Laura Romer's blue ceramic functional pieces.

The jewelers in the show have outdone themselves in imaginative design and fine craftsmanship and sculptors, too, have ventured forth in extended scope. Mary Bowles, for example, combines traditional and contemporary materials in an unusual way in her small tree of cast bronze on a polished chromed steel pedestal, and Marge Reese uses steel plate for "Couple."

Experimentation is one side of the artistic coin, excellence is another, and sometimes the annealing becomes self-evident as in the paintings of Tony Williams and Fred and Sidney Herschleb, and in the prints of Nelcy Tarics and Eleanore Bender.

Other creditable works are "3-part Fall" by Alleen Stoeffler, "Nautilus" by Heidi Endemann, "Tama" by Farhad Moezzi, "Ocean Waves" by Marjorie Pirie, and "Overturned" by Bonnie Himberg.

Awards of $100 were made to Tony Williams for "Modulus" (a painting); to Gayle Luchessa for "Zeuss Baskets" (woven sculpture); to Janet McNinch for "Round Table Cloth" (crafts); to Nelcy Tarics for "Discover America" (graphics).

Awards of $50 were made to Bernard Healy for "Intarsia II" (assemblage); and for paintings to Elizabeth Pachaud for "Daisies, Daisies," to Manuel Villamore for "Sunday Morning," Robert Elsocht for "Cerebration," Heidi Endemann for "Girl with Mask," and to Ann Hardy for "Autumn Haying." Also to Glen Himberg for a sterling, bone, and whale's-tooth pipe and case.

Jurors for the 45th annual, which will continue through Oct. 29, were: painters: Ann O'Hanlon and Gary P. Allen; sculptors: Richard Moquin and Ernest Mundt, and weaver Carole Beadle. The jurors are all art instructors in Bay Area colleges.

The Marin Society of Artists' gallery is located in the Marin Art and Garden Center and is open daily except holidays from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Wild Bidding For Block Prints

NEW YORK (UPI)—The world record price for Japanese color wood block prints, set only Thursday, was broken three times Friday in wild bidding for works by Kitagawa Utamaro, a 19th Century artist.

Sotheby Parke Bernet galleries reported the new record was $37,000 for a portrait of a Japanese waitress. It was purchased by Arthur Tooth and Co. Ltd. of London for a Japanese collector.

Another print showing a girl with a mirror sold for $25,000. It was bought by an anonymous American collector. A portrait of a woman, also bought by Tooth, went for $21,000.

The record set Thursday at Sotheby Parke Bernet was $18,000. It broke a price record of $10,752 set in London.

Buddy Miles Misses Second Court Date

Buddy Miles, 28-year-old leader of the Buddy Miles Blues Band, failed to appear for a preliminary hearing Thursday and Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court issued a warrant for his arrest bearing $5,000 bail.

His lawyer, Marvin Cahn, said at a previous court session that the musician did not know an account was closed when he wrote a check for $997 on July 2 to the Emry Freight Corp.

The warrant was the second issued for Miles, who missed a previous court appearance in August, but later appeared saying he misunderstood the date.

'Family Of Man' Film Series Set

The College of Marin's series of "Family of Man" films begins Oct. 19 at 8 p.m. in Olney Hall with two films dealing with American Indians.

"The Roots," based on a collection of four short stories by Francisco Gonzales, received the International Film Critics Award at the Cannes Film Festival. It features an amateur Indian cast.

"The Ballad of Crowfoot" depicts Americans' injustice as seen through an American Indian's eyes. Utilizing still photographs and moving images, the film shows life among buffalo herds, the destruction of buffalo and breaking of treaties.

Another Round Due Over Land

Purchase of the Richard Connell property, which caused a flap at Tuesday's Novato City Council meeting, again will go before the council at an adjourned meeting at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the community house.

The city has reached agreement with Connell to buy the property at 1523 South Novato Boulevard for $45,000, planning to use the land for a connecting link with Hill Road through the Paul Pickart property.

Residents of Hill Road protested that they did not want the street widened as part of the project and made a major collector street.

Other items left over from last week which the council will consider include amendments to the chamber of commerce contract, an analysis of the city's insurance, an overpass on Highway 101 at Gnoss Field, a further report on the state Environmental Protection Act and a report on the Ralph M. Brown act and attorney-client relations.

8 Die As Fire Sweeps Hotel

TRABEN-TRARBACH, Germany (UPI)—At least eight persons were killed early today when fire swept through the Hotel Graefinburg in the Moselle Valley, police said.

Preliminary investigations indicated the fire broke out in the hotel restaurant about 4 a.m. and quickly spread through the rest of the building, police said.

Four persons spending a weekend holiday at the hotel died when they jumped from the fourth floor to escape the flames and smoke, police said.

2 Hearings Slated For 3 Brothers

Preliminary hearings for three Novato brothers charged in two separate cases have been scheduled for Oct. 17 and Nov. 24 in Marin Municipal Court.

The October court date for Patrick, 24, Michael, 21, and Kevin Gingher, 20, is in connection with a marijuana investigation that began when two other persons allegedly threw a bag containing water and goldfish at Novato police.

Patrick is charged with having marijuana, Michael is charged with having it for sale and the youngest Gingher is charged with misdemeanor possession of narcotics paraphernalia.

They were arrested May 28 at their home in which large quantities of allegedly stolen property were found June 8.

Heavy Rains Shut Facilities In Alaska

SITKA, Alaska (UPI)—Heavy rain shut down schools and stores and hospitals switched to standby generators when the power plant was flooded Friday.

Electric power was restored to most areas late in the day but the Alaska Lumber and Pulp Co. asked users to conserver power until full service is restored in the next several days.

Judge Kills $200,000 Assault Suit

A Marin Superior Court judge has killed a $200,000 damage suit brought by a San Rafael bail bondsman against a competitor over an alleged assault.

Judge E. Warren McGuire ruled Ralph M. Finley had no ground on which to sue Joseph J. Pecora, who owns Joe Pecora Bail Bonds.

Finley claimed that Pecora attacked him on the stairs of the Cheda Building, where they both had offices when the incident occurred July 19, 1971.

Pecora pleaded no contest and was fined $75 for disturbing the peace in criminal action stemming from the report by Finley that he was shoved down a flight of steps, then kicked.

Politics Second For Uncle Miltie

Comedian Milton Berle was performing his late show at the Fairmont Hotel here when he spied old friends Sen. and Mrs. Hubert Humphrey in the audience.

"Sorry, senator, I can't stay and talk to you —I'm going over to North Beach and watch a topless show," he said.

Secrecy Surrounds Plea Bargaining

SUPREME COURT decisions reinforcing and expanding the rights of the accused in criminal trials have had the effect of clogging our courts.

Time was when law enforcement agencies aimed at obtaining a confession from an accused. More often than not this led to a plea of guilty and trial time was avoided.

The reinforcement and expansion of the rights of the accused caused confessions almost to disappear, making guilty pleas infrequent.

It has long been common practice in civil matters for judges to hold pre-trial conferences which frequently lead to out-of-court settlements. These settlements are usually endorsed by the court and the civil trial is avoided.

It probably was only natural that prosecutors, public defenders and judges would develop the habit of pretrial conferences on criminal cases in the hopes that all would be relieved of the burden of having to conduct a trial on each and every case.

Thus evolved what today is called plea bargaining.

IT WAS INEVITABLE that someone would appeal his sentence on the grounds that his rights were somehow infringed upon in the plea bargaining process. The State Supreme Court decided that, properly conducted, plea bargaining is legitimate.

What happens in the plea bargaining process?

Marin Superior Court Judge E. Warren Maguire explains it this way:

The prosecutor knows pretty well his chances of getting a conviction. He also knows something of the accused person's background; i.e. whether he is a first-time offender caught in a web of circumstances which overwhelmed him, or whether he is a hardened, many-time loser.

The prosecutor knows, then, whether the accused, if convicted, should really be dealt with firmly or lightly.

The defense attorney, be he public defender or private counsel, knows the realtive strength of his defense. He has a pretty good idea of his chances of getting his client off in a trial.

In "an open-shut case," why bother with a trial? It can be better for all if the accused simply pleads guilty, provided he knows the maximum sentence he will receive.

On the basis of the information presented in the plea bargaining process, it is up to the judge to say what will be the maximum sentence if the accused pleads guilty.

At this point, there may be some bargaining. We know what goes on in plea bargaining sessions only by hearsay. They are closed to the public, including the press.

In any event, if the accused and his defense attorney accept the arrangement and enter a guilty plea, the judge studies the probation report before passing sentence. This may result in a lighter sentence, but — as it has been explained by some participating judges — not a heavier sentence.

Marin judges, to a man, seem to endorse the plea bargaining system as an expeditious way to reduce significantly the number of actual criminal trials — without violating the rights of the accused.

THE OUTCOME of plea bargaining in many instances has raised many questions.

The I-J has given editorial voice to some of these questions and concerns. Some judges have rather bitterly criticised the I-J for having voiced its criticism.

Judge Robert A. Smallman, for instance, has said flatly that the citizens of Marin county are totally misinformed about plea bargaining and that this is due solely to the I-J's misrepresentation of the process.

Such an assertion is hogwash, of course.

That there is a widespread lack of public knowledge and understanding cannot be denied.

It would not be realistic to expect the public to know and understand a process which the public is prevented from observing.

Dist. Atty. Bruce Bales has said plainly, "I am opposed to plea bargaining. . . . Permitting a defendant to pleas guilty to something less than the crime he actually committed . . . tends to corrupt the administration of criminal justice."

The judges defend the process. The district attorney condemns it. We of the public can only be confused.

HOW DO WE WORK ourselves out of this morrass?

First we need an end to irresponsible statements such as Judge Smallman's groundless utterance.

Second we need some way for the public to have the opportunity to observe the plea bargaining process first-hand.

Judge Joseph G. Wilson has suggested that it might be possible to open some plea bargaining sessions to attendance by the press, assuming the prosecutor, the accused and his attorney, and the judge involved had no objections.

This will not bring widespread understanding instantly, but it might begin to get facts instead of only hearsay and opinion before the public.

When a change as radical as plea bargaining is introduced into our system without legislative debate and without any citizen participation in its introduction, having the public understand it and accept it will not be easy.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUET to the Marin County Board of Supervisors for delaying an order to demolish the historic Olema Hotel in order to give time for an effort to preserve it.

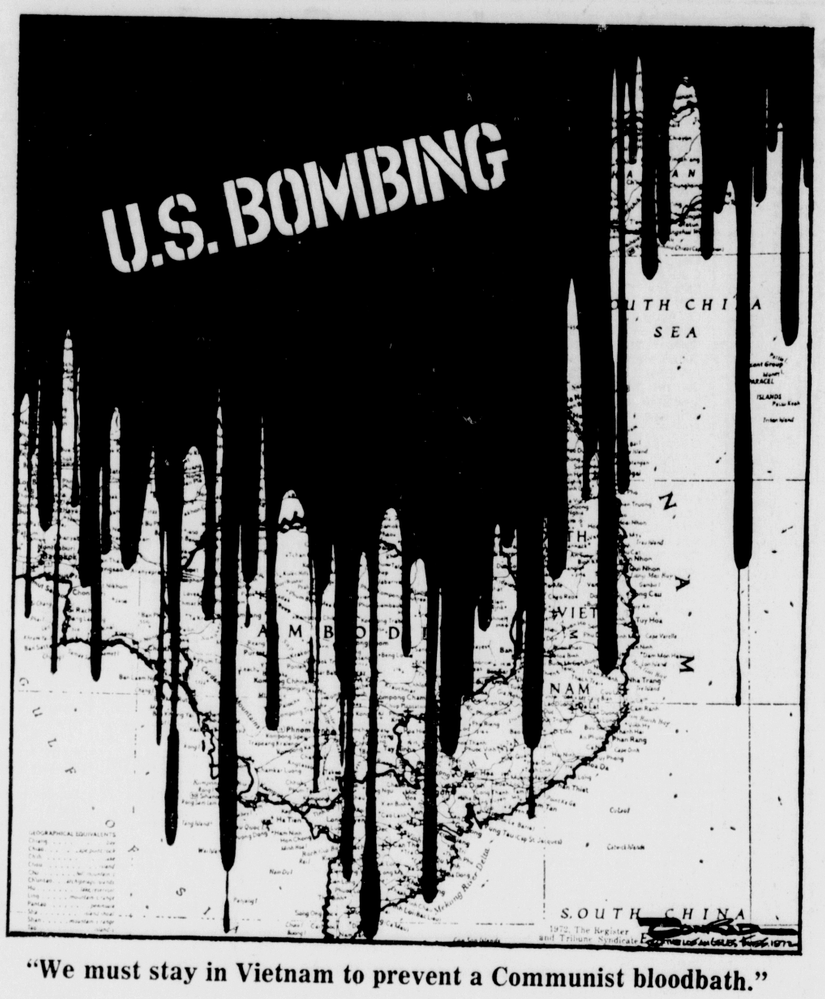

BOUQUET to Charles A. Grasso on his appointment as Fairfax chief of police. We are always pleased to see "local boy makes good" appointments in Marin governments.

BRICKBATS to Tamalpais High School District trustees who attempted to put the blame on this newspaper for the district's own loose expense control.

BOUQUET to Hercules Viglienzone of Marin Bay Lincoln-Mercury for providing the largest, prettiest and most spectacular U. S. flag in Marin County.

"Hello, Gallup Poll? I've changed my mind."

"We must stay in Vietnam to prevent a Communist bloodbath."

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Letters for "What Our Readers Say" are welcomed. To be published, they must bear the writer's signature and address (only the city will be printed, but street or post office box address must be included.) Try to limit letters to 200 words. The editors reserve the right to cut long letters, or to reject any that may be libelous or in bad taste.

Why Not Volunteer To Help Local Candidates?

Recently, while visiting the McGovern Headquarters, I noticed they have a drawer full of volunteer (names). It is ironic that some of the office seekers who are trying to get things together for Marin are operating their campaigns with few volunteers and with small campaign budget.

Maybe it is time for "a little help for our friends." These politicians are not only living, working and paying taxes in Marin, but want to do some good, specifically for Marin residents.

You will find a close contact with Marin politics as you stuff envelopes, pass out leaflets and make some phone calls — not to mention personal involvement. Helping a Marin politician is an excellent way to meet new friends, rap with local politicians and get across your ideas on Marin. . .

Aspirant Speaks Out On School Issues

As an announced candidate for the office of Marin County superintendent of schools in 1974, I have been asked by some of my friends and supporters to publicly give my reactions to the actions of the incumbent superintendent of schools as reported in this paper and the grand jury's final report.

Fiscal Responsibility — I feel, like all other school systems in Marin County, the county superintendent's office and schools should cut back on some of their programs and travel. I agree with the grand jury's recommendations that the county superintendent of schools should make "every effort to restrain mounting cost of his office even if it means elimination of some of the less needed services."

Applicant Secrecy — I strongly disagreed with the actions of the Marin County Board of Education and the superintendent in refusing to give the names of the applicants seeking the appointment on their board... Last April, while serving as mayor of the City of Novato, we voted as a council to fill a vacancy on our council. We have nine citizens apply for the appointment. After the council voted, I announced the names of the eight unsuccessful applicants. My rationale was the appointed council member has the same power and vote as the elected councilmen and the voting public in Novato had the right to know who were the applicants for this high position.

Imposed Gag Rule — The I-J reported, "The Marin County superintendent of schools for the second time has defied the school system's legal adviser and forbidden teachers to go to the grand jury without first going through his chain of command." I feel the so-called gag rule should not be imposed or even implied because it is not legal and it has a detrimental effect on the morale of any school system. . .

Would Publish All Councilmen Expenses

Your reporter's findings with regards to San Rafael councilmen expenses for meals, trip to Hawaii, etc., are most interesting. I was astonished to hear one councilman state he didn't realize the expenses, even though he signs the reports which cover the vouchers.

The taxpayers of this community should demand a full and itemized account by name, date, place and amount of each expense incurred by our so-called entrusted councilmen for the past fiscal year and this report and findings published in the newspaper. If they are so liberal with their pleasures and needs, how can we as taxpayers entrust millions of dollars which it takes to operate our city? Recent request for additional compensation for our safety personnel, police and firemen, were turned down due to the lack of funds.

The welfare of our children and families are more important than a Caddilac expense account for our councilmen. . .

Who Deserves Biggest Human Depletion Allowance? One Guess

WASHINGTON — Senators Mike Mansfield and George Aiken have proposed one of the most revolutionary tax reforms in the history of this country. They have suggested that human beings be given a tax depletion allowance as generous as one provided for oil and minerals.

As most people know, the allowances are given to companies on the assumption that once you take the oil, gas or minerals out of the ground, they cannot be replaced.

Senators Mansfield and Aiken maintain that people deplete, too, and they have proposed a bill that would permit individuals to deduct from 10 per cent and 23 per cent of their earned income to compensate for running down.

THE ONLY THING I see wrong with the bill is the fight over what jobs and professions should get the highest depletion rate. There are very few people in this country who don't believe their jobs are the most depleting of all.

The guidelines to be used, according to the bill, state that the percentage of depletion would be based on "the physical, mental and emotional stress incurred in the connection with the production of income during the year."

Now it is my personal opinion that if those guidelines are adhered to, columnists should be entitled to the highest tax breaks.

No one, except possibly a housewife, depletes faster than a columnist. His profession forces him to go to cocktail parties night after night which do untold damages to his liver.

He is constantly being threatened with violence by people who take exception to his articles. This not only takes its toll physically, but also emotionally.

MOST COLUMNISTS look 80 years old before they reach their 40th birthday. Wives of columnists will testify that their husbands are depleted every night, and are not much good for anything except watching "Medical Center" and "All in the Family."

There is scientific evidence available that columnists have loss of memory very early in their careers, and forget that the column they wrote today takes the exact opposite position of the one they took only a week ago.

It is now known that mental strain of writing a column causes columnists' brains to deteriorate at twice the rate of policemen and football players.

Columnists are prone to ear trouble from having politicians scream at them over the phone.

All of them are overweight from lunching with their sources and drinking bottles of wine sent over with the "compliments of the management."

This is why very few columnists can get health insurance after the age of 35.

IF ANYONE in this country deserves a tax break, it's a columnist. Long before it is time for him to retire he is a vegetable — squeezed dry, washed up and mentally exhaused.

It is my sincere hope that if Congress passes the Human Being Depletion Act, columnists will get the maximum benefits the law provides. If anything, we should at least get the same depletion allowance that they give for gas.

Japan Comes Out Winner In Opening Of China Trade

WASHINGTON — While President Nixon was the first to cross the tape, the race to Peking is in fact being won by Japan's Premier Kakuei Tanaka. It is in reverse order the old fable of the tortoise and the hare. Japan, as tortoise, has the means and the freedom of choice to stay the course even though the nimble hare, contrary to Aesop, won the first heat.

The comment on Tanaka's success in Peking in opening a new era between the two Asian powers has largely overlooked a vital element. The Japanese are prepared to make large loans to Peking to initiate a two-way trading system expected to reach many billions of dollars within less than a decade.

IN TOKYO late last year, this reporter talked with several leading Japanese industrialists who had just been in Peking for meetings ith Premier Chou En-lai and the principal Chinese officials concerned with foreign trade. They had no doubt of the great potential trade to be developed in the future when — with the Nixon trip projected for early in 1972 — Japan would normalize diplomatic relations with Peking.

One of the industrialists, Shigeo Nagano, chairman of Nippon Steel, spoke of how impressed he was by the steady, sound economic planning as he had observed it in the People's Republic of China. Japan could thus confidently consider placing large loans to help develop China's industry and begin the transition from what is today an argicultural economy to a modern state.

We will not call these loans reparations. Nagano said, discussing the advances that would come from Tokyo. But, in effect they might almost be considered compensation for the fearful destruction wreaked by the Japanese armies in nearly 20 years of war against mainland China.

WITH TRADE with the mainland greatly expanded — it now runs at about $800 million annually each way — the imports in the first instance would be soy beans and other agricultural products. Japan's soy beans now come from Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and other Midwestern states. Later Japan would take coking coal, most of which now comes from West Virginia; petroleum, and other minerals. Japan will export her advanced technology in a half-dozen fields.

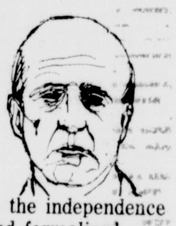

What this can mean to the current of trade with Japan, the United States' second most important customer — second only to Canada — hardly needs underscoring. So far as trading with China goes, the United States needs very little that China can sell. But Japan, as an island nation tht must trade to live, needs a whole roster of raw materials.

ASIDE FROM geography and an Asian kinship, two profoundly important differences set Japan apart from the United States in the China competition. The line between the heads of industry and the officials who direct the Japanese government is almost indistinguishable. The identity is so close that the very idea of an antitrust law is alien. At the same time he was in effect negotiating with Chou En-lai, Nagano was responsible for the direction of a deal with the Soviet Union involving $2.5 billion for oil, natural gas, timber and minerals out of Siberia.

The second difference related to the first is the close homogeneity of the Japanese people. Aside from perhaps 600,000 Koreans, many of whom have lived there for generations, they are one. The radical student phenomenon, as elsewhere in the world, has been troubling. Yet when the chips are down they come together even under circumstances, as in the second World War, so adverse as to be nearly total disaster.

This is evident in the reaction to the two Nixon shocks — the announcement without prior warning of the President's mission to Peking when the two nations had agreed not long before to concert their policies, and the devaluation of the dollar and the 10 per cent import charge, again without warning. The visitor to Japan soon heard when traditional inhibitions were broken down that this was dual diplomacy, betrayal of Japan. But that is submerged today as the Japanese react with characteristic vigor to a new reality.

Japanese-Chinese Agreement Ends Sad Chapter Of History

An enormous amount of unhappy history was wrapped up and put away in the attic when the Chinese and Japanese signed an agreement with each other, and a very promising foundation was laid for what promises to be a much happier chapter in history ahead.

Technically, the agreement is to resume diplomatic relations. In its effect it is more than that, much more.

For China it wraps up nearly 200 years of humiliation and exploitation by others. The outside world moved in on a feudal China just at the time the new American republic was getting itself organized on the mud flats along the Potomac River. China was not able to call its house its own from then until Mao Tse-tung threw the Russians out in 1960.

Always, from 1800 to 1960 some one or more foreign force was pushing the Chinese around, ordering their nominal governments, managing their affairs, and exploiting their people.

THAT MISERABLE chapter in history is finished now. No one from the outside dominates the Chinese. One by one, they pushed the foreigners out, laying one against another until at last they are the masters of their own household.

The new arrangements with Japan are a final step in getting the independence of China recognized and formalized.

Japan was one of the outside influences which attempted to dominate China. The effort began in 1931 with the military seizure of Mukden, the capital of Manchuria. It ended physically with the Japanese defeat in 1945.

Now the time has come to put all that unhappy past away and make a new beginning. Japan and China need each other. They can become good and cooperative neighbors because Japan has learned a hard lesson well and because China does control its own destiny.

FOR JAPAN, it is the formal beginning of a new and most promising and exciting chapter. The years of penance are over. Japan is out from under American dominance. It is an independent foree in Asia, able and now willing to manage its own affairs.

In an organizational sense the new relations between Japan and China complete the transition from the "cold war" era in Asia to the new order now beginning.

Before the transition there were only two important forces bearing on Asia — Russia and the United States, Now there are many forces in play in Asia.

Russia remains as an influential power. Yes, of course, and the United States Seventh Fleet still dominates the Pacific Ocean up to the shores of Asia. But China is independent. Japan is free to pursue its own diplomatic and trading policies. And India is a considerable influence in its own right now that its armed forces dominate the Indian subcontinent.

THE FUTURE is promising for the Chinese-Japanese relationship. The Japanese have gone out of the empire business. They are interested now in turning raw materials into finished goods, and in selling those goods to a broad market. There are raw materials in Siberia and China, and markets all over Asia. Japan has nothing to gain by any exclusive relationship with China, or Russia, or the smaller countries to the south.

And the very nature of Japan's needs is itself a new element of stability hitherto provided by the American presence in Asia. Japan has no reason to support Russia against China or China against Russia. Japan's interest is best served by helping to build and maintain a balance between China and Russia.

As American influence recedes from the shores of Asia, Japanese influence can take its place. There is no reason now why it should not. There is every reason to think that it will do so in a constructive manner.

Nixon Wants A Landslide This Time

By NORMAN KEMPSTER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At one of the carefully staged receptions President Nixon received on a California campaign swing, two supporters stood almost side by side. One held a sign reading "Nixon" with the "o" made into a peace symbol. The other brandished a sign with a pseudo mathematical formula equating a peace symbol with a hammer and sickle.

Nixon is trying hard this fall to appeal to elements almost all the way across the political spectrum, from the moderate left to the far right. So far, it seems to be working.

Elected in 1968 with less than half the popular vote and by a margin of less than one percentage point over Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey, the President this year wants a landslide.

He talks decisively about people who would redistribute wealth or weaken the nation's defenses. His listeners recognize that McGovern is the target although the President never makes the connection specific.

By attacking a nameless opponent, Nixon avoids giving McGovern any free publicity and he also can be loose with his interpretations of the Democrat's positions. McGovern has withdrawn a welfare plan that would have resulted in some redistribution of wealth but Nixon continues to hammer at the issue.

"Those who call for a redistribution of income and a confiscation of wealth are not speaking for the interests of the people; they are speaking against the interests of the people," Nixon said in a statement issued in Los Angeles.

But over-all Nixon's theme is to urge the nation to unite behind him.

"What we seek is not just a victory for a man, not just a victory for a party ... I want this to be a victory for all the people," he said in San Francisco.

Earlier this year, Nixon's strategists worried about GOP overconfidence, about taking McGovern too lightly.

Now the President is talking openly about the size of his victory. He said in New York that he is seeking a "clear majority" to convince Congress his programs have a wide public mandate.

Nixon plans to limit his campaign. He does not intend very often to abandon the role of president for the narrower partisan role of campaigner.

The President's recent appearances in New York and California — the two richest prizes in the Electoral College — were carefully arranged to dramatize the extent of his support. At airports and outside of hotels, Nixon was met by enthusiastic groups of supporters shouting "four more years."

The welcoming crowds were mostly young and almost exclusively white. Most were transported in chartered buses. In San Francisco, the greeters were ushered into the Sheraton Palace Hotel and given lunch. They were escorted outside just before Nixon's motorcade pulled up.

Nixon interrupted his speech to say he hoped television stations would show his thousands of supporters as well as the few detractors. The cameras dutifully swept his supporters.

CHINESE DELEGATION — The Chinese delegation to the United Nations, headed by chairman Chiao Kuanhua, listens intently to debate in the General Assembly.

China Winning U.N. Friends And Influencing Delegations

By DAVID WINDER

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — With polite fortitude and big smiles they endured the first curious stares, the impertinent questions, the surreptitious press attempts to reach them via the hotel back stairs.

Now, whether in Mao tunics and peaked caps or Western suits and sandals, they scarcely rate a second glance.

The diplomats of the People's Republic of China, who descended on the United Nations late last year with the impact of a tidal wave, are a very accepted part of the UN scene.

More than that, they are winning friends and influencing delegations to a degree observers here find astonishing.

For the New York City policemen who protect them, for the UN press corps and officials who assist them, there are banquets in appreciation. For the delegations who are better informed there is an attentive hearing. For the smaller and medium powers there is an understanding that they are being treated as equals.

"Very nice and never condescending," said a delegate of a small European power in appreciation of the Chinese style of diplomacy.

An ambassador from a "third world" country was even more enthusiastic.

"It is exhilarating when a big power asks a small power what you think. They approach us as equals. Their modesty is so overwhelming that it is embarrassing."

At a time when President Nixon is accused of "making the world safe for the big powers," and when even France and Britain are occasionally included as "being somewhat overbearing," China's modest approach stands out.

Aware of the limitations for a newcomer entering a complex international organization, the Chinese have displayed a caution that contrasts markedly with the obstructive and sometimes disruptive diplomacy practiced by the Soviet Union when it was challenging what it saw as a United States-rigged majority in the early days of the UN.

In particular the Chinese have been prudent in the number of committees they feel they can adequately man. A committee such as the one dealing with intricate international legal issues is left with an empty Chinese chair. They are careful not to get entangled in matters beyond their competence.

Similar selectivity will be apparent this General Assembly session in the number of committees they fill — the Chinese saying with their usual winning modesty, "We are new boys. We have to learn."

Since this cautious, modest approach has brought handsome public-relations dividends, it is doubtful the Chinese will change to more assertive tactics as they attend the first full General Assembly session since their admission last October.

As one Western spokesman pointed out: "They certainly haven't lived up to the extreme picture some people had of them of coming into the UN to wreck it."

Another surprise to diplomats here is the seriousness with which the Chinese have undertaken their responsibilities as permanent Security Council members.

As in their approach to other delegations, so with the big powers the Chinese seem more than willing to learn. They frequently meet with them and seek their advice.

This prompted one Western-power representative, who had anticipated a much more devious approach, to say: "They are much blunter, much simpler and more down to earth than we expected before they came in."

The playbacks from the major Western powers indicates a newfound respect for Chinese diplomacy.

One big-power appraisal: "On the whole they have certainly shown good judgment. They have moved cautiously with one exception — the extraordinary confrontation early on with the Russians. They haven't tried to throw their weight around. They have fielded a good team — the quality of their people is high, and they do a lot of questioning and listening."

The Chinese, say the French, display qualities that appeal to the French intellect. "They are very logical, very methodical, and express their ideas with great clarity. There is no digression in Chinese speeches or in their private conversation," a senior French diplomat remarked.

Third-world comment is predictably glowing.

Ambassador Salim Salim of Tanzania, chairman of the UN Decolonization Committee, says the Chinese "don't talk too much, but when they do say something, it is always relevant." He considers their contribution to his committee as the "most cooperative" of any delegation.

"Cooperation" was not what those fearing China's admission to the UN expected.

The cooperation, though, is viewed in many cases as of the passive type — not obstructing the work of the UN, though the initiative under discussion may be one to which the Chinese are entirely opposed in principle.

To meet this situation China has evolved a fairly novel diplomatic tactic in the Security Council — that of non-participation, as distinct from the more neutral abstention.

This tactic was apparent when the Council worked out the extension of the Cyprus peace-keeping force. And it also came into play during the appointment of a UN representative to Namibia, as the UN calls South-West Africa.

In both cases, as with the stationing of observers on the Lebanese border, China could have frustrated UN action. Not wishing to upset either the Arabs or Africans, however, China's strategy is to set out a critical independent position, but to do as little as possible to thwart consensus.

(This apparently remains China's approach, despite the two vetoes — on Bangladesh and the Middle East — it has cast in recent weeks.)

The result is that China is considered less obstructive than the Soviet Union, which stood in the way of a call for a cease-fire during the India-Pakistan war and which dallied over the appointment of a new Secretary-General.

Taiwan is the one clearly defined area where from the very start China has made it clear that it will not compromise. Taiwanese correspondents attached to a Taiwanese Government agency have lost their UN accreditation. A plaque honoring the gift of a marble slab bearing a saying of Confucius donated by the Taiwanese Government has been removed.

From now on if China has its way, Taiwan will be a non-country. By order of the UN, at China's behest, there is no further record or mention of Taiwan in UN statistics.

This, then, is a big part of the importance of the UN to China. The world body endorses its legitimacy as the sole representative of China, thus accepting, at least by inference, Peking's claim that Taiwan is but a part of the one China that Peking represents.

A former diplomat, an expert on China and onetime negotiator in dealings with Peking, points out another reason for China's interest in the UN:

"Marshal Chen Yi used to say to me, 'We must develop nuclear power. Those imperialist powers won't think anything of us without it.' They are very status conscious, and they certainly enjoy the fact that here is a forum where their status can be expressed."

Many diplomatic sources say that although China deserves high marks for popularity, modesty, and hard work, it has not yet mastered UN procedure.

One high-ranking diplomat recalls last year's diplomatic maneuvers to try to throw the veto-blocked Indian-Pakistani issue from the Security Council into the General Assembly through the "uniting-for-peace resolution."

"I do remember it took quite a bit of persuasion to convince them of the wisdom of resorting to the uniting-for-peace resolution. They couldn't seem to grasp the benefit of this."

Also, their lack of adroitness procedurally at the recent UN environmental conference at Stockholm brought unnecessary heat upon them when they voted against halting all nuclear-weapons testing.

Yet another instance cited is the Bangladesh veto. Here diplomats believed the Chinese allowed themselves to be outflanked, so that they had no choice other than to veto Bangladesh's admission.

Whether China's bid to assume third-world leadership proves successful remains to be seen. There are some indications, for instance, that the underdeveloped countries are prepared to follow China only so far as Peking reflects their views.

Moreover, there is increasing speculation as to whether China is not trying to ride two horses at once.

As one delegate who follows China closely expressed it: "It is non-white. It is still poor and to some extent developing, and they are trying to claim that they are not acting like a superpower."

THIS WEEK In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

With five weeks remaining until election day, the presidential campaign heated up this week as Sen. George S. McGovern called President Nixon's administration corrupt and Nixon called McGovern's campaign irresponsible.

McGovern said the Nixon administration was the "most corrupt" in the history of America. He described the President as "a man of no constant principle except opportunism and political manipulation."

Nixon, fighting back in a news conference, said "I think the responsible members of the Democratic party will be turned off by this kind of campaigning." Replying to charges by the Democrats that he was "hiding" from the voters, Nixon said the demands of the presidency required him to stay in Washington, but that he would be doing more campaigning after Congress adjourns.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, in a speech in McGovern's state of South Dakota, accused the Democratic candidate of waging a smear campaign and said McGovern's views on Vietnam were making him popular in North Vietnam.

Also this week:

SAIGON — The U.S. Command stopped use of the F111 swingwing fighter-bomber, but put them back into service in the air war toward the end of the week. The halt, for a "recheck," was ordered after one plane disappeared with two crewmen aboard.

WASHINGTON — President Nixon said it would not be in Hanoi's interest to wait for a possible McGovern victory, but to reach a settlement before the election.

SAIGON — Twenty men were killed in an explosion of an eight-inch gun turret aboard the U.S. cruiser Newport News as it was firing at positions in North Vietnam. The Navy called the explosion accidental.

JERUSALEM — Rabbi Meir Kahane, head of the Jewish Defense League, was arrested by Israeli police in a plot to smuggle arms out of Israel for use against Arab terrorists.

VATICAN CITY — Pope Paul VI and Prime Minister Edward Heath of Britain met to discuss the prospect of peace in Northern Ireland.

COPENHAGEN — Danish voters approved Denmark's entry into the Common Market. Denmark, along with Britain and Ireland, will join the market in January. Premier Jens Otto Krag, who had backed maket membership, later made a surprise announcement of his resignation, citing personal reasons.

WASHINGTON — President Nizon and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko met at the White House and Camp David. It was believed they discussed negotiations for a Soviet-American trade agreement.

WASHINGTON — The House Banking and Currency Committee turned down a suggestion to hold hearings into the alleged Republican bugging of the Democrats' Watergate headquarters. President Nixon endorsed a recent FBI investigation, which the Justice Department said found no evidence of wrongdoing by any White House staff members or ranking members of Nixon's re-election committee.

WASHINGTON — The House killed legislation that would have increased the minimum wage from $1.60 an hour.

NEW YORK — New York City filed a class action suit charging General Motors Corp. with monopolizing the manufacture and sale of buses. The suit asked that GM be divested of some manufacturing facilities and asked for triple damages.

DETROIT — The Tigers beat the Boston Red Sox for baseball's last division title, the American League East. Baseball teams prepared for the major league playoffs and the World Series.

Close Aide Says '72 Not A McGovern Race

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — George McGovern's longest and closest political associate believes the 1972 presidential race is not really "a McGovern campaign."

"McGovern always has done better when he has been able to establish a 1-to-1 relationship with the voter," George V. Cunningham, McGovern's deputy campaign manager, said in an interview.

"In a national campaign, he flies around the country, the voters hear him briefly, but they don't really know McGovern the man. They hear his words, but they don't get a chance to know his depth of character and the real meaning of the man."

Cunningham, then a young law student, drove the beat-up station wagon back in South Dakota in 1956 in McGovern's first political campaign. They started out in the morning on a highway and stopped at every town they came to.

They made an unusual combination—McGovern, son of a fundamentalist minister, tall and slender, soft-spoken, always proper; Cunningham, son of a car dealer, short and rounded, glib, the consummate practical joker.

They went to sales barns and grain elevators and talked to farmers. They walked up and down Main Streets and talked to small businessmen. But frequently they went through the alleys and back doors to talk to the waitresses and mechanics instead of the owners up front.

During those campaigns, Cunningham said, McGovern relied relatively little on the media, making news releases only to present an issue or challenge an opponent. He concentrated on organization and personal appeal.

Four out of five times, Cunningham said, South Dakota —a conservative Republican state—elected McGovern, a liberal Democrat; but only partly because they liked his ideas.

"Over and above that, they voted for a decent, good man whose judgment they trusted.

"He's been able to keep up his relationship with most of the people of South Dakota. Some of them say, 'I don't agree with him but I'm going to vote for him.'"

When McGovern announced for president in January, 1971, he was almost completely disregarded because he was relatively unknown. His style was reputed to be bland and his voice nasal. Almost incidentally, his ideas were thought to be too liberal for a national campaign. Cunningham said McGovern was able to wage his kind of campaign in the primaries. He worked for almost a year in New Hampshire and Wisconsin, the latter giving him the key showing that made him the front-runner for the Democratic nomination.

"It's a different ball game now," Cunningham said.

McGovern has said he believes his great asset is his ability to present progressive ideas in a gentle way. Cunningham said this skill reflects in McGovern's personality and background as a college classroom teacher.

But it is an ability not easily communicated in the frenzy of a national campaign. McGovern's changing tactics in an effort to catch fire only seemed to feed the notion that he was indecisive.

After Labor Day, he flew to three or four major cities a day for quick "media appearances" that Cunningham said were designed to put him and his views in the local newspapers and on television with local reporters.

Later with Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, Hubert H. Humphrey and Edmund S. Muskie at his side at varying times, McGovern went before mass rallies.

Then McGovern inaugurated a series of half-hour prime-time network television programs. It was felt that his ability to communicate more effectively before small groups than at big rallies would come across better in the quiet setting of a TV "fireside chat."

McGovern always has been articulate in that he speaks clearly and simply and presents difficult concepts in an easy way. But he lacks the ability to stir up a big crowd that Kennedy demonstrated during their joint appearances.

"I don't think McGovern has electric charisma," Cunningham said. "But he inspires a kind of quiet confidence in people who get to know him which is even better than the canned charisma of some people because an hour later you can't remember what they said."

In a staff that has been criticized for containing too many diverse egos, Cunningham is unsung publicly but a powerhouse in the campaign— and he wants it that way. Other staff members have said that McGovern consults him on every major decision.

If McGovern loses on Nov. 7, Cunningham will be at work on Nov. 8 getting the senator's legislative affairs in order and planning for the 1974 re-election campaign in South Dakota. But Cunningham isn't sure that McGovern is going to lose.

"If we can find the right kind of handle, the right issue, the right way to present McGovern the man, McGovern will continue to get closer until election day," Cunningham said.

"Then a few points will separate them and the whole election may turn on factors that we may not even know yet.

Good News On Crime Front; Rate Shows Smallest Rise

By ROBERT P. HEY
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — For Americans there is good news on the crime front. After increasing for years, serious crime almost leveled off during the first six months of this year, as measured by FBI crime reports.

The latest FBI report says serious crime increased nationally by only 1 percent during those six months — the smallest rate of increase for any six months since the Federal Bureau of Investigation began issuing quarterly reports 12 years ago.

This continues the trend which the FBI has found in the last three years of a slowdown in the rate of increase of serious crime. In 1968 it increased 17 per cent; in 1969, 12 per cent; in 1970, 11 per cent; in 1971, 7 per cent.

What none here yet can tell is whether the slowdown thus far in 1972 marks the hgihwater mark after which the actual members of serious crimes will decrease, or merely a temporary plateau to be followed by further increases.

In any case serious crime actually is decreasing in the one area where there is the most apprehension about it — in the cities, according to these latest statistics. They report that in all cities over 25,000 serious crime declined 1 per cent during the first six months of this year.

The sharpest decline was in the largest cities. Cities with a population over 1 million registered an average 7 per cent drop; cities with population between half a million and 1 million reported an average 4 per cent decline.

In releasing these latest figures, Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst said serious crime declined in "72 of the major cities of the country" during the first six months of this year. He reported this compared with a decline in 53 cities a year ago, and in 34 cities two years ago.

One of the most heartening aspects of the new figures is the considerable slowdown they indicate in the rate of increase of violent crime. "Violent crime" is serious crime committed against people, and encompasses murder, nonnegligent manslaughter, forcible rape, aggravated assault, and robbery.

For the first half of this year violent crime rose only by 1 per cent after several years of much larger increases. Last year, according to the FBI report, it rose 11 per cent; in 1970, 12 per cent; in 1969, 11 per cent; and in 1968, 19 per cent.

The other major category of serious crime is property crime, which consists of burglary, auto theft, and larceny of $50 and over.

Like violent crime, property crime registered a markedly slowed rate of increase — only a 1 per cent rise — during the first six months of this year. Last year it rose 7 per cent; in 1970, 11 per cent; in 1969, 12 per cent, and in 1968, 17 per cent.

These figures constitute welcome news to the Nixon administration and to Republican candidates generally. They will be in position to claim that it is the Nixon administration which has slowed the increase in crime.

Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern immediately took the view that "crime has increased 33 per cent and drug addiction has doubled in the last three years. No amount of juggling the numbers can make the American people forget that the crime problem was worsened and the drug problem has doubled under the Nixon administration."

He charged that "in 1968, 4,477,200 crimes were reported to the FBI. Last year the figure was 5,995,200 — an increased on 1½ million crimes or 33 per cent in just three years — The 1½-million crime increase in the last three years is as great as the increase in any previous three-year period in our history."

Depth of public concern about crime was showed once again by results of a Gallup Poll released late last April. The poll reported that one person in three believed there was more crime in his community than there had been a year ago, and four in 10 said "about the same." Only 11 per cent said there was less.

The poll also reported that 41 per cent of persons questioned said they were afraid to walk alone at night in areas near their homes. Among women, of all ages, 58 per cent were afraid; among women over 50, three in four were afraid.

IT GLEAMS, IT MOVES

Tendril-like projections, chased and studded with light-catching knobs, give this metal sculpture its title: "Horned Beast." Literally a moving work of art, it reacts to the lightest touch or to the passage of air. It was created in corten steel by Santa Cruz sculptor Gene Flores, who won the Mill Valley Art Commission's award for excellence at last weekend's Mill Valley Art Festival. The work will be displayed through October in the finance office at Mill Valley City Hall.

Moscone To Appear For McGovern

Moscone will speak at 11 a.m. in Room A of the Student Union Building as part of the Democratic Party's nationwide observance of the fourth anniversary of Nixon's "not another chance" speech. Nixon, then presidential contender, said, "Those who have had a chance for four years and could not produce peace should not be given another chance."

The Marin McGovern for President Committee, which will sponsor Moscone's speech, also announced it will run buses to the Cow Palace on Oct. 13 to hear McGovern make "a major policy address" at 8 p.m.

Buses will leave starting at 6:30 p.m. from Northgate Shopping Center in Terra Linda, Bon Air Shopping Center in Greenbrae and from Red Cart market in Mill Valley.

Hongisto's Men Can Sport Long Locks

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sheriff Richard Hongisto resolved a hairy issue yesterday, giving his deputies the go-ahead to grow sideburns, mustaches, beards and long locks.

"Prevailing social standards will be our guidelines," he said. "Deputy sheriffs are people. Why discriminate against them when society is recognizing long hair?"

Hongisto, who wears his own hair in a mod style, said in an official directive to his deputies: "Sideburns are acceptable. Mustaches are acceptable. Small beards are acceptable. Hair extending over the ears and collars is acceptable." But he made two exceptions:

"If it appears hair is positively untidy, or so long as to constitute a security hazard the matter will be called to the personal attention of the sheriff. He will render a decision in all cases."

If a deputy is assigned to another department — for example, for training which has hair policy different from Hongisto's, the deputy will have to conform with the other department's hair regulations.

Police rules prohibit beards, unless authorized for undercover work. Beards are also off-limits for firemen. A policeman's hair can go down to the collar and a fireman's must be a half-inch above the collar.

Transmission, Tools Stolen From Auto

A transmission valued at $300 and $200 worth of tools were stolen Monday or Tuesday from a car in Santa Venetia, sheriff's deputies reported yesterday.

The tools belonging to Donald Maguire of 20 Vendola Drive and the transmission belonging to Richard B. Standard of San Rafael were stolen from Standard's car at Maguire's home.

It is no longer true that only the very wealthy can have their assets professionally managed.

'Pocketbook Conference' Next Week

How can you legally increase your take-home pay? Are you getting your share of tax deductions, and do you earn enough to afford a tax shelter?

These and other questions affecting the individual's pocketbook will be discussed in a series of public conferences on tax tips and savings to be held at Dominican College in San Rafael Tuesday through Thursday. The conferences will be held from 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. in Bertrand Hall.

Moderator Ernest T. Stair of San Rafael said the conferences are open to the public, with a donation of $1 per session.

The three-evening series is a public service program prepared by the North Bay Chapter of the Society of California Accountants, and sponsored by the Marin County Chamber of Commerce, Dominican College, and the Independent-Journal. Co-sponsors are the San Rafael and Corte Madera chambers of commerce, Marin County Board of Realtors and Marin Builders Exchange.

Here is the schedule of topics and speakers:

Tuesday, Oct. 10 — "Income Tax Forms," Richard Y. Martz, certified public accountant; "Payroll Tax Forms," Michael M. Manning, CPA; "Marin County Tax Forms," Roy F.N. Brown, senior auditor appraiser for the County of Marin.

Wednesday — "Tax Tips For Wage Earners," James P. Calandra, CPA; "Tax Tips For Business and Professional Men," Roland D. Hellman, public accountant; "Are Tax Shelters For You?" Leland H. Dibble Jr., attorney and CPA.

Thursday — "Wage, Price, Rent Freeze — One Year Old," Ortwin Dross, Internal Revenue agent; "New California Income Tax Laws," Clark G. Allen, tax auditor for the Franchise Tax Board; "What's In The Crystal Ball?" Ted D. Gibson, research officer for Security Pacific National Bank.

Anti-Porn Initiative Has Reagan Backing

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Gov. Ronald Reagan yesterday endorsed the anti-obscenity initiative on the Nov. 7 ballot saying it would stop the "spread of filth" in California.

"I want to announce my support of Prop. 18 not only as the governor of this state but as a parent who is deeply concerned about the tragic pollution of our sociological climate by the commercial interests who are flooding us with pornography," Reagan said in a statement.

Reagan labeled as "unfounded" a charge by Prop. 18 opponents that it would impose censorship on books, newspapers, motion pictures and works of art. The opponents also contend the measure is "clearly unconstitutional."

"It is my opinion ... that the proposition is drafted not only to protect the public against a continuing hard core smut that concerns us all, but also protects the legitimate publisher and theater against specious prosecution," the governor said.

"Many lawyers, including my legal staff, have reviewed Prop. 18 and have concluded that this is a reasonable, well-drafted measure deisnged to give law enforcement the weapons it badly needs to help communities protect themselves against smut."

The measure would outlaw depiction of specified types of sexual conduct in films, print media, sculpture, photographs and other media unless they were a minor part of a work or in an educational study.

50,000 Join Service In September

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Pentagon says a record 50,000 recruits were signed into the armed services in September.

Defense Manpower Chief Roger T. Kelley said four of every five were "true volunteers" as opposed to those who joined in the past under pressure of the draft.

Ticket Books Now Available

Books of convenience tickets valid for the Golden Gate Bridge, Sausalito ferry and Golden Gate Transit buses now are available through Macy's stores in San Rafael and San Francisco.

Credit customers can telephone for mail delivery of the books. Others can buy them at ticket offices in each store. The offices are open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Profile Of A Marinite

"We're actually the city's complaint bureau," says Norris Rawles, San Rafael's director of public works. "But I've got some good help, and I enjoy this job."

By NELS JOHNSON

Norris M. Rawles, San Rafael's director of public works, recently returned from a European vacation more enthused than ever about San Rafael's street and sewer systems.

The cobblestone roads found in many European nations, Rawles said, make for rough going on the feet and bouncy, jolting rides in cars.

"And from what I saw, San Rafael has a better sewer system than those of Finland, Denmark or Russia," Rawles said. He said canals he saw in Lenigrad, USSR, were black with raw sewage, sludge and oil.

"IT WAS JUST unbelievable," he declared.

The 63-year-old Rawles said he was6most impressed with the Scandinavian systems of miniparks on his six-week trip through Norway, Denmark, Sweden, Holland and Russia. "I'm going to ask the Redevelopment Agency to consider banning cars from Fourth Street and set up a sytem of miniparks with outdoor resturants," he said.

Rawles, a long-time employee of the city, was appointed assistant city engineer in 1953 after years of engineering work with the state and private contracting firms. He was appointed as first superintendent of public works when the post was created in 1957.

"THE LATE Edward W. Culver was mayor then and John F. McInnis was a councilman," Rawles recalled.

Since then, Rawles has watched the city's public works department more than double in size. He now oversees 54 employees and a budget of 3.2 million dollars.

Public works is the housekeeping department of the city, charged with construction and maintenance of new facilities, roads, storm drains and sewer facilities, Rawles explained. Public works is also responsible for maintaining more than 15,000 shade trees in the city, he said.

"PEOPLE DON'T realize what a chore public works is," Rawles said. "We're actually the city's 'complaint bureau,'and don't often get compliments. Dozens of irate residents call each week complaining about anything from chuck holes, dust and faulty traffic lights to fallen tree limbs," he said.

"But I've had some good help and I enjoy this job," he chuckled.

His biggest problem is coordinating budget approval of projects with the weather "so we can get things off the ground before the winter season," Rawles said.

HE SAID the department is currently working on a new parking lot under the Highway 101 overpass between Fourth Street and Fifth Avenue, teying sanitary sewers for leakage, and the widening of San Pedro Road as well as "so many other projects you couldn't list them all."

Looking over his career with public works, Rawles said he was proudest of spearheading the million-dollar sanitary sewer bond issue which passed in April, 1970.

"This department has also enlarged storm drains along Second and Third streets and Fifth Avenue, put sewers in at Bret Harte Heights, spearheaded the second phase of Highway 101 through the city and made a number of street improvements," Rawles said.

AND THESE, Rawles continued, represent only a small portion of public works activities over the years.

Rawles said the city's next major public works project will be the reconstruction of Fourth Street and the Miracle Mile between H Street and San Anselmo city limits. "I'm also looking forward to beautifying entrances to the city and the widening of Highway 101 to eight lanes through town," he said.

Rawles was born in Booneville, Mendocino County, in 1909, the son of a small rancher. As a youngster he plowed fields, hauled grain and milked cows. "I'm just a country boy," he beamed.

HE GRADUATED fram Anderson Valley High School as one of the top students in a class of eight in 1927.

Having become fascinated with road construction as a 50-cents-a-day laborer with a state road crew in high school, Rawles entered Stanford University and studied civil engineering. But six months before graduation, his father became ill and he had to quit to help his three brothers and four sisters run the ranch.

After six months on the ranch, a friend's father who worked as chief engineer for the Western Pacific Railroad obtained Rawles a job as a "chainman" or surveyor on a U.S. Bureau of Public Roads crew.

"YOU COULDN'T beg, borrow or get a job in those depression days," he recalled, adding that he worked for $3 a day measuring and surveying land for new roads in Yosemite and Sequoia national parks.

In 1935, Rawles passed a civil service examination administered by the State Division of Highways, and became junior engineering aide. Over the next 13 years, he worked his way up to associate highway engineer, doing both on-site and administrative work for the Sate Division of Highways.

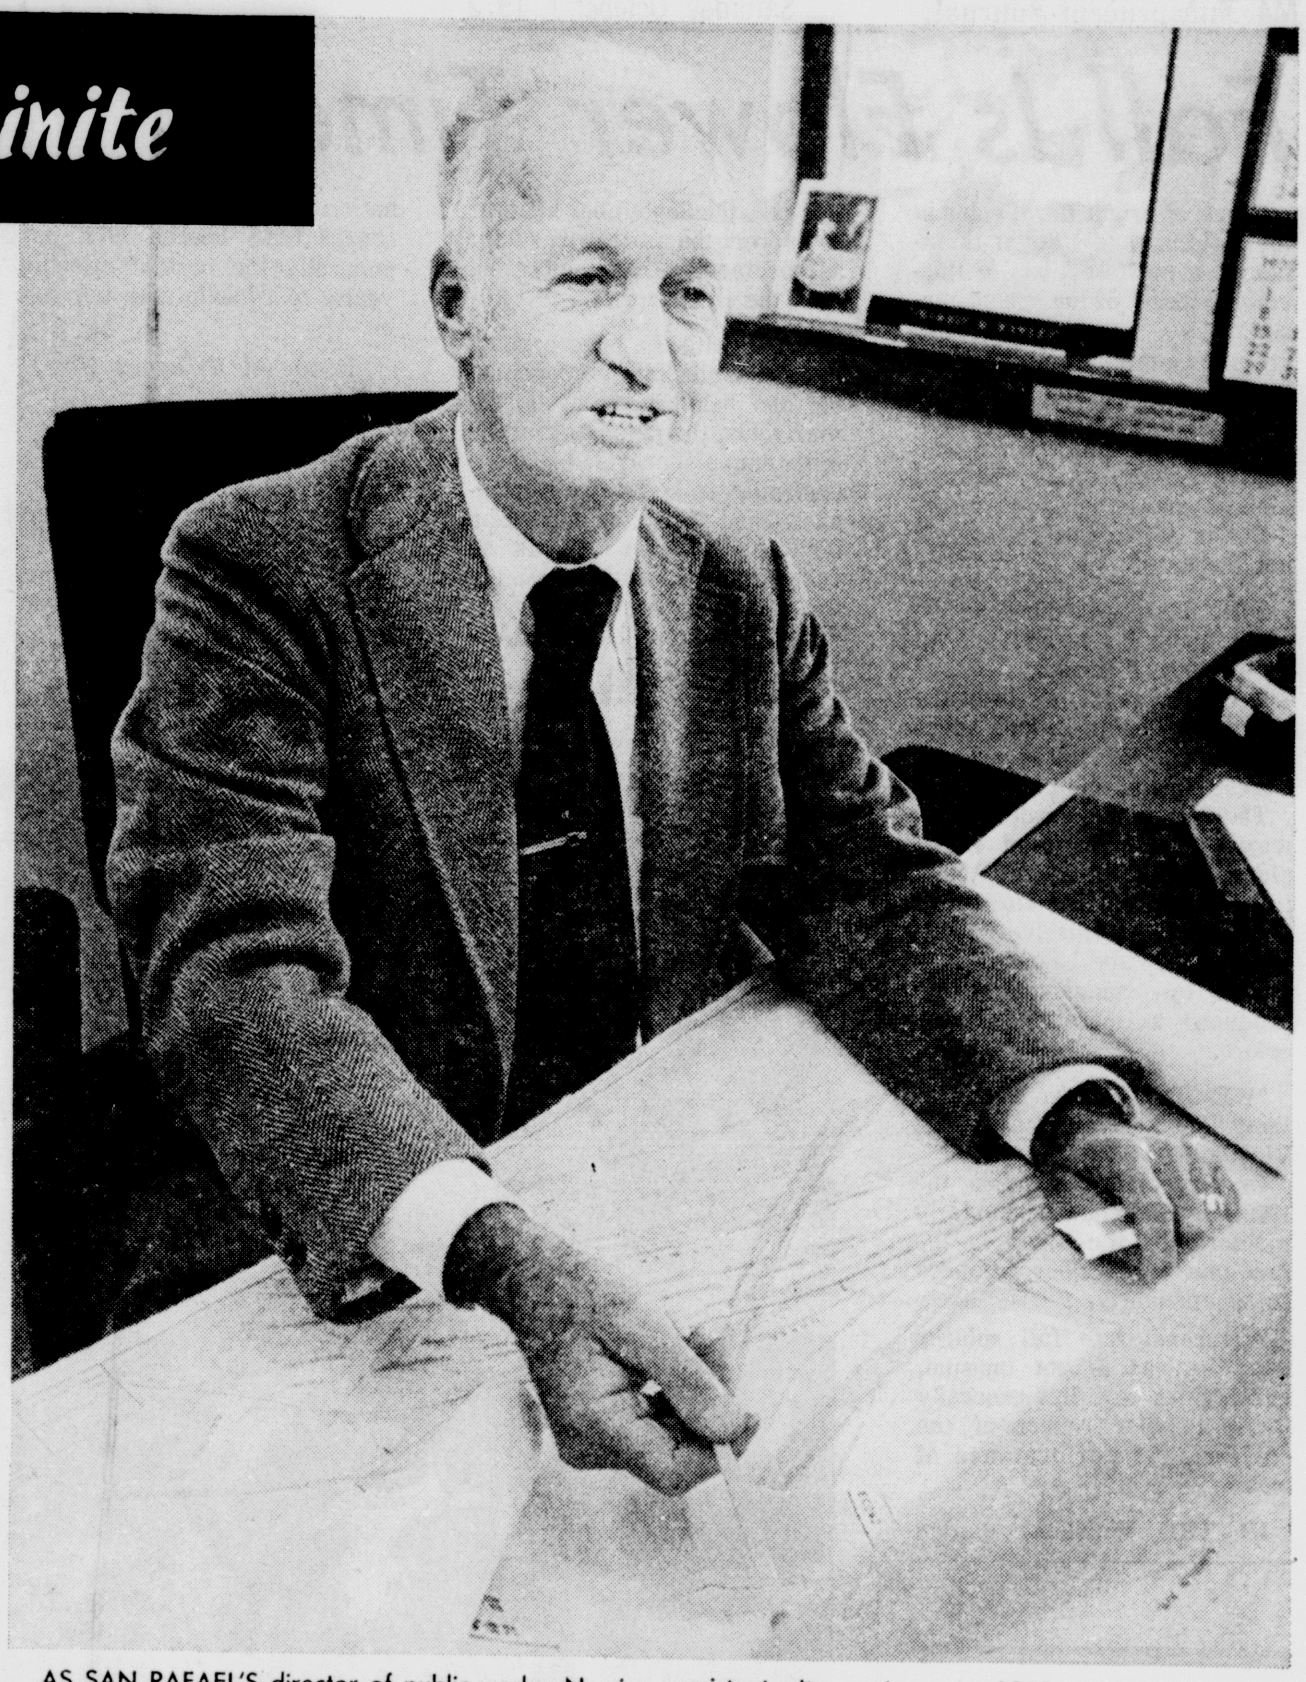

In 1948, the "grass became greener on the other side" according to Rawles, who joined a private firm and became a contractor for five years.

RAWLES SAID that when he first moved to San Rafael in connection with his state engineering job in 1943, the city was like "a little country city, with about 100 parking meters,"

"It was all open space," he grinned.

"San Rafael is still a nice city, but we've got people problems now," he said.

He married his wife, Edith, in 1941. The couple lives at 15 Bonnie Brae Drive and have two sons, Norris Jr., 28, and Jeffrey, 24.

Fall Is Flower Time

Speak of bright floral color in the garden, and "green thumbers" in most sections of this country think of the spring season.

Comes autumn, and they look to foliage, plus that queen of the autumnal flowering plants, the chrysanthemum, for a generally softer, more subdued kind of color.

But in Marin County, such is not the case.

THE FALL garden can be every bit as bright and colorful as the spring garden.

A case in point has been the garden of Lucian B. and Agnes Vincilione of 42 Barranca Road, Forest Knolls, this past month.

The Vincilione garden is always a neighborhood showplace, but this fall, Mrs. Vincilione admits, her flowering plants outdid themselves. Fuchsias, azaleas and begonias, supported by annuals in bloom, produced a riot of September colors.

"WE HAVE never had anything like it before," says Mrs Vincilione.

One big factor in making the 1972 fall color show particularly memorable, she says, is the fact that her azaleas produced so spectacularly.

A second, late fall splurge from azaleas is not unusual, nurserymen say. But generally it is a paler repeat of the earlier first performance of blooms.

IN THE Vincilione garden this fall, the September burst of color from the azaleas was fully as spectacular, if not more so, than the first show.

These, with the huge begonia blossoms, the always dependable and beautiful fuchsias, the marigolds, the petunias and the other annuals, provided a demonstration of just why Californians — and Marinites in particular — look upon the fall as every bit as colorful a season in the garden as the spring.

Mrs. Vincilione has no explanation as to why her garden should have chosen 1972, not generally the best of growing years, to explode with fall color.

"It caught us by surprise," she admits.

And a most pleasant surprise, it was.

With the right shrubs and plants, nurserymen advise, other Marinites can enjoy that same September and October lift from their gardens.

FROM HER bursting-with-color garden in her Forest Knolls backyard, Agnes Vincilione cuts a bouquet of marigolds to brighten the interior of her home. The Vincilione garden stands this fall as a dazzling example of how the colors that other areas enjoy mainly in the spring and summer can be savored by Marin "green thumbers" in the autumn of the year. Also to be seen in the color photo are petunias, a fuchsia and other plantings contributing to the spectacular show.

WATERING IS THE key to successful gardening in Marin County, and many of the plants particularly appreciate an overhead shower. Here Agnes Vincilione performs that chore in her Forest Knolls garden. The huge blossoms cascading down at upper left are the products of one of her spectacular begonias. Fuchsias, azaleas and an assortment of annuals are other contributors to the brilliant floral show.

Fine Furniture, Made By Hand-Power

Craftsman Roper Crawford Works With Minimum Of Powered Tools

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

The typical home woodworking shop is crowded with power tools.

The bench saw rubs platforms with the lathe, beside which stands the drill press. The walls are festooned with powered routers, sanders, drills, scrollers — each hanging from its own set of hooks (and, often, shining brightly new).

It isn't like that in the portion of his garage that Roper R. Crawford has converted to a woodworking shop at his San Rafael home.

THE ONLY powered tools in Crawford's shop are a lathe and an electric drill. The rest of the tools are "hand-powered" — and many of them have been made by Crawford himself.

There are routers and scrollers made from rasps and files, other tools that have been manufactured from old kitchen knives.

Typical of Crawford's own inventions is his method of removing old paint and varnish from furniture to be restored. Instead of going through the usual, trying process of applying paint remover, then sanding, Crawford scrapes off the paint or varnish with scrapers he makes from old hacksaw blades. The result is much smoother and cleaner, requiring less sanding. He uses the same hacksaw-blade scrapers instead of planes for smoothing wood.

THERE IS another striking difference between Crawford's shop and the typical one. The space above the rafters in his garage-turned-workshop is packed solidly with lumber — but most of it consists of boards he cut himself, by hand, from limbs and trunks of trees.

When an apple or oak, acacia or elm is cut down in the neighborhood, Crawford is likely to be on hand to try to get the trunk and some of the larger branches. Then, laboriously, he cuts them into boards — using his engineering know-how to get the maximum board footage, for he is a civil engineer.

All this may sound amateurish, even primitive. But there is nothing amateurish about the furniture that Roper Crawford makes or restores in his home workshop.

IN THE DINING room of the Crawford home is a table of which the gleaming surface highlights a fascinating wood-grain pattern. And if one looks closely at the table top, he will see that there is not a straight board edge in it anywhere. Crawford made it from an acacia tree. The tree trunk was not thick enough to produce square-edged boards of suitable width; so he fitted the uneven edges together, filled the interstices with other pieces of the same tree trunk — and produced a work of art.

That table top is typical of the care and ingenuity that mark the work of this home woodworking hobbyist; and it tells something about the man himself.

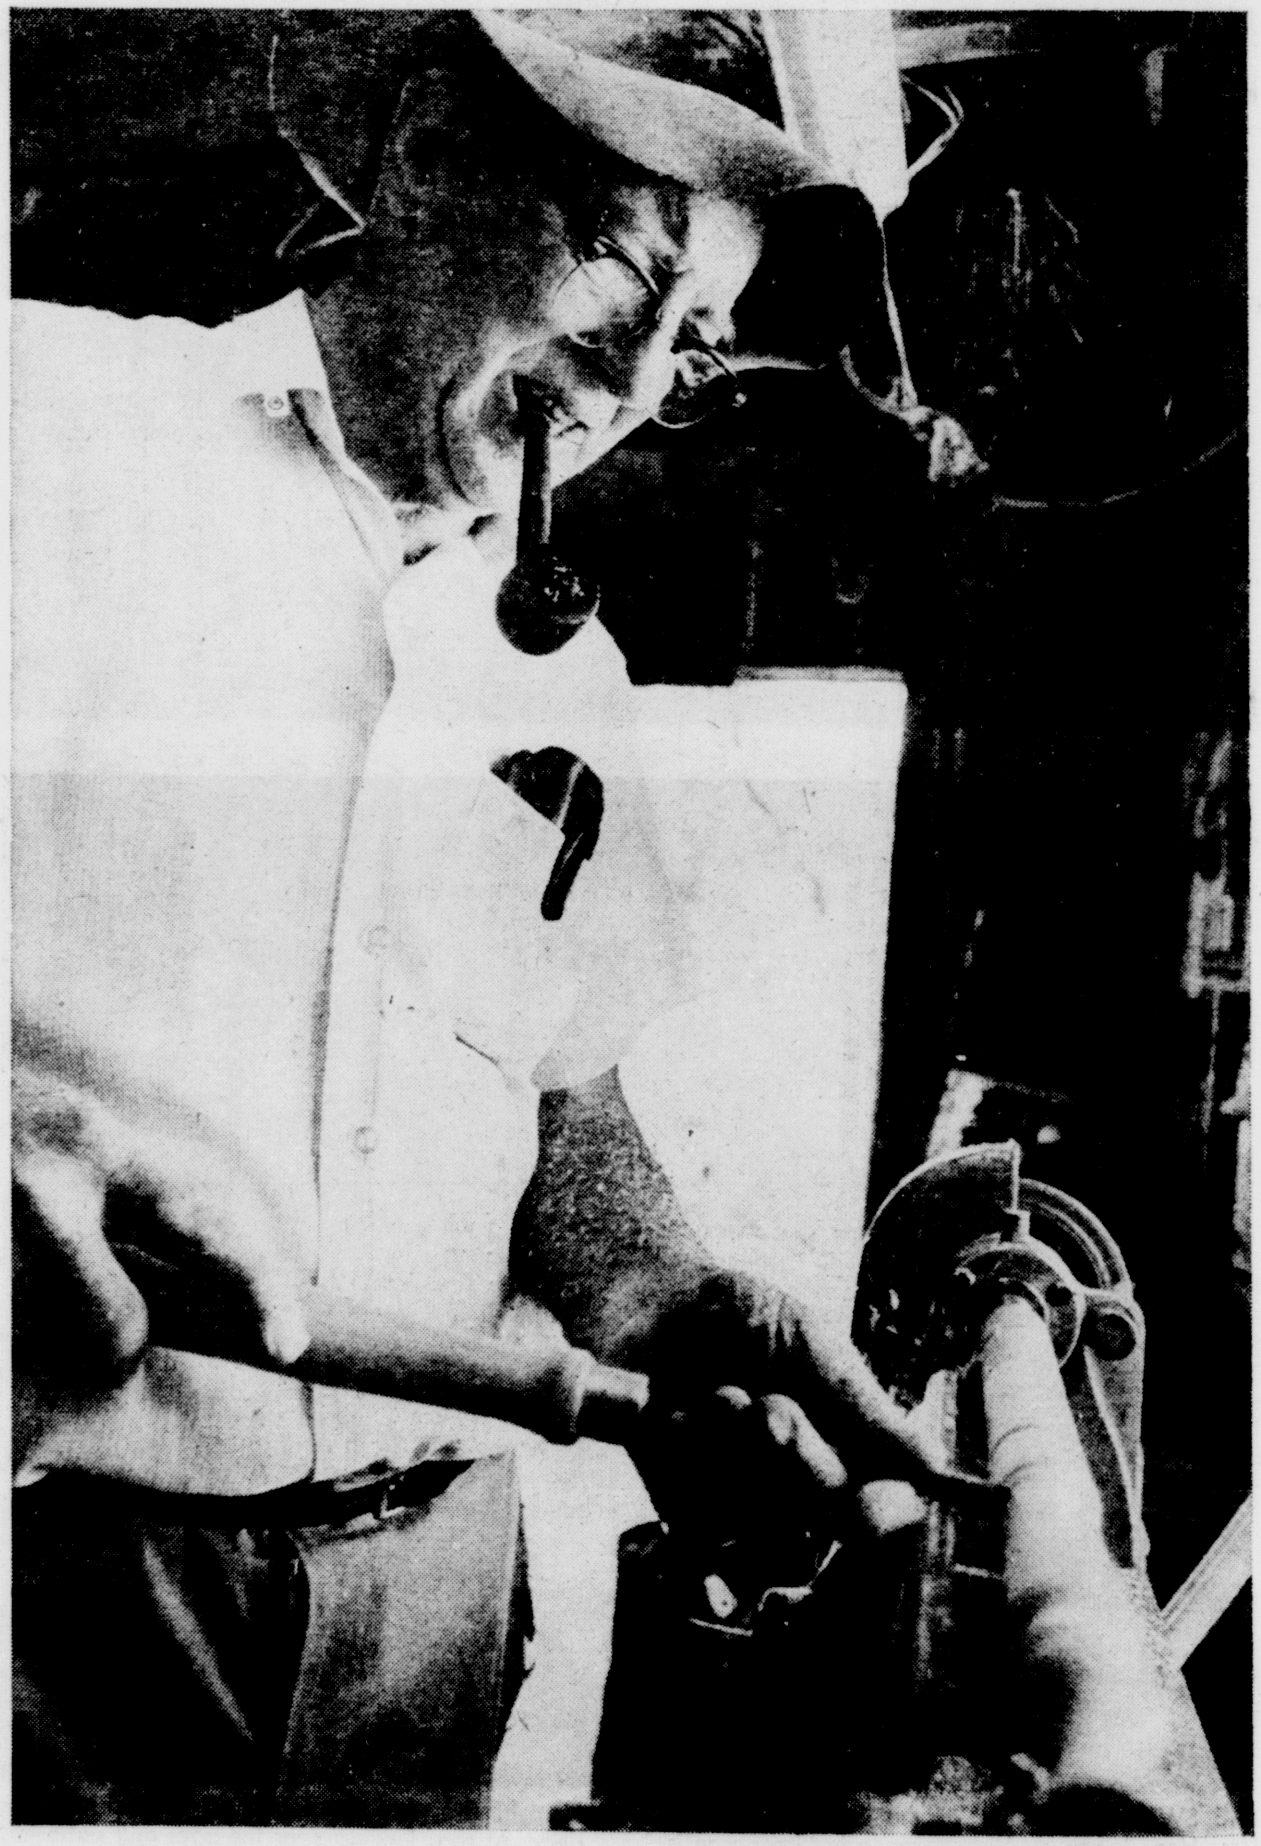

"All the really good old furniture was hand made," observes Crawford, sucking at his pipe (which usually is unlit). "The old-time furniture makers worked by hand, with hand tools. I figure if you're going to make something good, you have to do the same."

AND SO HE does, starting often with nothing but a tree trunk.

Crawford says he has been interested in woodworking since boyhood. When in high school, he made a series of archery bows — "the best one out of a piece of Osage orange, the others were not good wood," he recalls. One of his current projects is to make bows out of acacia wood — parts of the same tree that produced that table-top.

"I've never heard of a bow being made of acacia," he said, "but I know the wood is as tough and strong and resilient

WORKING BY EYE, without a pattern, Roper R. Crawford of San Rafael fashions a table leg on the lathe that is one of only two powered tools in his home woodworking shop. The resulting set of legs will match perfectly — for Crawford insists on perfection.

as any you can get. So I'm going to try it."

THE YOUTH during which he first got interested in woodworking was spent in many places. Crawford was born in Mississippi, but "grew up all over the place — the family moved every year," he relates.

He wound up in California, attending University of Southern California, where he took his engineering degree, and working for the Coast and Geodetic Survey to help finance his schooling. After graduation he went to work for Richfield Oil Co. in Taft.

He first saw Marin in 1936 while taking some post-graduate studies at University of California. "I guess the place attracted me," he chuckles. But he did not come here to stay until eight years later, and when he did he was accompanied by his bride, whom he had met while working for the Tennessee Valley Authority in Knoxville, Tenn. The future Mrs. Crawford was teaching all eight grades of a one-room school at Plato, Ky., when the young engineer wooed and won her.

CRAWFORD returned to California to work for Bechtel Corp., by whom he was employed about 16 years, interrupted by a few years with the Department of Agriculture.

For Bechtel, the Crawfords traveled to the Middle East, England, Canada and various parts of the United States, Crawford being a supervising engineer for pipeline projects. He carries in his head today a map of the pipelines that carry crude oil to California refineries, for he engineered many of them.

He left Bechtel 14 years ago to become a consulting engineer on his own. Recently, however, he has received fewer and fewer calls as pipeline projects have been scarce. "The environmentalists put me out of business," he says good-humoredly.

WITH MORE time on his hands, he has been able to do more with his hobby. After completely restoring the old house at 304 H Street which he bought soon after moving to Marin, he turned to making items of furniture for it. Gradually, the "store-bought" furnishings are being replaced by Crawford's own products and his restorations of fine furniture that had been discarded as "junk" by former owners.

Two of the large spools were gone, and several others were broken. Crawford found some pieces of matching wood, and turned out new spools on his lathe, using a hand gouge and making the cuts by eye without a pattern. After he placed the spools in the bedstead and refinished it, the match was so perfect that even Crawford himself cannot tell which are the spools he made.

A GIFT project started him on another hobby — caning. In Popular Mechanics magazine, he found instructions for making a caned-top footstool. Following the instructions, he made one for a gift for a friend.

It is typical of Crawford that by the time he had completed one footstool, he had figured out a better way to tie the canes than that recommended in the magazine article. He has made several more footstools, has caned several chairs, and made a bench with caned seat and back for the front hall of his home. (The bench, except for the caning, was made entirely from a piece of railroad dunnage; "it's oak, the best you can find," says Crawford.)

A man of many ideas, Crawford thinks the current popularity of caned furniture offers an opportunity for the blind. Blind people can readily learn to do caning by feel, he believes, and it would provide a much more profitable occupation than tying brooms.

THE WOOD pieces Crawford turns out, from tiny frames for miniature pictures to chairs and benches, all reflect the philosophy of a firm believer in self-reliance:

"If I'm going to make something, I want to make it just a little better."

"One of the best eriode of my life began in May, 1967; that was when I met George Murphy (Pops) Foster. . . Pops was a historical source and was entitled to say his piece as the cat who wrote that history. Frankly, after spending all that time with Pops, I would be inclined to accept his version of the story." — Tom Stoddard in the foreword of "Pops Foster: News Orleans Jazzman."

POPS AND ALMA Foster were photographed in about 1965. The great string bass player died in October, 1969, but his widow still resides in San Francisco. The picture is included among the illustrations in the book "Pops Foster: New Orleans Jazzman," an autobiography as told to Tom Stoddard of San Anselmo.

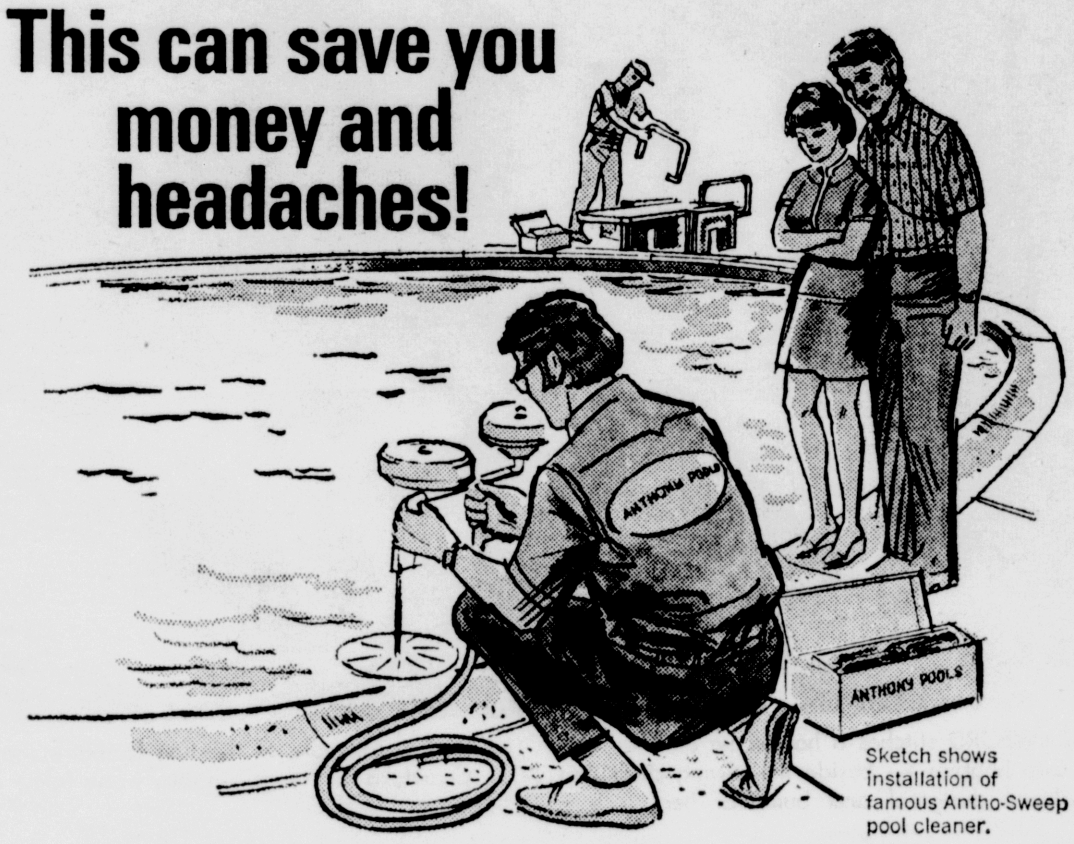

THIS PHOTOGRAPH of George Murphy (Pops) Foster and his wife Alma was taken two decades earlier than the one above — in 1945 — and 22 years before Tom Stoddard of San Anselmo began the friendship with the great jazz musician that he still cherishes as "one of the best periods of my life."

Marin's Tom Stoddard Is An Expert On Black Music

He Knows His Jazz History

By DON KEOWN

Tom Stoddard of San Anselmo, who cannot play a musical instrument, is one of only two white members of the Kansas City Mutual Musicians Foundation Inc., a spin-off of the old separate black musicians' union.

It is an honor of which Stoddard is especially proud, earned because he is an established writer on jazz and because he has shown a particular interest and understanding of the music of the black man and of its history.

During the day Stoddard works in San Francisco as an assistant vice president in commercial loan administration with Wells Fargo Bank.

IN THE LATE afternoon he returns to his home at 210 The Alameda, San Anselmo, where awaiting him are wife Roberta, four children, ages 8 through 13, an extensive collection of jazz records, photographs and other memorabilia, and a typewriter upon which he pounds out articles for jazz journals or chapters for his books.

He is the author of "Pops Foster, New Orleans Jazzman," published in 1971 by the University of California Press, and still in print and selling, and he is at work on "Black Jazz on the Barbary Coast," also to be published by the University of California Press, probably in late 1973 or early 1974.

Tom Stoddard began his love affair with jazz — "Jazz is the only art form that has evolved in the 20th Century and is indigenous to the United States," he says — as a youth in Southern California where he was born and reared.

"WHEN I WAS in high school, I used to go hear Stan Kenton, Duke Ellington, Benny Goodman and the other great ones of the time," he recalls. "But the real treat was to go to Watts to listen to some of the fine black jazz musicians who were playing there."

Stoddard says he developed this personal preference for the black artist's music, while retaining a liking for all jazz, because "after all, it was the black people who created jazz. It is far more African than European in its origins — in its rhythm, timbre and melody. The improvisational nature of the music is an African thing, too.

"And if you are going to study early jazz, as I decided to do, you are going to wind up studying black music. That is how it all began."

STODDARD DID more than study the music. He began writing about it, and about the men and women who played or sang it.

In the years that have followed, Stoddard's stories have appeared in a number of jazz and popular publications.

He has been a frequent contributor to Storyville, the London-based magazine, writing on such subjects as Red Cayou, Blind Tom, the Al Pierre band, Ethel Francisco and "Black Jazz on the West Coast."

A piece on "Ike Bell in Kansas City" was written for Coda, published in Canada.

WHY ARE SO many of the journals dealing with this American art form published in other countries, especially in England and Germany, both hotbeds of interest in the music?

"Europeans and Canadians are just more interested in jazz history than Americans," Stoddard answers. "Black Americans, in particular, aren't interested because jazz is something that is just part of their makeup, and so they take it pretty much for granted. White people are more likely to take it seriously, and there are a lot of jazz buffs in this country. But most of the history and the other writing on jazz has come out of Europe."

Such writing, Stoddard feels, often places too much emphasis upon New Orleans as the source of jazz, and overlooks other regions that made their contributions.

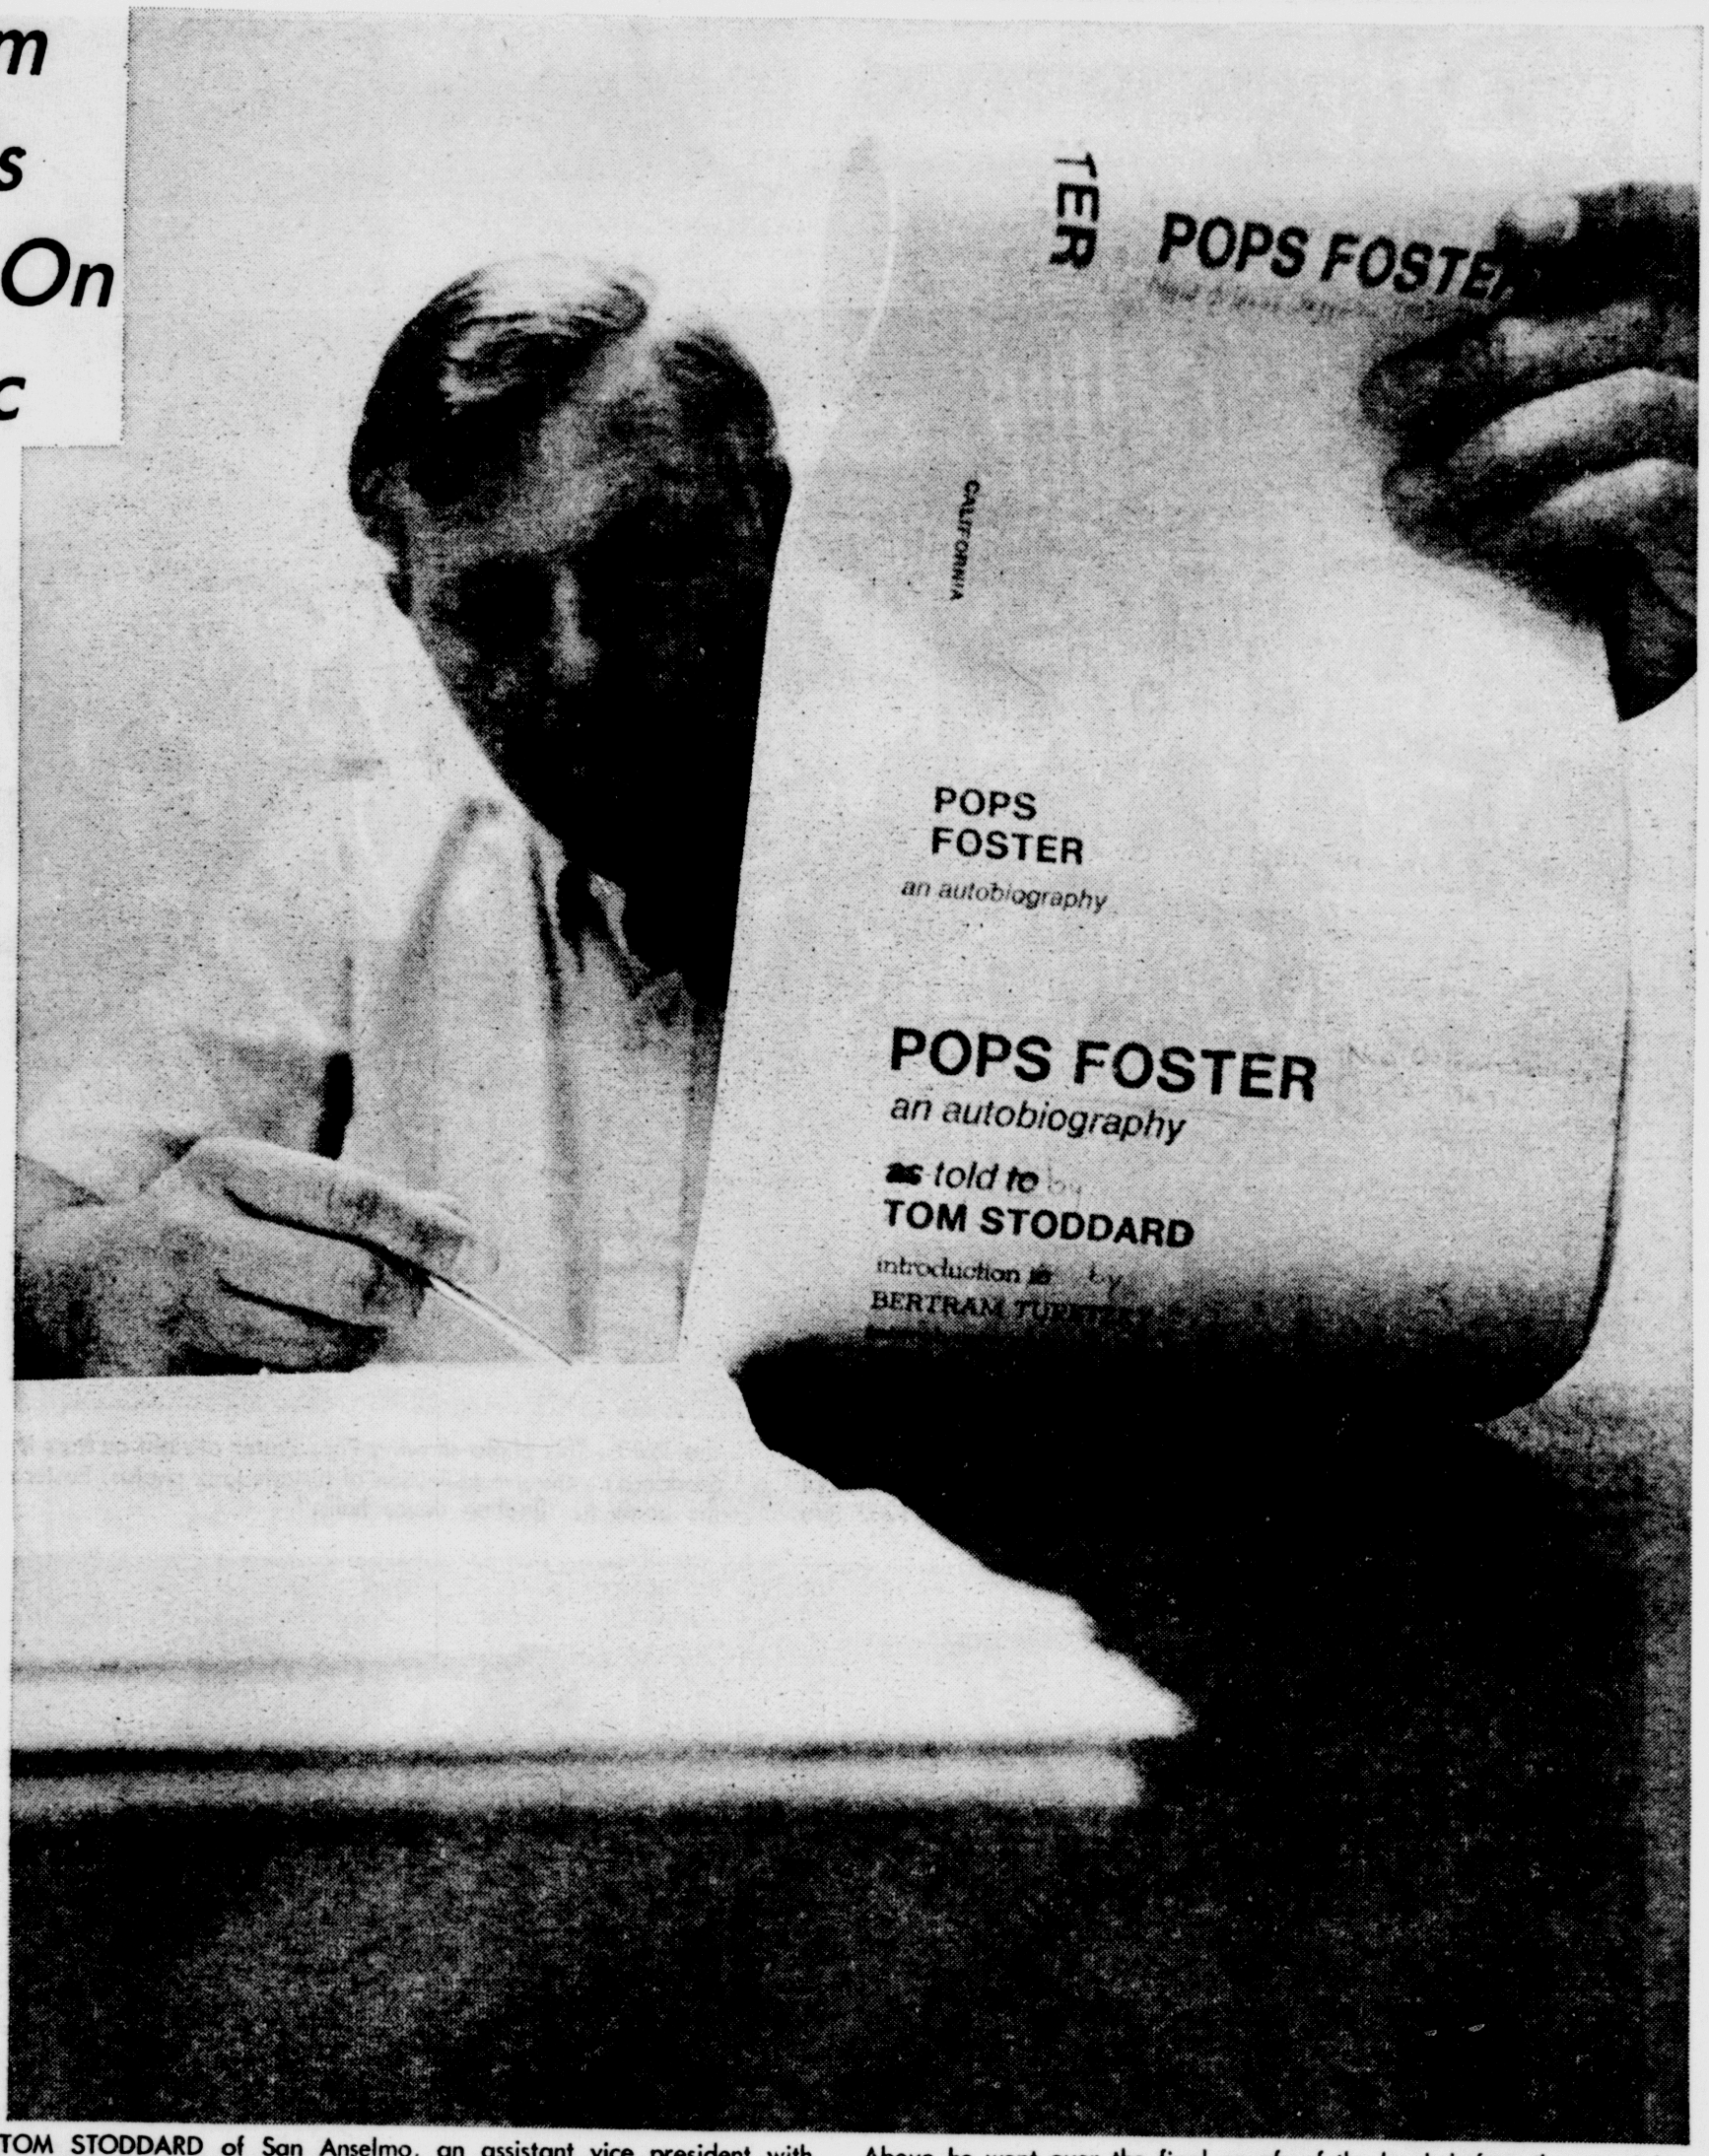

"I DON'T DISPUTE that jazz, although it wasn't then called that, had its beginnings in the 1890s in New Orleans," he says. "But it spread very quickly to other sections with black populations, and these places, too, made their contributions to the art form."

For instance, he notes, there was a considerable amount of very early jazz played on the West Coast.

And the term "jazz" was first applied to the music in San Francisco — by writer E. T. (Scoop) Gleason of the San Francisco Call.

TOM STODDARD of San Anselmo, an assistant vice president with Wells Fargo Bank in San Francisco, is also an internationally known authority on early black jazz. He is the author of numerous articles on the subject and of the book, "Pops Foster: New Orleans Jazzman." Above he went over the final proofs of the book before they went to the printer. Now he is completing the manuscript of another book, this one on the black music that flourished in the heyday of San Francisco's Barbary Coast.

THE FATE MARABLE BAND, or the Jazz Syncopators, are credited with being the first jazz band to take the New Orleans music up the Mississippi River, playing aboard the riverboats almost continuously from 1907 into the 1930s. This photo showing Pops Foster at right on bass is part of Tom Stoddard's extensive collection of historic jazz photos. Foster remembered the boats as "floating dance halls."

THE LOUIS ARMSTRONG BAND, with Pops Foster on the stringed bass at right, was photographed in front of this colorful backdrop by the Rockwell-O'Keefe Inc. agency of Radio City for publicity purposes. Foster not only played with Armstrong extensively, particularly between 1935 and 1940, but enjoyed a close personal friendship with the immortal "Satchmo" through the years.

dard is now working, and has been off and on for several years, interrupting it to do the Pops Foster book, covers San Francisco music from 1900 to 1920.

Stoddard first met Pops Foster, the venerable bass player, at a jazz concert he attended in 1967. A short time later, Pops and his wife Alma were dinner guests of the Stoddards in their home, and at that time plans were laid for the book.

It was to be an "as-told-to" autobiography, with Foster orally recalling the past, and Stoddard putting it down in writing for him.

"I WOULD TAKE my tape recorder over to Pops' house and spend an hour and a half or two hours per session taping off his recollections," Stoddard relates. "Then I would transcribe the tapes. And working from that material, I would put the manuscript into its final form. The whole thing took two and a half years."

Using that approach, there was, of course, a lot of repetition in the Foster ramblings down memory lane that had to be eliminated by Stoddard.

"But," says the Marin man, "Pops had a really fantastic memory. It was almost unbelievable, how he could recollect dates, names and places, going back to 1905 or before."

ONCE STODDARD became accustomed to the patois spoken by Foster, he found the aging musician extremely articulate.

Foster had been born in 1892 in Louisiana, and in 1899, at age 7, he played his first musical gig at a plantation dance and gumbo feed. In 1900 the family moved to New Orleans, and the boy was soon in the musical swim of things in that busy city.

"It was the Red Light District that really opened up employment opportunities for musicians," Stoddard says. "Previously everyone had looked upon music as just an opportunity to pick up a little extra Saturday night change. But when the District began hiring professional musicians, it was possible to work at it full time and earn a living wage.

"POPS FOSTER, the boy, was one of the first, and he remembered those days clearly."

POPS FOSTER died in 1969 at age 77, a rather remarkable age, Stoddard notes, in that he belonged to both a race, the black and a profession, jazz musician, with a shorter than normal life expectancy, and that "he never made any real attempt to take care of himself."

That Foster was able to outlive almost all his contemporaries, despite this lack of care for his health, Stoddard attributes to his attitude toward life as summarized in Pops' closing passage in the book:

"A lot of the old guys are gone now. There's only a couple of us left. . . I've played with a lot of guys in my life and had a lot of good times. Most of the guys I've played with the last 35 years think I'm a lot older than I am. They remember I played with Freddie Keppard, Manuel Perez, Joe Oliver and guys like that. That makes you old in their eyes. Some of them think I'm about 150 years old.

"WELL, WHEN I started I was the youngest one in the band and now I'm the oldest. It's been kicks."

Stoddard added his own epilogue after Foster's death, concluding: "On Oct. 30, 1969, at 77 years and a few months, the world lost a great jazzman and I lost a close friend. I would like to say what Baby Dodds said about him. I loved that old man."

Before Foster's death, Stoddard had recorded his voice on some 70 hours of tapes — tapes that eventually will go into some jazz archive for posterity.

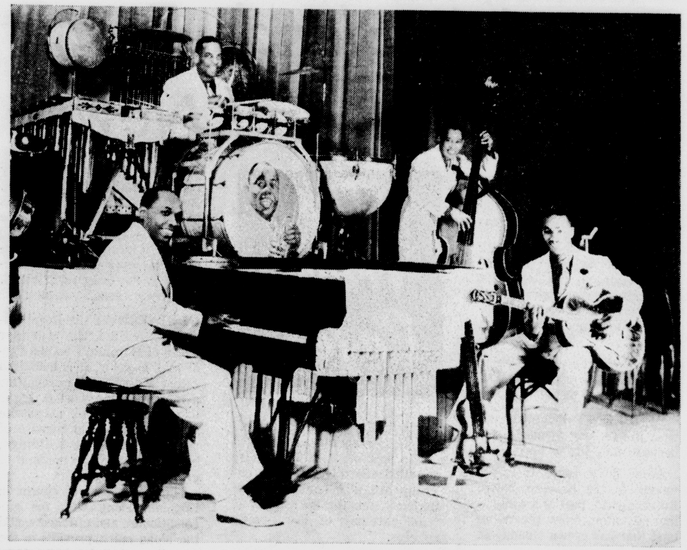

FOR HIS "Black Jazz on the Barbary Coast," Stoddard has followed a similar procedure, taking his tape recorder to the aging black musicians and taping their recollections of the old days.

These sources have become sadly few in number. But those who have survived, Stoddard finds, possess keen memories and a propensity for articulation and expression.

"This," Stoddard feels, "is because black culture in general and black music in particular have a tradition for passing their history down, generation by generation, through word of mouth. Most of the great old black musicians were illiterate or barely literate. Written history was an impossibility for them. But they compensated by telling — by talking about what it was like. They have been doing it for generations, and they are gifted at it."

THE BEST single source of firsthand information on early black jazz on the West Coast that Stoddard has found is Benjamin (Reb) Spikes, 83 and black, residing in Los Angeles.

Spikes starting playing reed instruments with bands in Los Angeles in 1910 and by 1915 was playing on San Francisco's Barbary Coast. His recollections of those days are vivid and authentic.

Why is it that Stoddard, white, suburbanite, business executive, non-musical himself, is able to achieve such an affinity with these people, a feeling they fully reciprocate?

"THERE'S NO secret to it," he replies. "To start with, I guess I understand them, and they understnad me. And I respect them as the fine creative artists they were and are. You don't patronize these kind of people. They are proud, and they have every reason to be so."

His major criticism of jazz today is that so little of it is danceable. The era about which he has written, he points out, was as famous for the dances done to jazz music as for the music itself. The Texas Tommy, the Turkey Trot, the Bunny Hug, the Grizzly Bear all originated, or were popularized, in San Francisco, to the sound of the jazz bands.

NOW, HE regrets, jazz groups make little effort to play danceable music, generally because the premises where they play do not permit dancing anyway.

Stoddard listens to jazz at home, from his superb collection of both old-time and contemporary records. But he also goes out for his music. The Jazz Workshop in San Francisco was a favorite spot until it closed. El Matador, Earthquake McGoon's and Basin Street West are just some of the other clubs he patronizes for their music.

"I guess I would have to say I enjoy jazz most in the clubs," he says. "There is a tradition and an atmosphere there."

BUT HE attends concerts and festivals as well.

"I think the festivals have a real place in jazz," he says. "They have been a real shot in the arm for musicians. The more opportunity for these musicians to play, the more opportunity for public appreciation of jazz."

Stoddard sometimes visits the rock spots such as San Francisco's Fillmore West or the close-to-home Lion's Share.

TWO GREATS of jazz chatted in Boston in this 1945 photograph. Pops Foster, left, and Sidney Bechet enjoyed a successful working relationship through the years, and were also warm personal friends. Foster's acquaintanceship included most of the greats of black music over a span of six and a half decades.

"I GO ALONG with Ralph Gleason that rock and roll is a form of jazz," he says. "The Jefferson Airplane and the other good rock groups are essentially jazz — just of a different type. And in some ways what they play is better than the modern jazz because it is more danceable — often highly danceable."

This rock, he adds, is closer to the old-time, traditional jazz than it is to the modern jazz.

And, to Stoddard, it demonstrates the falsity of the often-heard claims that jazz is dead or about to die.

"JAZZ IS IN no danger of dying out," he says. "It just puts on a new mantle from time to time and reappears in another sheepskin. But it is still jazz, even if they call it swing or rock or something else."

STODDARD SMILES: "In that respect, they take after their dad."

But, says Stoddard, even those of us who cannot master an instrument can still learn a lot from the old-time black musicians. For instance the philosophy that saw Pops Foster through the ordeal of constant travel during his days on the road. There was no sense in fretting and worrying at the start of a long trip, he told Stoddard. Regardless of your attitude, you were going to have to cover those miles. "So I told myself I might as well just sit back and enjoy the ride. There wasn't no sense in getting upset. Didn't do one bit of good."

That, Stoddard feels, is a commonsense suggestion applicable to all of life. We might, like Pops, just as well sit back and enjoy the ride.

Honolulu Blends East, West, Old And New

The Travel Pages

By PHYLLIS HANES

The population explosion has hit Honolulu as it has many other large cities. But in Honolulu it's different.

There are the same high-rise condominiums, the towering skyscrapers, the high cost of living, and the mammoth shopping centers and construction projects.

PEOPLE FROM east and west are moving to the islands because they like it here.

Some have come to make money in the business boom. But many are part of a continuing migration from the mainland that has grown steadily in the last few years.

Men who came to Hawaii during the war or on a vacation have returned to marry and stay. Couples have come to retire. Japanese men on business have been so intrigued they bring back their wives and families.

ACCORDING TO immigration figures and the 1970 census, Caucasians and Japanese are about equal in numbers in Honolulu today.

Others have come from China, the Philippines, Korea, Taiwan and other countries. Most of the newcomers in 1971 were relatively young, half of them less than 24.3 years old.

The population of Hawaii is so ethnically diverse that no group actually constitutes a majority, making the islands a true gateway of the hemispheres.

BUT ALONG with the growth, progress and commercialism in the city has come a new concern. Honolulans are aware of the need for moderate income housing and of the potential inadequacies of sanitation and sewage facilities.

They are frustrated by the early morning traffic jams from the windward side of the island into downtown Honolulu and Waikiki.

Beautiful Waikiki Beach gets lots of the blame for attracting so many people, but other logical reasons for commercialism are statehood and the jet airliner. A now prosperous city is working out its problems.

WHATEVER IT is that's happened to Honolulu, it hasn't affected Waikiki Beach. High cost of living or not, people still choose Waikiki as the most popular spot in the islands.

As a first-time visitor, I found the most famous beach in the world clean, sparkling, bright and beautiful.

The skyline had obviously changed. So has the population. But the one thing for which this island is so famous — the weather —remains constant. No recorded temperature downtown has ever exceeded 88 degrees F. nor dropped below 56. It's perfect beach weather.

I STAYED AT the Royal Hawaiian, called the dowager queen of Honolulu's hotels. Coral pink in color, it is built in a rather Moorish style except for a modern 10-story wing. I was told it doesn't look at all the same as it used to because of adjacent high-rise buildings, but it is to me the epitome of grace and style.

There is old-world charm in Honolulu along with the air-conditioning and efficiency, and the aloha spirit prevails in the friendly, relaxed service from waiters and waitresses, from other Hawaiians throughout the island.

There seems to be something in the atmosphere that tells you to take it easy — whether you dine on the patio with doves flying in and out or if you snooze in the sun on the sandy beaches.

HONOLULU IS the metropolis, the hub, and the heartbeat of Hawaii, the center of cosmopolitan living — and, of course, the commercial center.

It is as exciting and beautiful in the middle of the city as it is on the windswept, westernmost point of the island. There at night the beaches come alive with campers and night fishermen peering with torches through glass-bottom boats for mullet or papio.

To experience the sights and sounds of Honolulu, you have to get out and walk a bit. This is the cheapest way to see the city and the most fun.

IF TIME IS limited, take a tour bus, but remember that two or three hours of riding will probably only skim the surface.

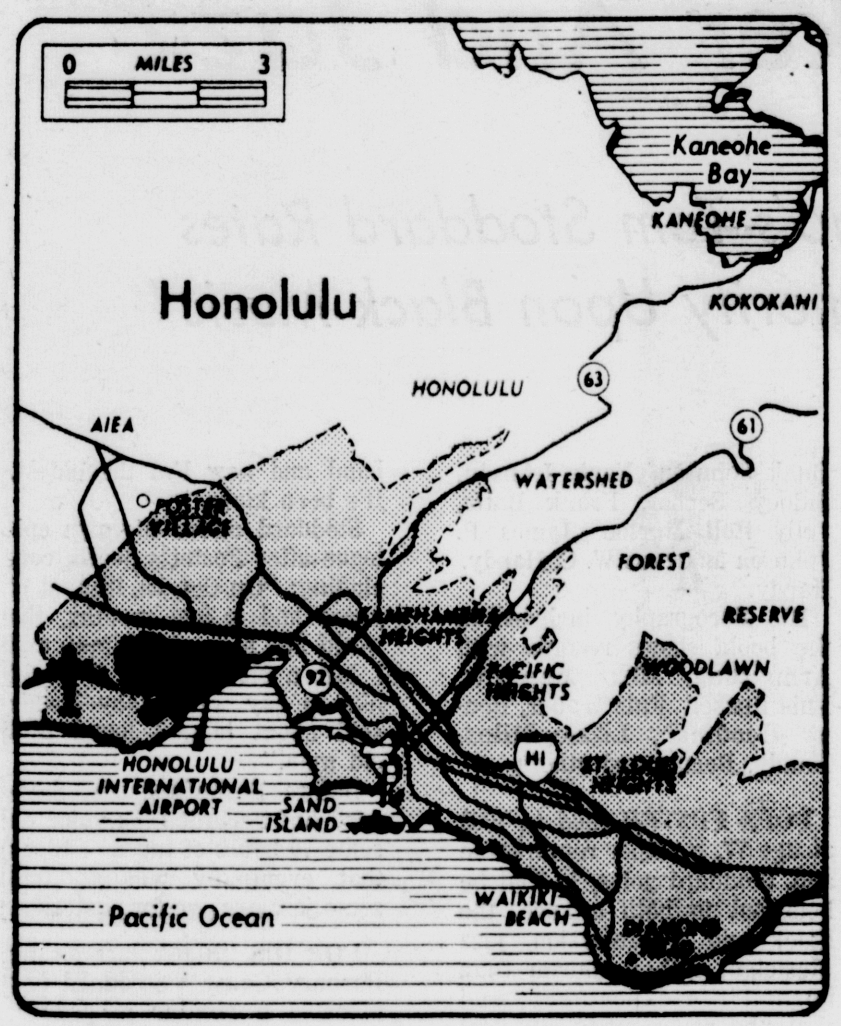

Roads are good in Honolulu, and there are rentals of both small and large cars. But you can do very well downtown with the public buses.

Before you set out, do a little homework. Learning that "makai" means to the sea, and "mauka" is to the mountains helps. Diamond Head is the direction toward Diamond Head crater, and Ewa is toward Ewa.

NOTICE WHICH way the traffic goes on Kalakaua Avenue, Waikiki's main street, for it goes Diamond Head most of the way, except for a short stretch between Kapahulu and Kaiulani and between the end of Kuhio and the Ala Wai Bridge.

With these exceptions, buses running from Waikiki downtown should be boarded on Kuhio Avenue. Bus fare is 25 cents, but senior citizens can ride free by showing Medicare cards.

To be seen in downtown Honolulu are the Honolulu Academy of Arts, the Mission House, Kawaiahao Church, government buildings including the new State Capitol Building, Aloha Tower, the Falls of Clyde, the financial and shopping districts, and the Chinese and Japanese neighborhoods.

YOU CAN DO it all in one day, if you're ambitious, and you'll have seen the heart of the city.

The Ala Moana shopping center took up most of my time the first morning. This complex, one of the largest in the world, is something to behold whether you have plans for shopping or not.

HERE YOU SEE faces that reflect the heritage of many peoples: Hawaiians, Chinese, Japanese, Filipinos, and "haoles," or Caucasians. Intermarriage has contributed to an outstanding lack of prejudice in this country where it's said that every race is a minority.

The Ala Moana is like a giant, modern marketplace and is especially colorful on Aloha Fridays, the weekday when everyone is encouraged to dress in island-style muumuus and aloha shirts.

Other walking tours will take you to some beautiful residential districts, Buddhist temples, and the Foster Park Botanical Gardens at 1520 Nuuanu Ave. one of the most exciting botanical gardens in the world.

THESE CAN be reached by public transportation as can the Alice Cooke Spalding House, the University of Hawaii campus, and the Waioli Tea Room, in the area where Robert Louis Stevenson is said to have spent some time.

Honolulu is not one of the great bargain centers of the world, since it isn't a free port. But it offers a fascinating assortment of Polynesian, Oriental, and American art, and there are several pleasant places for browsing.

There are the obvious expensive things to look for, such as Oriental brocades, pearls, jade, and art objects. There are also plenty of good buys right in Waikiki along Kalakaua Avenue.

HAVE A LOOK at Cindy's Lei Shoppe in Chinatown where you'll find beautiful leis from 50 cents to $5 made on the spot. And if you're looking for island muumuus or aloha shirts be sure to check out the major department stores — Liberty House, McInerny's and Watumull's — as well as the street side shops.

Look around in the International Market Place where the dozens of thatched-roof, semi-open shops stay open until 10 p.m. with everything from grass skirts and straw baskets to gourmet foods.

And don't be afraid to buy orchid leis in Sears Roebuck or fresh pineapple at Woolworth's to mail back home. You'll enjoy the lunch counter selling sukiyaki and sushi next to hamburgers and hot dogs, macadamia nuts and muumuus.

YOU CAN EVEN stop in at the Goodwill Industries or the Salvation Army thrift shop for old jewelry, costumes, or secondhand Hawaiian records.

When it comes to hotels, you'll find the best are right on the beach and on Kalahaua Avenue. But there are smaller and less expensive ones on adjacent, tree-lined streets.

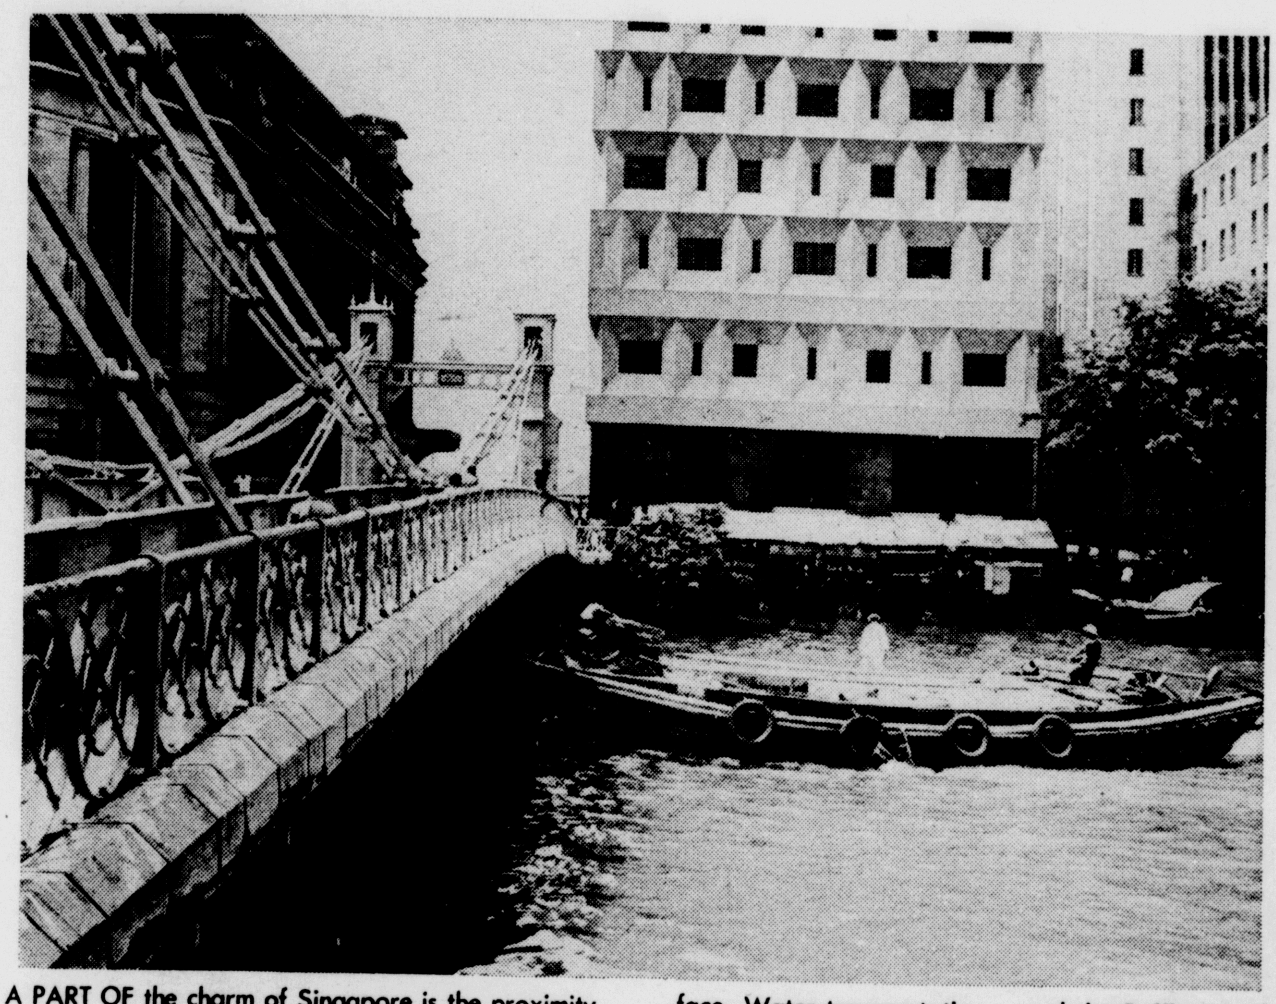

This is one of the many advantages of the new boom in Honolulu. More hotels mean a better range in prices for visitors. They also mean more jobs for more people.

A PART OF the charm of Singapore is the proximity of the new and the old. Few resent the changing face. Water transportation —and the Raffles Hotel of long-standing fame and fable —represent the vestiges of the old ways.

The Old Raffles Still Stands Among New Singapore Hotels

By ARTHUR R. PASTORE

When I told the Singapore taxi driver I wanted to go to the Raffles Hotel, he stared at me in disbelief.

"You must mean the Singapore Hilton, or one of the deluxe hotels," he added. "Not that ancient place."

"The Raffles," I said firmly, not even sure it was still there, since Shepherd's in Cairo and some of the great palaces of hotel fame are now but a memory, replaced by concrete and glass monsters with computerized billing instead of reservation clerks.

THE CABMAN shrugged his shoulders, and reluctantly drove me to the Raffles, which still commands a fine view of Singapore's world-famed port, filled with dozens of ships flying the flags of most countries.

It was a Sunday, and I must admit the Raffles looked more like a ghost set on one of Hollywood's back lots now blacked out by TV's prominence. However, there was an art show in the lobby and they were still serving tea in the wide veranda lounge, even though I was the only customer.

In Singapore's tropical heat, the Raffles' main lobby was non-air-conditioned, but it was refreshing to still find this famed hostelry that evoked memories of W. Somerset Maugham, and the heyday of the British colonial period.

IT HAD BEEN 23 years since I had been back, and nothing much had changed. The rooms are air-conditioned now, but the inner patio garden remains like a page out of Kipling, with the birds, the fountains, and the tropical plants casting a perfume all over the place. The rattan chairs are still there, and the old-fashioned ceiling fans, plus the teakwood floor shined to a high gloss.

But, of course, Singapore has changed a great deal since I saw it last in 1949.

For one thing it is no longer British, but it still clings to British traditions. For example, I watched a cricket game going on the parade grounds, while a rugby team was tumbling on the next field.

The modern look has caught up with Singapore, as it has changed the face of most of Asia's major cities. Now, there are new high-rise hotels going up daily. The skyline bristles with glittering office buildings, and most of the old slums have disappeared, with new low-cost housing projects which would fit in with any urban development plan in America.

RECENTLY, THIS "city-republic" celebrated its eighth year of independence from Malaysia, with which it once was allied geographically and politically. It is now a mushrooming city of nearly two million people, more than half of whom are under 26 years old. They are progressive and looking to the future, not the past.

Singapore, the "Lion City," has been called the air-conditioned, posh dream of what the Orient is with modern touches. It is all that, even with air-conditioned Mercedes-Benz taxis.

Its duty-free shopping is still one of the bargain-basement places in the world, with the price tabs often below the luxury goods priced in the country of their origin — Swiss watches, Japanese cameras and electronic equipment, French perfumes, and almost everything else.

But with all the 20th Century gimmickry, it's comforting that the House of Jade, Tiger Balm's Haw Paw Villa, the Buddhist temples, and Muslim mosques are still there, too — and, so is the Raffles Hotel.

Aussie Wild Life Emerges In Day

Kangaroos And Koala Bears

The ecology movement in Australia is having unexpected effects on the behaviour of some of the wild life it is designed to protect.

In certain areas where non-captive kangaroos and koalas have been safe from the human threat for some time they have been observed to give up habits once thought to be an inbred part of their behaviour.

Both these marsupial species had always been regarded as nocturnal by nature.

THE KANGAROO would normally sleep all day in protective scrub and go out to graze only between dusk and early dawn. The koala ventured from one eucalyptus tree to the next only in the safety of darkness.

But it is now thought these nocturnal habits are the result of conscious self-protection rather than instinct. Once the predatory threat is removed kangaroos and koalas tend to feed openly during the day and sleep at night.

The operators of Anglesea Golf Course near Melbourne introduced a "mob" of kangaroos a number of years back with the idea that they would function as nocturnal "lawn mowers".

The kangaroos did their job,

A KANGAROO FAMILY makes itself at home on a golf course near Melbourne, Australia, where, free from predatory man, it has abandoned its former nocturnal habits and is functioning during daylight hours. In other areas of Australia, koalas are descending from trees in daylight and kangaroos are grazing on ranch land, providing a tourist attraction.

but as they lost their fear of humans they increasingly did it in daylight until finally their nocturnal activity ceased altogether.

TODAY golfers at the Anglesea course, and at other courses where kangaroos have since been introduced, are sometimes interrupted in their play by a kangaroo that hops to their side for a friendly scratch behind the ear.

Sheep and cattle ranchers are also beginning to make friends with the kangaroo, and as a result some of their properties have become tourist attractions.

An outstanding example of this is Richard Dowling's Melness and Kerri Kerri sheep stations in the Murray River valley about 200 miles northwest of Melbourne.

Years back when Dowling discovered that kangaroos didn't seriously compete for fodder with sheep and cattle he began encouraging them to stay on his properties by feeding them oats.

Now he has more than a thousand kangaroos that graze in daylight and will literally eat out of his hand.

TOUR operators, weary of explaining to clients from overseas why there are no kangaroos to be seen in the countryside, quickly seized the opportunity that Dowling's day-feeding kangaroos offered.

Now visits to the Melness and Kerri Kerri properties are included in a tour of the nearby Swan Hill Pioneer Settlement. It has become one of the most popular tours operating from Melbourne.

The same kind of thing has happened on Phillip Island, a 60-mile drive southeast of Melbourne, where koalas are the big attraction.

Phillip Island is famed for its tiny Fairy Penguins, which parade on the beaches each evening under floodlight. But now the island's many koalas are a competing attraction.

THEY ARE so tame they descend from the trees in daylight and have been known to scamper through the dining room of the Erehwon Hotel.

In this ecology-conscious age that sort of thing is a winner with tourists. As a result, the owners of several other ranches on the tourist beat are stocking up with kangaroos and banning the use of firearms on their properties.

'Last Great Beach' In Texas

It may be the last great beach in the world, and J. W. Stanley is worried that in one way or another it's being destroyed.

"There's 30 miles of undeveloped beach here," he says proudly and yet somewhat sadly. "I'd hate to see it lined with hotels and condominiums. The magic would be gone."

Stanley is talking about South Padre Island, Tex., the southern end of a narrow island strip of more than 100 miles which stretches along the Texas Gulf coast from Port Isabel to Corpus Christi Bay. Just over 80 miles of Padre Island has been designated a national seashore, so it's protected. It's the southern 35 miles about which Stanley is worried.

"SOME OF the dunes are already in danger of ruin because of the carelessness of some people," he told the American Automobile Assoc. "Racing over them in dune buggies has destroyed natural vegetation which holds the dunes together."

The dunes and the Gulf beach of South Padre Island combine to make the area a natural magnet for sun-loving vacationers. Crossing the causeway from Port Isabel to Padre Island brings you to the area which has already been developed — a five-mile strip of hotels, apartments and beach houses.

After that, it's 30 miles of beach and dunes to the Port Mansfield Cut. Twenty-three of those miles are privately-owned — most of them by Stanely's South Padre Investment Corp.

"WE KNOW that if we allow rapid development of the area, it will lose its attractiveness. The trick is to know how much development South Padre Island can take without losing its unique character."

So far the island is relatively unspoiled.

A Call For Change In Our Way Of Living

"Many of the chemicals and other eventual pollutants now plaguing us simply aren't necessary for happy, healthful, satisfying life. Yet we think we need them. That's where we are making our big mistake." — Robert Rodale in "Sane Living in a Mad World."

ROBERT RODALE
Blueprint for a sane life

By DON KEOWN

SANE LIVING IN A MAD WORLD by Robert Rodale; Rodale Press, 270 pages, $7.95.

WESTERN ORGANIC GARDENING by editors of Organic Gardening and Farming; Rodale Press, 147 pages.

"The time is coming for revolution," writes Robert Rodale in his "Sane Living in a Mad World."

The editor of Prevention, Organic Gardening and Farming, and Fitness for Living magazines goes on to explain: "Not political revolution, because the same ailments afflict people of all developing countries, regardless of their political ideology. We must rebel against the idea that what matters is the quantity of life, the quantity of wealth and the quantity of possessions.

"Quality is what matters. Not gross national product, but the quality of national product. Not total wealth, but happiness. We have gone far along the road of conspicuous consumption and have found that bigger and better worldly goods produce only limited happiness. We have to back-track and try to find a road that leads to a really enjoyable way of life . . .

"Let's stop riding and do some walking. Let's peel potatoes again instead of opening a packet of potato powder. Let's realize that engineering all the little annoyances and chores out of life won't produce happiness and pleasant leisure hours. It will only leave us wondering where the happier times went to and why the present is less pleasant than we thought it would be."

Robert Rodale has succeeded his late father, J.I. Rodale, as the primary exponent of the natural or organic way of life.

"I use 'organic idea' in its broadest sense," he writes, "including not only natural methods of gardening and farming, but natural eating, ecology, fighting pollution, preserving open space, and the general hope of living happily on the land."

"Sane Living in a Mad World" is his appeal for public acceptance of this organic idea, and his outline of how it can be practiced.

Basic, he says, is the adoption of a "closed" system concept. He explains: "In it, population and industry would have to stop growing or be severely limited. We could still produce power and manufacture goods, but we would limit ourselves to ways and means that would allow us to end the process with the same natural resources we started with."

It seems an unrealistic proposal, given our past history, to expect mankind to limit construction to the replacement of existing buildings, to cease utilizing fossil fuels because they cannot be replaced (Rodale suggests the use of solar energy instead), to expect the other sacrifices and changes proposed.

"Converting the whole world to a closed system is a stupendous enterprise," Rodale admists. "To change to a closed system is going to require a drastic reorganization of science, possibly including the creation of whole new universities and disciplines of study. Even more important, the ingrained human urge to make things bigger will have to be curbed or steered into more creative areas."

Rodale's book is an exposition of the benefits of organic gardening, of a natural foods diet, of exercise, of pollution control, of conservation, of control of technology.

It is one of the more persuasive statements of the case for ecology, and even those who do not accept his program fully are likely to be impressed by some of most of its parts.

That is not the kind of reaction that Robert Rodale is hoping for. Rather, he urges a total commitment to his concept of "organic living." And he insists he is optimistic about the future.

"If enough people start living sanely, they may gain the courage and the desire to create a world that is itself sane," he asserts.

But, no doubt, Rodale will regard even partial conversions as better than no response at all. Even if you don't start eating health foods, you might embrace vigorous exercise. Or even if you don't start up an organic garden, you might join the fight against wasting resources and dirtying of our environment. Rodale, however, would prefer we do them all, making a complete change from a way of life that he insists is wrong and ruinous.

ORGANIC gardening, Robert Rodale insists, is fundamental to his proposed revamption of our way of life, and he argues spiritedly with those who insist that it is not practical or efficient. If he convinces you, then you might want a copy of "Western Organic Gardening" as a guidebook for your conversion.

It is the work of the editors of Rodale's Organic Gardening and Farming magazine, both a primer and an advanced text, and, importantly, aimed specifically at the western American and the distinctive problems and conditions with which he will work in growing things non-chemically.

OCEANA Publications Inc. of Dobbs Ferry, N.Y., has begun its series of 50 handbooks that will eventually cover all 50 states with the first five volumes including "California: A Chronology and Documentary Handbook," priced at $5.

A rather thin but nevertheless useful handbook, it offers a chronology of major events in state history, a terse biographical resume of some major public officials, an outline of the state constitution and the text of some selected documents related to California culture and history.

Again: A by no means complete reference work, in fact quite skimpy, but a helpful supplementary volume for quick use.

"INS AND OUTS of Marin" is a guide for parents of preschoolers by pediatrician Dr. Albert C. and Linda Goldberg, enumerating the facilities available to them and their children in Marin County and offering expert advice as to their most effective use.

Nursery schools, day care centers, well baby clinics, speech and hearing therapy, genetic counseling and gifted children programs are all discussed, as are such general questions as: "When should my child start nursery school?"

"AMERICAN FAMILY," a Faith Baldwin novel first published in 1934 and regarded as one of her best works, has been reprinted by Holt, Rinehart and Winston, and priced at $6.95. This is the story of the Condit family, followed through three generations, and in two countries, America and China. It begins in the mid 1860s and covers 55 years. And its author says: "American Family is just a story. It propounds no problems and sets no match to controversial tinder . . . I am no historian, I am merely a teller of tales; and I want very much to tell this one." Baldwin fans who have not alrady done so will want very much to read it.

RANDOM HOUSE has printed a $2.95 Vintage paperback edition of "War Without End," Michael T. Klare's brilliant documentation of his charge that American military policy with its counterinsurgency overtones is likely to involve us in a whole series of Vietnam-like interventions in the future.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE ABOMINABLE MAN by Maj Sjowall and Per Wahloo; Pantheon, 215 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Georges Simenon is still king of Europe's writers of crime fiction, but there are serious challengers for his throne.

One, of course, is the brilliant Nicholas Freeling. Another is (or others are) the Swedish husband-and-wife team of Maj Sjowall and Per Wahloo. Like Simenon and Freeling, they combine a fine feeling for narration with a special touch for characterization.

"The Abominable Man" finds Sjowall-Wahloo at their very best. Again we are involved with Martin Beck and his colleagues of the Stockholm police as they investigate the bloody slaying by bayonet of one of their own number in his hospital bed. The plot builds to a final exciting climax of denouement and violence. But through it all, the two authors never lose sight of the fact that they are writing about human beings, capable of human foibles and of human fortitude.

"The Abominable Man" is brilliant, of Simenon stature. And plaudits must go, too, to Thomas Teal for a first-rate translation from the Swedish.

THE OTHER HERO-GENERAL OF OUR REVOLUTION

THE FIGHTING QUAKER: NATHANIEL GREENE by Elswyth Thorne; Hawthorne, 288 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by John D. Yates.

An early social 'concern' of the Society of Friends was a conscientious refusal to engage in war.

It would seem therefore that the Quaker Nathaniel Greene was an unlikely candidate for war-time action but, according to historian Elswyth Thorne, Greene was the only general of the Continental Army whose heroism and tactical brilliance rivaled that of George Washington. The Virginia squire and the Quaker son of a prosperous Rhode Island mill-owner were the only two American generals who served continuously throughout the eight years of the Revolutionary war, from the first brief skirmishes at Boston to the final evacuation of American soil by the British in 1783.

Elswyth Tahne tells us of Greene's early days in Potowomut, R.I., his indifferent education by private tutors, and his association with the family forge business: "He read Horace, Euclid and Caesar often keeping a book in his hand during his attendance to the forge fires and the hopper at the grist mill . . ." We then focus on the troublesome days of 1774 and the tense summer of that year when Greene was 32, still a bachelor (he was 10 years younger than Washington), and a manager of one of the family mills. Greene was preparing for marriage to Kitty Littlefield, who was not a Quaker; and now professionally his interests centered on the impending war. He married Kitty in July, 1774, and his decision to join the Kentish Guards (as a private) finally severed his connection with the Society of Friends. But who would have entertained any idea that within a year Nat Greene would be wearing the epaulets of a brigadier general?

Once the war started Greene found himself impatient as a quartermaster for Washington's army, but he did his job meticulously well until his appointment for independent field command arrived. For the final three years of the long conflict, while Washington's forces were pinned down by Gen. Henry Clinton in New York, Greene carried on a campaign in the Southern swamps where he found himself pitted against Britain's most competent military man — Lord Cornwallis. Greene took over command in the area after two American armies, under Horatio Gates and Benjamin Lincoln, had already been soundly defeated by the British. "Without Greene's stubborn, selfless expenditure of himself and eventually of his own private funds, it is possible that the British army under Cornwallis might have been able to overrun the Carolinas and Virginia . . ."

It was his brilliant hit-and-run campaign against Cornwallis' army in the Carolinas during 1780 and 1781 that sent the Britisher reeling northward into Virginia in such bad shape that after a running battle with Lafayette, Anthony Wayne and Baron von Steuben, Cornwallis retreated to Yorktown.

After Greene's central part in the defeat of the British at Yorktown, Miss Thane draws realistic portraits of the little known Quaker's colleagues — including Henry Lee, Washington, Steuben and Lafayette. Personal accounts of his adventures and family life are presented in Greene's own letters and dispatches, which gives penetrating insights into Greene as a man and soldier while also revealing the spirit and fabric of life in early America.

"The Fighting Quaker" is solid and enlightening history, and is a moving and memorable portrait by a fine historian.

Elswyth Thane is recognised as an authority on colonial America. Her books include biographical works on George and Martha Washington and the famous Williamsburgh Series of seven historical novels. In all she has written 18 historical novels and 13 historical biographies and studies.

Ira Levin Authors Another Eerie Tale

THE STEPFORD WIVES by Ira Levin; Random House, 145 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

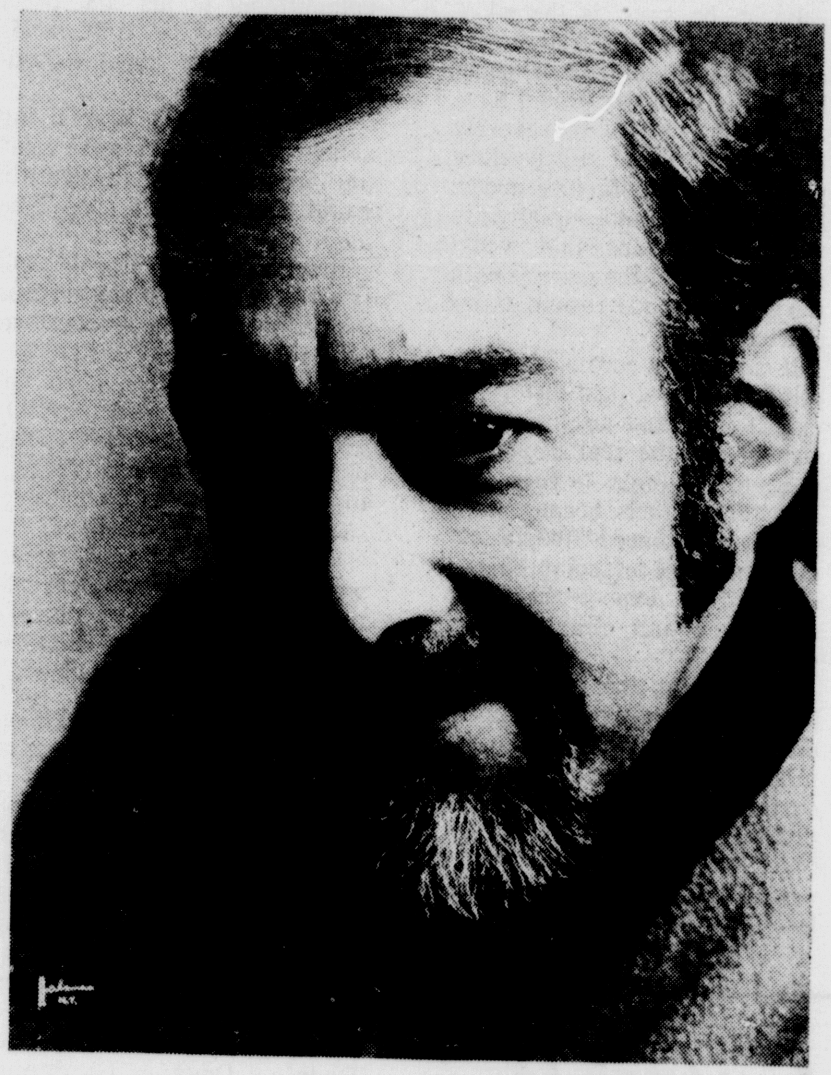

Ira Levin, who made it big with his "Rosemary's Baby," again mines the suspense-and-eerie field with this short novel.

It is less chilling than the earlier best-seller, but nevertheless disturbing and to a degree even haunting. And devotees of the Women's Liberation movement will find in it support for their contention that males generally have placed females in subservient or slave roles.

At first Joanna Eberhardt has every reason to believe she and her family will be happy in the town of Stepford into which they have just moved. Then she begins to see and to sense things that eat away at her optimism and composure. Most upsetting is the behavior of the women of the town, who seem to have no lives of their own, but robot-like, act as servants and drudges to their husbands. Then there is the mysterious, well-guarded Men's Association, frequented regularly by all the males of Stepford.

Joanna and her friend, also a newcomer to town, begin to suspect that something is terrifying wrong and unnatural about Stepford and its women. But will they be able to prevent themselves from joining its victims? That is the suspense bait that Levin dangles before his readers until the very end.

Quite apparently Ira Levin feels he has this kind of tale-telling down pat, and intends to capitalize upon that accomplishment fully before moving on to other fields. Indeed, he is adept at his distinctive brand of creepiness. And "The Stepford Wives" may well enjoy much the same success as "Rosemary's Baby."

The Germans Under Hitler

THE 12-YEAR REICH by Richard Grunberger; Ballantine, 520 pages, paperback, $1.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

What was it like to live in Nazi Germany? How did it happen that the German people accepted a reversion to the buried past, unChristian, anti-intellectual and racist, imposed by a minority that swept away civil liberties and made the breeding of cannon-fodder the prime reason for living?

Richard Grunberger has provided many of the answers in "The 12-Year Reich," a thorough, scholarly social history of Germany under Hitler. First published in England, it is now made available here in paperback format.

"The 12-Year Reich" is so packed with quotations, statistics and analyses that it is not all easy reading. But it is of absorbing interest to the student of the 20th Century, and contains more than one implied warning to other nations, including the United States.

The Far Right On Schools

RACE WAR IN HIGH SCHOOL by Harold Saltzman; Arlington House, 219 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Arlington House is a New Rochelle, N.Y., based firm that specializes in books for political conservatives, and "Raping Our Children" and "Race War in High School" are both selections of the Conservative Book Club.

"Raping Our Children" is an account of — and diatribe against — the current sex education courses in the public schools. Gloria Lentz started looking into the teaching of sex (under the guise of "family life" and similarly innocuous labels) as a correspondent in New Jersey for the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

What she found resulted in stories so explosive the Bulletin refused to publish them.

The "horror stories" in Mrs. Lentz's book might be discounted as atypical if the same sort of stories did not keep popping up all over the country. Despite her far-right views, her opposition to all sex education (not merely the questionable, amoral variety), her amateurish writing style and the book's sensational title, "Raping Our Children" contains much that deserve reading and consideration by people — particularly parents — of all political persuasions.

"Race War in High School" is an account of troubles at predominantly black Franklin K. Lane High School, which straddles the Brooklyn-Queens borough line in New York. Author Harold Saltzman is a faculty member there and a former officer of the AFL-CIO United Federation of Teachers.

"Race War in High School" is badly disorganized, loaded down with union political discursions, and thoroughly unreadable.

Modern Version Of Jane Austen

Reviews Of New Reading

If the longevity of their writing is the acid test of the novelist, Scotland's D.E. Stevenson passes with pennants flying — especially by today's standards of short-lived best-sellers.

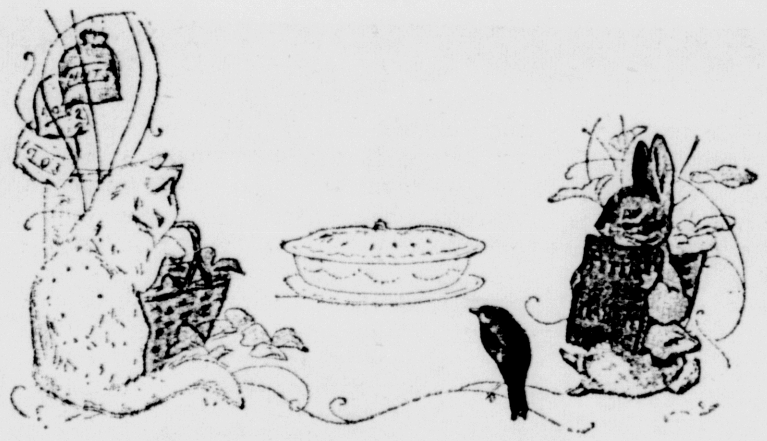

Even as she continues to produce new novels from time to time, her American publisher reissues her old books. And the passage of time has not dimmed the present talents nor the past artistry of this gifted and graceful storyteller whose work seems likely to survive into centuries-to-come as classics a la Jane Austen.

Latest Stevenson novel to be reprinted is "Smouldering Fire," said to be the author's personal favorite.

First published in 1938, it contains the fine, affectionate feeling for the Highlands and their people that mark all such D.E. Stevenson books, but with a stronger mystery and suspense element than most. There's touble in the glen, and it all begins when Iain MacAshlan, out of necessity, reluctantly agrees to let his ancestral home of Ardfalloch to "a gentleman from London." The rest of the story deals with a human serpent in this Scottish garden of Eden, and of how the people of the glen must struggle to preserve their way of life and the place they love so dearly.

Fans of D.E. Stevenson will find in "Smouldering Fire" the kind of musical narrative and depiction of proud and decent people in an awesomely beautiful setting they have come to associate with their favorite author. Mrs. Stevenson rarely disappoints, and she does not do so this time. Well worth a rereading.

JUNIOR BOOKS ON TAP

DOVER PUBLICATIONS has reissued in paperback one of the all-time favorites of children, Beatrix Potter's "The Tale of Peter Rabbit," with the author's original drawings. Also reissued at the same time — a second book in the Peter Rabbit series, "The Tale of Squirrel Nutkin."

The books have been reproduced by photographic facsimile, in the original small size and colors, and both cost only $1. Children will love the opportunity to romp again with the inhabitants and visitors to Mr. McGregor's garden.

Emma Smith is a distinguished writer of adventure stories for young readers, having reaped a number of awards and won a large following with her books that began in 1948 with "Maiden's Trip" and was followed the next year by "The Far Cry" and a James Tait Black Memorial Prize.

Her newest, "No Way of Telling" (Atheneum, $4.95) demonstrates that she has not lost her touch for lively action, suspense and believable characters that appeal to the juniors.

Her setting is rural Wales. And there in an isolated cottage, young Amy and her wise grandmother Mrs. Bowen are snowbound by a winter blizzard. They settle down to await the thaw, snug and content. But intruders interrupt their peace. And the small girl and old woman find themselves threatened by evil. But they also find an unexpected ally.

Mrs. Smith is writing of a country she knows well, having herself lived in just such a remote, often-snowbound cottage in Wales for eight years as a young wife and mother.

She puts her personal experience to good use, and her talent for exciting writing to equal application in spinning a highly entertaining tale for the 11 through 14-year-old group.

SOME OTHER new books for juniors:

Zilpha Keatley Snyder, former Marinite, now of Santa Rosa, is the author of "The Witches of Worm" (Atheueum, $5.25), a story of weird happenings, and about a young girl's growing fears. Is Jessica's pet cat Worm a witch's cat? And what about Jessica herself? Is she a witch? Young readers who are intrigued by magic and witchcraft will no doubt enjoy the book and the eerie shivers it inspires. More susceptible and nervous youngsters would probably do just as well to skip it, and to stay with the more tangible menaces such as those in the Smith book.

CAROL, THE central character in "Don't Look and It Won't Hurt" (Holt, Rinehart, $4.95) is not at all happy with her life in the town of Claypitts. Being the middle of three sisters in itself poses problems. But there are other obstacles in her path to happiness, not the least of them her yearning for the world outside the restrictive confines of her small hometown. The novel of the young girl — or boy — maturing and adjusting is not a new idea. In fact it has become a bit frayed. But author Richard Peck, an educator, has done it sensitively, and better and more honestly than most.

Published by McGraw-Hill in its "Discovering Arts Series" is "Prehistoric Art and Art of the Ancient East" by Ariane Ruskin, the well-known writer of children's books and a specialist on the subject of art. It is offered as a junior book, but no doubt will interest many in the older age brackets with a curiosity about the origins of our art. Europe and the Near East both receive the expert, literate attention of Miss Ruskin.

"The Selfish Old Woman" (Bobbs Merrill, $4.95) abounds with gay, eye-catching illustrations by Yosuke Inoue, which should delight any young reader (4-7). This simple and appealing tale by Toshiko Kanzawa sweeps along as the woman bakes a sweet, sweet only for herself. A gust of wind blows her bonnet off the wall, and blinded temporarily, she hears intruders, who she feels will take her pie. When she finally takes off her bonnet she discovers who has taken the pie. This is a charming story with a good laugh at the conclusion.

SEASONAL CRAFTS BY BETTER HOMES

GIFTS TO MAKE YOURSELF by Better Homes and Gardens editors; Meredith, 205 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

The Christmas season provides our greatest stimulus for handicraft, as hundreds of thousands of Americans fashion decorations for their trees and homes, craft items to be sold or gift pieces to be presented to others.

For those who want that extra glow that comes from giving an attractive, well-made item they produced themselves, Better Homes and Gardens editors have put together this big book.

Like most Better Homes and Gardens projects, it is well done — profusely illustrated with color, filled with challenging and satisfying ideas, featuring directions that can be comprehended and executed without undue difficulty.

The projects range from candles and candleholders to breads and candies, from finger puppets to pull toys, from dry floral arrangements to belts and bags, from dolls to knotted belts. The array is diverse and seemingly endless.

There's a special chapter of projects for children, plus instruction on gift wrapping and wrapping for mailing.

It's a book that should be a big-seller in the coming weeks. And deservedly so.

YOU, TOO, CAN DINE LIKE THE PRESIDENTS

A TREASURY OF WHITE HOUSE COOKING by Francois Rysavy and Frances Spatz Leighton; Putnam, 352 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

The title immediately alerts one to the possibility — or probability — that this is a "gimmick" cookbook, substituting the glamor of our first families' residence for real content. It turns out, however, that such fears are unjustified. For, by any measurement, this is a sound and quite useful cookbook.

And it proves that our Presidents generally have had better taste in foods than judgment in their governmental policies.

The selections have been made by Francois Rysavy, the White House chef under President Dwight Eisenhower, and the presentations, in a nice, chatty style, are by Frances Spatz Leighton, Washington journalist.

Rysavy, quite wisely, has not been carried away with an enthusiasm for the elaborate concoctions held necessary for formal White House dinners. A large proportion of the recipes are those favored by Presidents and their families for less formal entertaining, or simply for family meals. And some of these are gems.

Thus you are let into the secrets of such unpretentious delicacies as Calvin Coolidge's corn muffins, Mamie Eisenhower's blueberry pie and her scalloped potatoes, Jackie Kennedy's version of beef stroganoff and her husband's favorite fish chowder and pet bleu cheese dressing, Pat Nixon's apricot nut bread, Teddy Roosevelt's Indian pudding, Ike's corned beef hash (oven baked), JFK's waffles, and Lyndon Johnson's Pedernales River chili.

On the fancier formal side, there is the likes of the Eisenhowers' pate de foie gras in aspic of port wine, Thomas Jefferson's gazpacho, the Eisenhowers' rock cornish game hen with pate de foie gras and wild rice dressing, the Nixons' supreme of duckling Montmorency and their souffle glace diplomat, the Kennedys' chilled vichyssoise, and, for Christmas, Pat Nixon's mincemeat pie and the Roosevelts' roast duck with potato dressing.

To an excellent collection of recipes — some 500 of them — Rysavy and Mrs. Leighton add some interesting information on the culinary likes and dislikes of first families, their preferences in entertaining, and some menus from state dinners and other special events.

You, too, it seems, can eat like a President.

THE PARROT AND THE BUS

At the bus stop
His parrot perching on his shoulder.
All gazed hopefully down the street.
"Late again!" the parrot began,
"Late again' Damn bus' Late again!"
"He likes to ride the bus," the man explained,
As the parrot kept repeating,
"Late again! Damn bus! Late again!"

WHEN I WAS YOUNG

When I was young I tried to please -
Even those who were unkind;
Innocently believing that men
Could be taught to learn, how to Achieve a higher state of mind.

Now I have reached the winter years,
All summer days have fled;
And have discovered that none
Can be revived, if the mind is dead.

Autumn Is Ideal Time For Planting In Your Garden

Most people think of spring as the busiest of the four seasons in California gardens. Certainly the pace quickens as winter wanes and the weather warms.

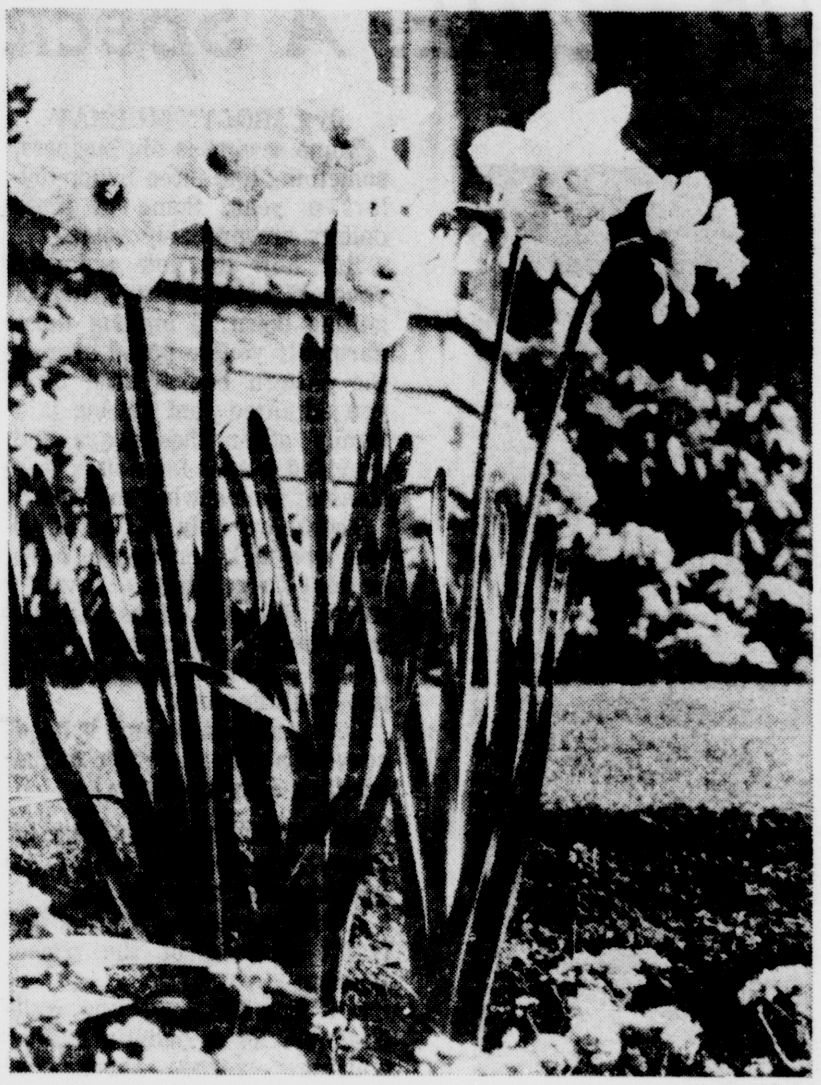

But, fall is an excellent time to plant. Many horticulturists consider it as the best planting season in the Golden State. This includes trees, shrubs, annual flowers, perennials, and groundcovers.

THE ONLY exception would be the frost-tender items, which include relatively few plants.

The California Assn. of Nurserymen highly recommends fall planting. The soil retains the warmth of the summer sun and the weather is conducive to outdoor gardening. Plants set out now will start to establish themselves — root systems will begin to develop, and during the winter months will continue this development. The result is that the fall-planted items will be able to take advantage of the full surge of spring growth. This means that if you plant a tree now, you can expect more beauty and shade sooner than if you wait to plant in spring.

With flowering shrubs, you can have color to enjoy that much faster.

BARREN BANKS and slopes can be planted with a groundcover right now, and the scenery will be transformed, more rapidly, into a beautiful setting. The Trailing African Daisy and the Trailing Gazanias are but two hardy performers to consider on sloping planting areas. The flowers remain for months and months and neither wants much attention.

FALL IS an excellent time to plant trees and shrubs, winter-blooming annuals and all but the frost-tender items. But near the top of your list for autumn-planting should be the flower bulbs, so that you can enjoy their spring-time carnival of color in your garden. The daffodils pictured at left will provide weeks of beauty and enjoyment — and with very little attention. They are, however, only one possibility among many bulb choices. Now is the time to shop — while the selection is still at its best.

Don't Cut The Grass Too Low

Mechanized mowing of grass is a relatively recent custom, the first lawn mower not having been invented until the mid 1800s and well-tended suburban lawns not devised until a century later.

Through the Middle Ages grass was kept low by grazing livestock, or by hand scything.

Now in the United States, almost every home owner sports a mowing maching, mostly powered, many that are ridden; precise mowing has become de rigeur.

Even with fine mowing machines, mowing is not always carried onto the best advantage of the grass. Partly at fault is the habit of clipping lawns too closely, so that much of the food-making green leaf of the grass plant is lost.

Low clipping will not make it unnecessary to mow frequently, for a low-cut lawn usually develops erratic differences in height among its varying components, and low clipping certainly opens the door to many more weeds. The uniformity of the cut is what makes a newly-mowed lawn attractive, not the height of the grass.

Yet the yen for close clipping runs strong, so turfgrass breeders stress low growth in most of their creations. Blue-grasses such as Merion, Fylking, Pennstar, Nugget, Baron, Sydsport, Adelphi, Bonnieblue, Sodco and others all provide leafy growth at clipping heights unsuited to common bluegrasses.

Jamestown is an unusually low Chewings fescue, Manhattan and Pennfine relatively short perennial ryegrasses.

Growth regulators can be had which restrain grass growth, but so far they have not proven widely practical. Low mowing, if you must, would seem better accommodated by planting the newer low-growing varieties.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

✓Plant camellias now. The early-flowering types are beginning to bloom, or soon will be. By properly selecting varieties, you can have camellias in bloom from now until late spring.

✓Bedding plants for cool season bloom are also in abundance. Consier pansies, violas, stocks, Iceland poppies and calendulas, among others.

INSIDE YOUR HOME: A Special Corner For Sewing

ALTHOUGH SPACE was tight, this sewing corner was conceived to to make the working hours of the home seamstress cheerful. Two-tone plushy shag carpet provides a cushiony comfort for the family tailor. Wall-hung cabinets house both necessary and decorative notions.

By CAROLYN MURRAY

Home sewing is big business, something like three billion dollars a year. Some of those dollars are probably yours.

But how do you organize yourself for the nitty-gritty of getting down to making those garments you've pored over in the pattern books? And have you admitted that sewing is a family affair these days and provided a spot for unisex sessions at that sewing machine?

There are only a few of us who are lucky enough to have honest-to-goodness sewing rooms. The rest of us pull the machine out of a closet and clutter up the living room for two or three days.

Let's cut that out and instead convert a special corner to the realities of home sewing.

1. Find a spot that's out of the traffic pattern of the whole family.

2. If possible have one wall available for a bulletin board, wall-hung storage cubes and shelves. Use the bulletin board as a place to pin up tear sheets for newspapers and magazines. A week or so of pinup should be enough to let you decide if you would like to translate the idea into a part of your wardrobe or household furnishings.

3. Now arrange a work table in an island position (preferably) so that the sewing machine is not facing a solid wall. If the table can be carpenter-built, add a long extension or drop-leaf panel to support fabric and pattern-cutting jobs. The island position also allows you to arrange cupboards and drawers against the wall, so you needn't keep reaching over the machine to find the right threads or notions.

4. Start a file of measurements for everyone in the family, a three-by-five-inch card should work for each person. Then why not start a source file of measurements for the house? Window sizes, window-shade dimensions, floor and rug measurements, the width and depth of shelves in kitchen cupboards.

5. Buy a special iron and ironing board for this sewing corner. One with proper temperatures for the newer knit fabrics. Add a sleeve board for quickie press-on repairs jobs.

6. INVITE THE family to use the equipment so nicely gathered. Teach youngsters how to use the machine instead of scaring them off. You'll get a lot more cooperation when you need new kitchen curtains if Dad and Junior have also been brainwashed about stitchery. It's a nice family affair.

7. Contrary to popular thinking, carpeting such as the Enkaloft one shown can be a perfect base for such a center. A small vacuum could be kept handy, but a few threads will seem less unsightly on carpeting than on a slick vinyl flooring surface, and lots easier on the feet.

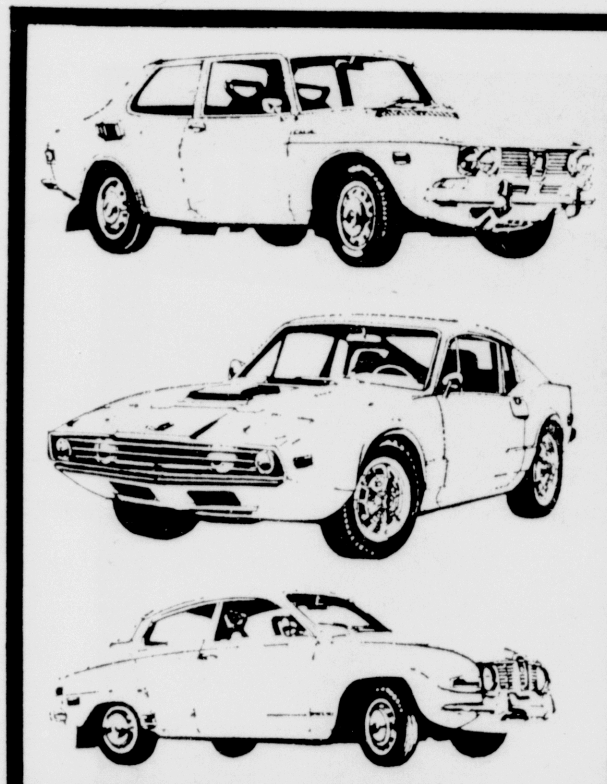

A few knick-knacks and light personal pieces on the walls and shelves will lighten the mood of the corner, converting it from a work place to a hobby spot where the seamstress can feel that she is indulging her creative urges and not just slaving away at a household necessity.

MAURICE CHEVALIER spoke for all doting parents and grandparents when he sang "Thank heaven for little girls . . ." And while toys from the store are one way we can show our love for these little darlings, there is something special about gifting them with something you built yourself. This dollhouse for instance. Send $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Circular Dollhouse Pattern 329. You can build it all from a single sheet of quarter-inch plywood without great difficulty. And plastic dollhouse furniture available at any dime store will fit the interior. Just watch those little eyes light up when she receives this dollhouse built by daddy, granddad, big brother or kavorite uncle!

Sooner Or Later, All Roofs Fall Prey To Time And Weather

By ANDY LANG

Sooner or later, all roofs have to be replaced.

Even the best roofing materials will eventually succumb to continued exposure to sun, wind, rain, hail and temperature changes.

WHEN A ROOF is relatively new, however, and has suffered limited damage from a storm or falling objects or has developed a small leak, the chances are that it can be repaired without too much trouble. Shingles that are damaged or have blown away can be replaced; loose shingles can be replaced, and leaks around flashing points can be patched.

Limited repairs won't help when a roof is suffering from "old age" and is dried out and brittle. It not only causes a loss of protection but detracts from a home's appearance.

Repairing one area where there is a leak is usually followed, in a short time, by a similar leak somewhere else.

IN PREPARATION for a re-roofing job, the roofer should make a thorough inspection to determine whether the old roofing must be removed. The supports should be inspected for damage.

If the condition of the roof, deck or supports is such that there is a structural unsoundness, framing may have to be repaired or replaced. Damaged gutters should be relined, cleaned, rebuilt or replaced. Flashing should be installed in valleys wherever needed. Under-roof ventilation must be checked for adequacy.

Metal drip edges should be applied at eaves and rakes and flashing strip applied along eaves.

WHEN IT IS determined that the new roof can go on right over the old, the roofing nails must be long enough to penetrate through the old roofing so as to get a firm grip in the roof decking below. They are longer than those used in new construction or where the old roofing has been removed.

A basic list of roof coverings available includes asphalt shingles, roll roofing, ceramic tiles, wood shingles and shakes, aluminum shingles, asbestos shingles, fiber-glass shingles and built-up roofing. The most popular type for both new homes and remodeling is asphalt.

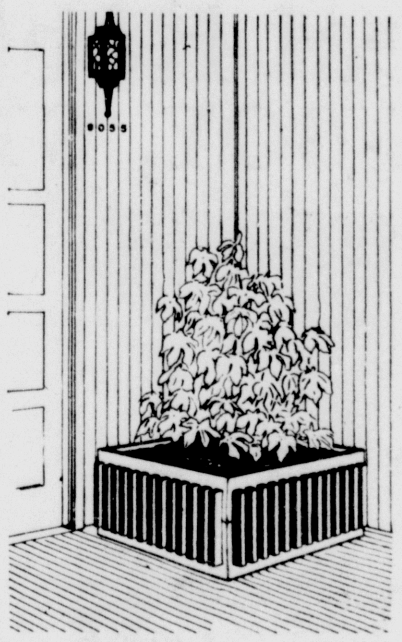

Asphalt shingles will give you a better roof than roll roofing and are generally specified for roofs with slopes of four inches rise or more per horizontal foot; roll roofing is used for low slope roofs of three inches or less rise per horizontal square foot. The exception is the square butt strip shingle, which may be used on roofs with slopes of two to four inches, provided special application methods are employed to compensate for the slower water runoff created by the lower roof slope.

ROOF COLORS can help improve exterior design.

A light-color roof attracts the eye of the viewer and directs his vision upward. This gives a small or unusually low house added dimension and dignity. A dark roof helps make an unusually tall or steep-roofed house seem less towering. A dark blend is usually recommended for a two-story house, since the color helps "tie" it to the ground.

Light colors help insulate the house. White and other light colors reflect part of the sun's heat and therefore keep the house cooler during hot weather. That's why they are used more often in warmer climates.

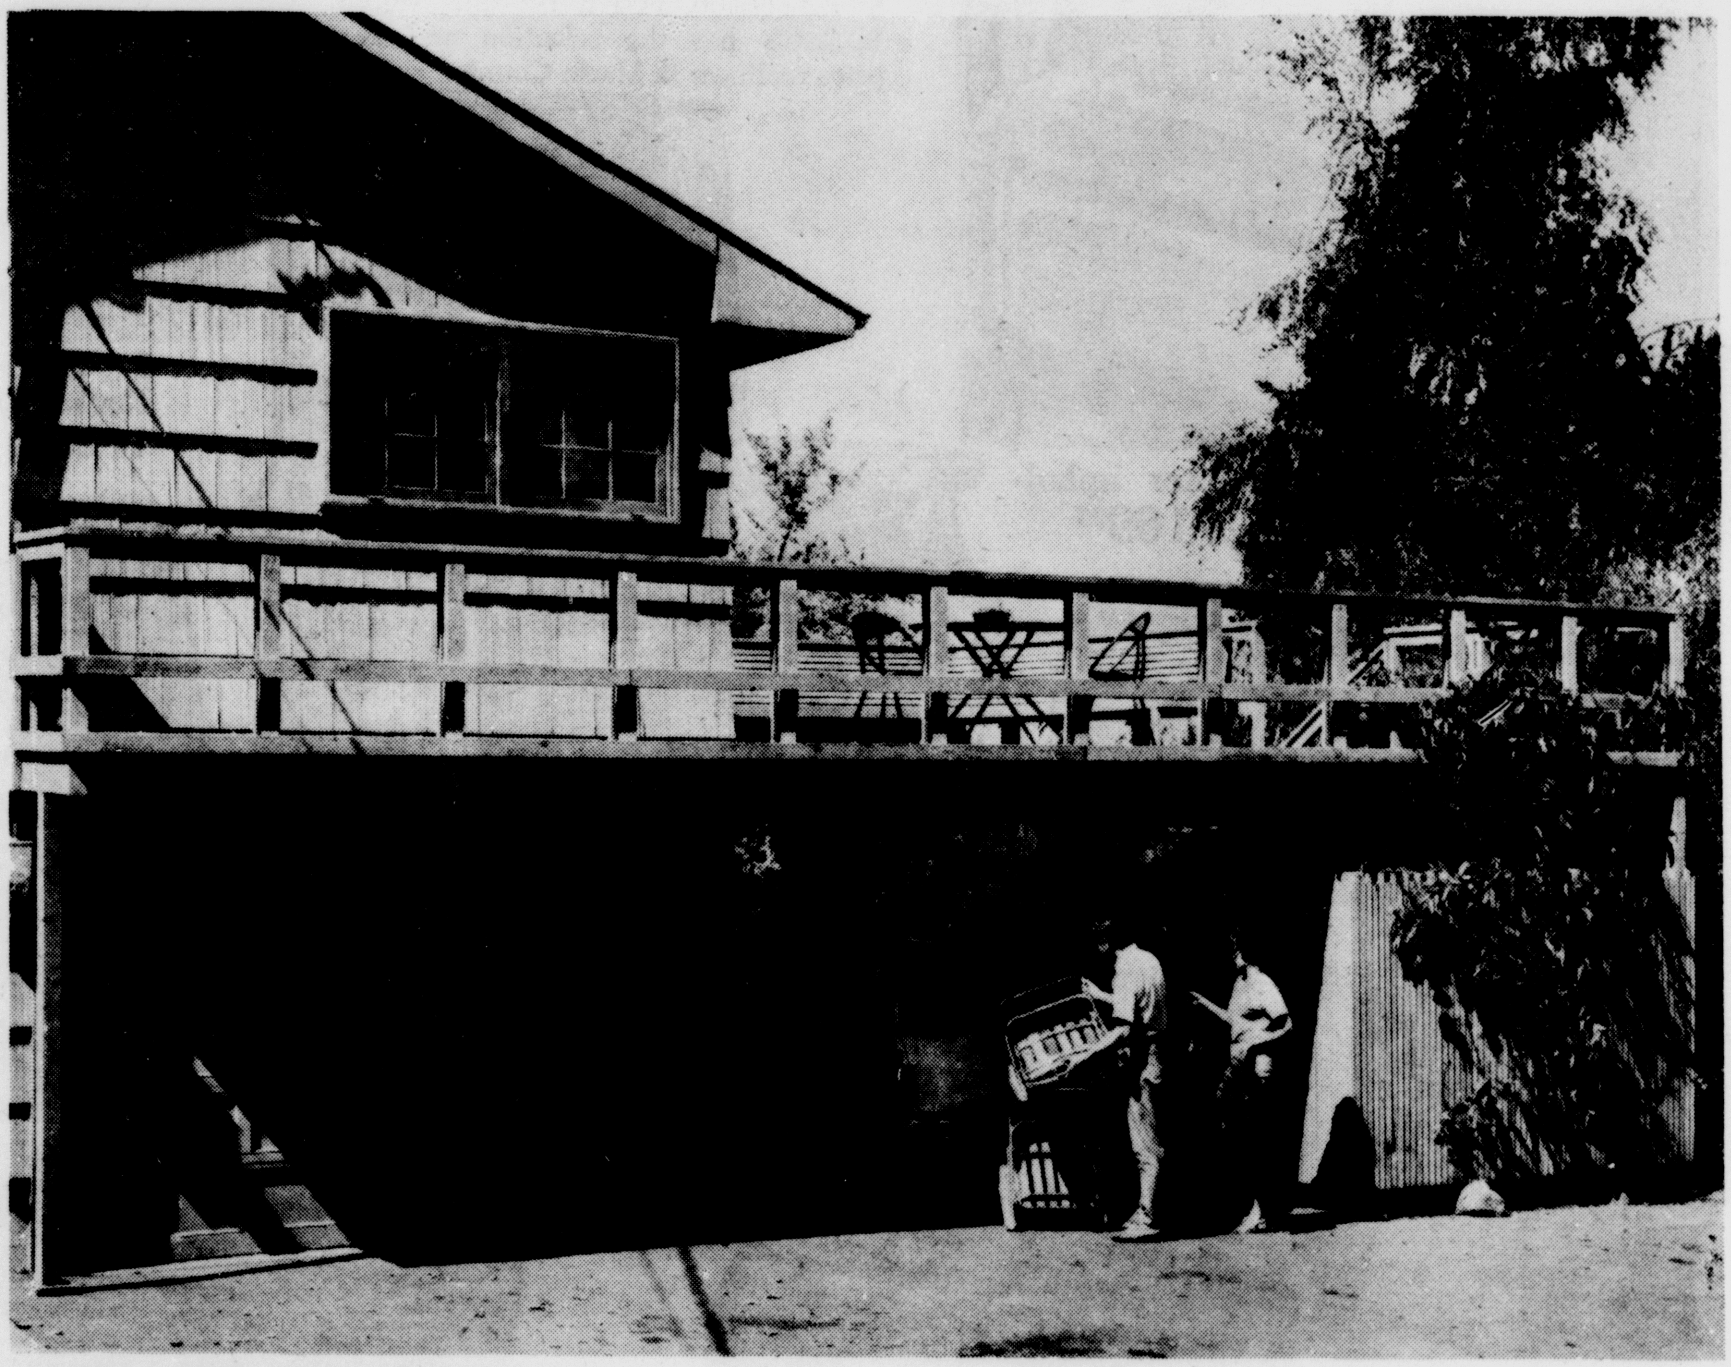

Choose the roof color you want, not the one that happens to be fashionable at the moment. You'll have to live with a roof color for a long time.

DOOR DECOR

THE PLANTER box at left, measuring three-foot-square, is built of two-by-eight and two-by-10-inch western wood to sit neatly in its corner. A trim of two-by-twos provides an added touch of beauty to the entry of the home, and accents its one-by-four-inch siding. Anyone of a number of handsome container plants can be grown in the box to add a touch of fresh greenery to the setting that first greets and impresses your visitors.

(Homemakers Institute drawing)

THIS DECK ADDED as a remodeling project by these home owners also serves as the roof over their new carport. The decking is two-by-four-inch Douglas fir on edge over four-by-six-inch posts, with four-by-eight-inch beams. The railing of double two-by-fours has a bench on two sides with two-by-six-inch seat facing. John Herbst Jr. of Lake Oswego, Ore., was the architect.

There's A Carport Below And Deck Above

An old house with a single garage is no prize on the market these days. Even one-car families are apt to find themselves crawling the walls occasionaly — with hooks and hangers for storing tools, hobby and camping gear above a long, low car.

Back in the time when houses were built with room, and rooms, to spare, autos were small and scarce — and so was leisure time. It's not surprising that an older house with comfortably expansive interior might offer little garage and garden storage.

GETTING TWICE the space for half the money is every improvement-minded man's dream, and a western wood carport imaginatively planned so its flat roof doubles as a deck is a proven way to stretch one project to solve a kindred complaint: lack of outdoor living space.

Ideally, the deck;should adjoin the living-dining-entertaining area at main level, but also be accessible by stairs from the yard.

Building a deck more than six feet off the ground generally requires an expert's hand — and equipment — to erect the understructure and be responsible for its strength and stability.

WITH HEFTY four-by-six-inch Douglas fir posts and four-by-eight-inch beams in place, cutting and nailing closely-fitted deck planks could be finish work to the household handyman. A high performance flexible caulk applied in the joints seals a deck that also roofs the carport and garden storage.

Railings are a requirement of the raised deck, but style depends on surroundings and use. If property lines and plantings supply reasonable privacy, an open railing with double two-by-fours as posts, two-by-four rail and two-by-six flat cap is attractive and secure.

Benches of two-by-four fir on a frame of four-by-four posts may be backed into the rail, with two-by-fours nailed across railing posts for seat backs where screening is called for.

BELOW, AT carport level, storage lockers for mower, garden accessories, or patio furniture can line one or both open walls, using deck posts for support. Doors opening onto both carport and yard double storage convenience.

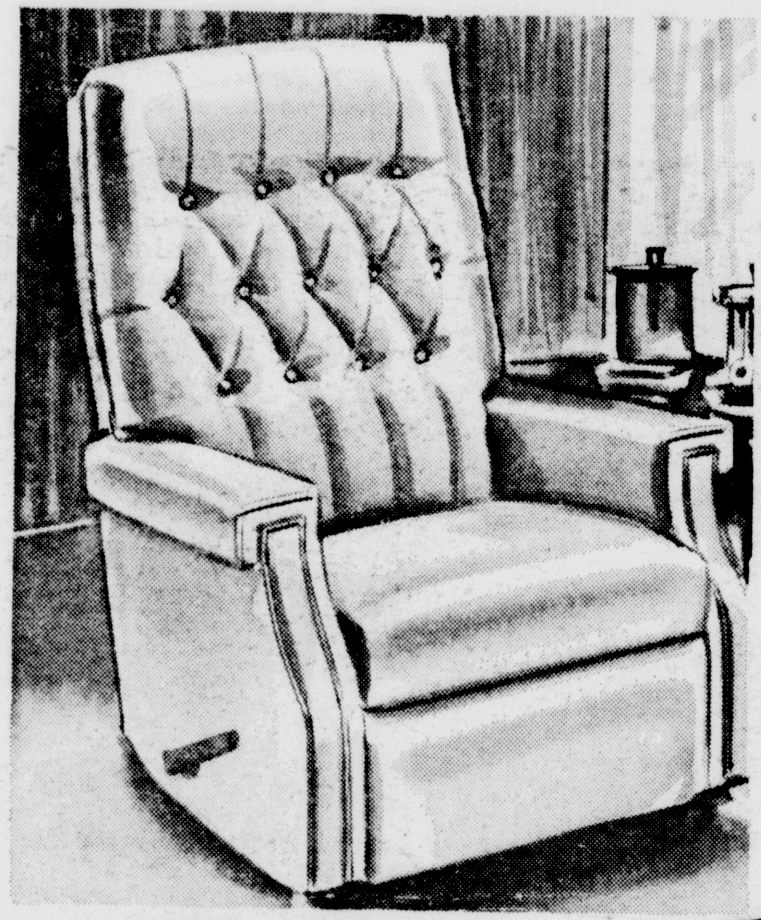

Closed in with fir two-by-twos or two-by-fours spaced slightly, lower storage units harmonize with rail design above, and a bit of matching board trim on adjoining house wall is a natural finishing touch.

Who's The Best-Known Star On TV?

By RODERICK NORDELL

Who's the best-known performer on American television? While you're on tenterhooks about that, consider whether Walter Cronkite is better known than Danny Thomas.

Which prime-time special of the 1971-72 season had the higher audience rating — the Academy Awards or "World Series Baseball"?

Which movie had the higher audience rating — "A Streetcar Named Desire" or "Tarzan and the Jungle Boy"?

How do your TV tastes match with others?

As the new broadcasting season gets into high gear, such earth-shaking questions can be answered with the help of the trade weekly, Variety and its 27th annual radio-TV review and preview.

IT'S LUCILLE Ball who gets a "total familiarity score" of 99 to be designated most familiar TV performer in a survey of viewers 6-years-old and older by Marketing Evaluations Inc., says Variety. Cronkite and Thomas both get 92s, preceded by a flock of 93s such as Dan Blocker and Dean Martin, and followed by such 91s as Jerry Lewis and Michael Landon. (If you say, "Michael who?" you've been watching too much politics.)

Nearest contenders to Miss Ball are Carol Burnett and Johnny Cash (97s), Glen Campbell, Flip Wilson, and Bob Hope (95s), and 94s including Fred McMurray, Irene Ryan, Red Skelton, Sammy Davis Jr., Lorne Greene, Buddy Ebsen, Doris Day, Bill Cosby, Raymond Burr and James Arness.

Variety warns that relative familiarity to viewers does not necessarily mean relative preference or "favorites." The marketing firm's "Q" score indicates viewer preference. One example shows Anthony Quinn and Jack Carter with the same kamiliarity score (63), thougt Quinn has a Q score of 30 and Carter of 9.

THE NIGHTLY Johnny Carson has a familiarity score of 88, just one point above the comparatively seldom seen Richard Burton. Gale Gordon is just as well known (85) as Chet Huntley; Peter Graves (84) as Steve Allen. Harry Reasoner and Orson Welles are neck and neck with 79s — the same score as Audrey Hepburn and Katharine Hepburn, Fess Parker and Paul Newman, and several others.

Who's last? Of 577 performers it's Burr De Benning with a 6. Next higher is Cleavon Little with a 7 and Beatrice Arthur with an 8. It seems safe to say things may change this season, what with Mr. Little's new series, "Temperatures Rising," and Miss Arthur in the title role of "Maude."

The list is full of fillips such as veterans Bob and Ray having the same score (37) as pop heroes like Paul Simon and Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young. And Ann Miller of those old Hollywood musicals getting a 42 to edge out a current star like Robert Redford (41).

AS FOR THE prime-time specials, according to Variety's listings, the Oscar show was supreme last season, with "World Series Baseball" next, followed by "Miss America Pageant," a repeat of "A Charlie Brown Christmas," and five Bob Hope shows among the next seven contenders.

TV's own awards show, the Emmy program, was down in 34th place, comfortably above "Nixon's Return from China," ranking 49, the highest public affairs show on the list.

"Search for the Nle," parts one and two, was at 149 with part three somewhat higher. At 261 was "PGA Golf Preview," right along with "Inquiry: Arms and Security." At 271 "The Nixon Years" was next to last, followed only by "Political: Sen. Jackson" on this list.

AS FOR THOSE theatrical movies brought to TV last season, "Street Car" was 85th in the ratings game, two places below "Tarzan and the Jungle Boy" at 83.

The leader was "West Side Story," parts one and two, followed by "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" and "To Sir, With Love," both containing racial themes. Then comes "How the West Was Won" and World War II in "The Longest Day."

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

One of the season's NBC specials will be "Ziegfeld '73," starring Ann-Margret, which will memorialize the stage musical scene of the 1920s and 1930s when the late Florenz Ziegfeld reigned.

The first of the new "CBS Playhouse 90" dramas this season will be "The Lie" by Ingmar Bergman, noted Swedish film writer-director. An original for television, the play has been presented on Swedish television, but the CBS production will be an entirely new one.

Hughes Sports Network will televise nationally 14 college basketball games from Jan. 6 through March 31. At least one team on each telecast will be from the 10 top-ranked teams as indicated in pre-season polls.

Film star Robert Ryan will make one of his rare television appearances in the ABC dramatization of "The Man Without a Country" next spring. Cliff Robertson has the title role.

Beginning next Feb. 18, NBC will have a series of live Sunday afternoon telecasts of World Championship Tennis matches. They will be concluded in May.

Hollywood film producer M. J. Frankovich and Screen Gems are preparing for the ABC network for the 1973-74 season a weekly half-hour comedy series based on the producer's feature film, "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice."

CBS is preparing for this season a two-hour dramatization of Gay Talese's best-seller, "Honor Thy Father," which deals with the real-life story of the Boann family of underworld repute.

Discussion on "VD Blues"

COMEDIAN Marty Feldman is obviously up to some shifty business when he guest stars on "The New Bill Cosby Show" Monday at 10 p.m. on Channels 5 and 10, and his host looks just a mite suspicious in this skit.

On The Stereo Scene

By WILBUR G. LANDREY

Pablo Casals, at 95, has been a legendary figure for some years as a musician and a man.

There was the great cellist who in 1946 declined to play in public as long as the regime of Generallissimo Francisco Franco lasted in their native Spain.

There was his festival which attracted the best of the world musicians to play with him from 1950 onwards in the French border town of Prades where he was helping refugees.

There is the Casals who since 1957 has made his home in Puerto Rico, where his annual music festival continues, the teacher, the conductor, the composer.

The musicians of the world first went to Prades on the 200th anniversary of the death of Johann Sebastian Bach (1685-1750). It was that which helped induce Casals to play again. And he still begins each day by playing Bach's music.

So it is of more than passing interest to hear him playing Bach's six suites for the cello, recorded between 1936 and 1939, when he was certinly in his musical prime as a performer (Angel mono CB-3786 three discs).

Not a lot of music has been written for the unaccompanied cello. Bach's six suites for cello solo are among the best, although they lack the range of his compositions for the violin.

Before Casals, however, no cellist ever played these suites in their entirety. In that sense he gave them to the world, and these recordings give his performance to the modern public.

THE CAPITOL International series features the music of various peoples and countries. I noted two of the recent releases with interest.

The first is the highlife dance music of West Africa, played by Oscarmore (More! Oscar, More!) Ofori of Ghana (SP-10557). What is authentic and unique about African music are its rich rhythms, changing and complex. The highlife is African pop, joyous, appealing and, for old West Coast Africa hands, nostalgic.

A second Capitol release is from Germany. Vivaldi's Baroque classic "Four Seasons," played in swing by the Gunter Noris trio (SP 10547). Not for the purists, but recognizable and good swing.

RECOMMENDED: Beethoven's trios in E flat and D played by the Grumiaux Trio (Philips 6500 168) — After 1800 Beethoven turned from the string trio to the string quartet, but his early trios contain excellent music here well played by the Grumiaux Trio.

TONY KUBEK, left, and Curt Gowdy will be the broadcasting team that will share the commentating duties when NBC Television covers the 1972 World Series, opening next Saturday in the home ballpark of the National League champions. Games three and four (Oct. 17 and 18) and game five, if necessary, will be played in the evening and colorcast in prime time. NBC-TV began its World Series coverage in 1947 with the New York Yankees and the Brooklyn Dodgers.

CAN RUNAWAY RERUNS BE CURBED

By ED TOWNSEND

Remember that evening TV program you missed last year when guests arrived just as it began? Would you like a second, possibly a third, chance to see the same program, or a chance to see something new in its place?

Members of some Hollywood unions say it is "grossly unfair" to viewers for networks to run programs more than once. It's also unfair to them, they argue: more reruns mean less work, and in some TV unions 50 to 74 per cent of the members are now unemployed.

TV network officials favor giving you a "second chance," sometimes a third, to see the program. They argue also that high production costs today make reruns a necessity: it costs a lot less to rerun a program than to pay people to make a new one.

Entertainment unions, backed by the AFL-CIO, have called on the government to limit television network reruns on prime time.

Through the federation's executive council, the unions ask that "a glut of reruns" be limited in the future to no more than 25 per cent of total prime time hours annually, about half as many as now.

STOP (Save Television's Original Programming) complains that the reuse of old programs "has escalated to epidemic proportions" until even in prime time — from 8 to 11 p.m. — "reruns often make up more than 50 per cent of all television offerings."

Spokesmen for the TV networks concede that about 45 per cent of prime time over a year's period is devoted to reruns, for the most part during summer months. But, they say, if they are required to reduce reruns, they will be forced to use less expensive forms of programming — less elaborate shows. Such a move could result in even less jobs.

STOP, sponsored by the Film and Television Coordinating Committee of entertainment industry unions and guilds, has argued in a 76-page brief to the Federal Communications Commission that the networks' rerun policy has "reduced job opportunities catastrophically."

The labor group has the backing of California's Gov. Ronald Reagan and Republican Reps. Barry Goldwater, Jr., and Alphonzo Bell. More important, it has picked up strong support from the White House.

President Richard Nixon has told Hollywood unions that he has instructed Clay T. Whitehead, director of the White House Office of Telecommunications Policy, to look into the situation and to recommend whatever remedies might be necessary.

The President wrote to John Gavin, president of the Screen Actors Guild, "that the increasing number of reruns . . . constitutes an economic threat to the talented men and women in the American film industry."

The President says that Mr. Whitehead will try to work with networks for a voluntary reduction in the future use of reruns. Otherwise, he says, the government "will explore whatever regulatory recommendations are in order" to require more original programming.

Whitehead followed up the President's action in an appeal — or warning — to television networks. Conceding that the rerun problem is complicated, he suggested that it is not insurmountable and that consideration should be given to a solution quickly.
